

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univocal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky:

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Book of Revelation.

Part VIII.

The Son of Man in His Least and Greatest Forms ; Explanation of the White Hairs and Flaming Eyes ; the Brazen Feet and Voice of the Waters.

And his head and his hairs white as white wool, as snow ; and his eyes as a flame of fire. Rev. i: 14. (From the Original Greek).

THE REVELATOR describes the Son of man, not only in his least form, as an individual and personal being, but as the universal or Grand Man. As the Grand Man, the head implies the Sons of God, for the Order of Melchizedek, the firstfruits unto God and the Lamb, constitutes the offspring of the Lord Jesus. These firstfruits are the product of His life; he is multiplied and resurrected in them, and they are precisely what he is; namely, the firstfruits of the resurrection. The head implies the all of life, not as to the spiritual, but as to the natural degree, for the all of life does not exist except in the natural. Those who are in the natural head of the Grand Man are in the Lord's natural life: for as the Lord, the Son of God, was made perfect in his external and material life, so the Sons of God—produced from him as their Father, they being his Sons—will become perfect in their sonship, which is also in their natural life. The whiteness of the head signifies the chastity of these offspring of the Lord God in their natural and bodily lives.

His hairs are also white like wool. It must be remembered that the Lord Jesus was called the Lamb of God; he was also called the Lion of the tribe of Judah. He is called the Lamb by virtue of certain principles, and the Lion by virtue of other principles; he is the head of the serpent by virtue of still other principles. Because he is the Lamb of God, the hairs of his head are referred to as like wool. As the Lamb of God, the Lord Jesus was the begetter of life in his offspring. The Sons of God (who comprise the firstfruits of the resurrection, at the end of the age) will stand out in the flesh, for they will be the offspring of the Lord Jesus, like Jesus the Lord, their Father, and his life is in them. They constitute the ultimates of his powers of regeneration. As the hairs of the head constitute the cast off elements and ultimates of the activities of the head, so the natural body of the resurrection comprises the part of life to be cast off at the theocrasis and final absorption of the Sons of God. That the hairs are white like wool, signifies that the begetting forces are no longer employed in natural generation; that the desires are made chaste, and that the intellect and affections are devoted to the things and uses of the arch-natural life.

The Lord as the Lamb of God, signifies the begetting power of God, and wool is the ultimate of that power. When the Sons of God mature, they are the light of the body; and as the light of the body is the eye, and as there are many Sons of God, there will be many eyes—for every Son of God is an eye. They will be as a flame of fire, because they enter into their invisible domain as the final fruits of regeneration, through a flame which is like that in which Elijah ascended, and likewise the Lord Jesus.

Contrary to what the modern church teaches, the Lord was consumed in a flame. His body was resolved to energy—the energy called the Holy Spirit. He constituted the central point of the anthropotic cosmos, and his theocrasis—a combustion in which his physical body was consumed—corresponded to the combustion which obtains at the very focal point of the alchemico-organic (physical) cosmos. The transmission of his life, imparted to the primitive church, will be manifest as a general conflagration at the end of the dispensation now closing. The Lord Christ will have multiplied his life in men; as he was the eye, and therefore the light of the body, his life multiplied in mankind will constitute many eyes; and their general conflagration is the flame of fire in which the dispensation culminates.

And his feet like to fine white brass as in a furnace; and his voice as the voice of many waters. Rev. i: 15. The Sons of God not only constitute the feet (extremity) of the dispensation, but the divine natural things of life. That which is the outermost of being, as related to things inner and innermost, comprises the feet. They are like fine white brass, because brass is the union of two metals. The Sons of God are the union of truth and good (silver and gold are substances which symbolize truth and good), and also of things natural and things spiritual. They are the divine spiritual and the divine natural men. It is for this reason that His feet are like fine white (chaste) brass as in a furnace, because they come from the furnace.

The Sons of God at the end of the age will be the product of the application of the science of life, through the Messenger of the Covenant. They are the sons of conjunction, that is, the sons of Levi, the product of the application of the antitypical Levitical priestly office, the product of sacrifice. They will be manifest as the product of the office of Elijah the prophet. "For behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly [this includes all that live or exist, for all are wicked, but those who confess and repent will get into this fire of purification], shall be as stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." This fire is the furnace where His feet are purified, and whence they come as fine white brass.

*"And his voice [the product of the Word, Logos, from legein, to speak] as the voice of many waters."* "The waters which thou sawest * * * are multitudes, peoples, nations, and tongues." It is the voice of God, the voice of the Son of God made manifest in the product of his planting, the planting of the Son of God. Let it be understood that the Lord Jesus, who was the Son of God, had within him the Father; that he was the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. This Son was planted at the beginning of the dispensation, and matures as the many Sons of God at the end of the dispensation. These Sons of God constitute the voice of God, that is, the word of God expressed in the multitude as the sound of many waters.

"And having in his right hand seven stars; and out of his mouth a sharp broad sword, two-mouthed, proceeding; and his appearance as the sun shining in his strength." Rev. i: 16. The right hand of God is his power. As the seven stars are seven angels clothed with divine authority and power, they are in His right hand. The seven divine Messianic manifestations of the past, are the seven angelic manifestations of Deity. At the end of the age they are involved in one, as the five preceding the Lord Jesus were involved in the sixth, the Lord himself, this one at the end of the age will include the prior six, hence in the highest sense he will constitute the seven angels; but in the broader sense, the seven angels are the seven churches, for they are each in the form of a man.

"Out of his mouth" means literally, the resurrection, for it is from the resurrection that the Word of God proceeds. It is a sharp two-mouthed sword, because it includes both the letter and the spirit of the Logos. "The letter killeth;" this is the killing edge of the sword. There can be no immortality until the old man is made dead. This death must be accomplished by the letter of the Word (not the Bible, but the Logos), which killeth. When the old man is killed by the letter, then the spirit can make alive; hence the importance of the true science of the Word, the science being its letter. The Sons of God will be the light, the sun of the world; for this reason His appearance is as the "sun shining in his strength."

It is a poor general who yields defeat to the first repulse; and they are poor soldiers who will not follow their leader into a renewal of attack because of repulse in the first, second, or third engagement. Whosoever regards earthly ties of more value than this cause is not worthy of the cause; and whosoever holds the ties engendered by the processes of sin as more sacred than such as can bind men to God, cannot have part in the resurrection to Life.

In the time of the war there are many no doubt who, actuated by motives of patriotism, are willing to sacrifice home, family, and associations, and great honors are awarded those so imbued with the love of country that they would sacrifice home and life, if necessary, to save the government from disruption. The love of God is greater than the love of country, and as a theory is so regarded by the church and the world; but practically it is a farce.

Enthronement of the Gold Power.

Legislation in Favor of the Wealthy and Against Interests of the Masses; the Gold Power Controls Until the Final Crisis of the Age.

THERE ARE EIGHTY MILLIONS of population under the direction of the Government of the United States, and subject to its financial and commercial laws. A majority of these people are producers of the wealth of the nation, whether in the hands of the Government, or in the coffers of the multimillionaires of the country. Shall our legislation be controlled by the people, in the interests of the masses and for the benefit of the wealth producer, or exclusively for the robber barons, multimillionaires, corporations, the bloated bondholders, and the bankers of the world? There is no question but that the laws are made in the interests of the rich, because the rich—if not the actual legislators—constitute the controlling power in all our law-making departments; and our experience and observation have taught us that the rich not only despise the poor, but when in power they will invariably legislate in their own interests and in direct opposition to the welfare of the wealth-producer.

We have had four years of republican prosperity, with a prospect of four years more of the same kind of happiness to the man who has the "full dinner pail"—upon which the grocer has the first unpaid claim. It is said that there are more than four hundred millions of dollars in the treasury of the United States (with which to build a greater navy, and to develop resources for the protection of the banker interests of the world, pre-eminently, Lombard street); but are these millions adding to the happiness of our people? What is the connection between these millions and the working-man? Has the business of the small dealer improved under the republican regime? Has there been an increase in the value of real estate?—for this is the true index to a genuine or a fictitious prosperity. Are the farmers and laboring masses reaping the benefits of our boasted prosperity, and have the wages of the working and clerical masses advanced in proportion to the rise in the Standard Oil stocks?

The gold power seated on the throne of dominion, has had an endorsement by the people of the United States. The democratic issue of 1900, "Teddy shot a defenseless and fleeing Spaniard in the back," has so wrought upon the American impulse as to create a "landslide" for the republican party, which demonstrates not only the military genius of the century, but especially of the American mind toward that only true greatness characterized in the right of might, the fundamental principle of the competitive and military tendency of the age.

The fact that we owe a few billions of dollars and have guaranteed the payment of these billions to the bondholders in gold, while conscious that there is not gold enough in the world to meet this obligation imposed upon us by the brokers of Lombard st., has not appalled the voters of the American public. The American people have yet to learn that it is easier to borrow than to pay. The millionaires who determine our legislation, have but one purpose in forcing the gold standard upon the governments of the world; that purpose is to reduce the standard to the minimum, that it may increase its power to demand interest to the maximum. These bondholders and money-lenders prefer to loan their money to governments than to individuals or corporations, and especially when they know they can and do control all legislation in their own interests. When Standard Oil stock jumps up a few points because of the result of the election, and by virtue of this fact Rockefeller puts twenty millions of dollars in his vest pocket, it is because the price of gold has increased proportionally, and the demand upon the wealth-producer is proportionately greater, for he fills the coffers of the millionaires and foots all their bills.

Our readers must not infer that because we oppose the gold standard or "sound money" idea, as the robber trusts, bankers, and brokers of the world delight in calling the millionaire's money god, that we are in love with the democratic party and bimetallism. If it were possible for a correct financial system to obtain under the competitive system, which means a simple process of regulating the exchange of products,—for this is all that money, as it is called, purports to accomplish,—it could be done easily and directly without any complications through which the rich can gull the poor and compel them to yield all their substance to increase the power of the wage-slave driver, for the oppression of the "common people."

The gold in the money markets of the world is watered stock; it is a fictitious representation of wealth. The valuation set upon it is not intrinsic; it is not even performing the uses of money. If the governments of the world should agree to remove their stamps from gold, it would not be even a "fifty-cent dollar." Its monetary power being destroyed, its demand as a commodity of commerce would be limited to its value as essential to the arts. If gold were demonetized it would be comparatively valueless. The money kings will not admit this, but the people can and will be educated to the truth of the matter; and when this is accomplished, the bottom will fall out of the millionaire's tub, and it will become the bottomless pit into which he, the money lord, will fall.

If a man who is regarded financially sound wishes to negotiate a transaction, he gives his note on a cheap piece of paper. This is backed by his credit, predicated upon the basis of his wealth. It is a simple process, direct from the debtor to the creditor. This note is negotiable. If a man is willing to take my paper, which is merely employed as a convenience for transactions in the exchange of the products of labor, or labor itself, I would be a fool to volunteer to depreciate my credit by agreeing to purchase an amount of gold equal to the transaction, and placing it in my safe as security for a payment which my credit had already guaranteed.

Our nation is a man. It is the nation as one man which gives its promise in any transaction. Our ability to pay what we promise resides in the inexhaustible resources of the country, with the industrial possibilities of eighty millions of civilized people. Is this a good guarantee for the delivery of our goods? If not, let us put our stamp on gold that we do not own, on the gold we borrow and upon which we pay interest; let us by this process increase its valuation 90 per cent—which we do by endorsing the gold standard throughout the world; let us pay this 90 per cent on the watered stock in gold which we, through our indifference toward the money power, have allowed that power to usurp. This is the power behind the throne—the power which dictates our laws; the power which says to our legislators: “We must enslave the masses by some process which we can absolutely control; help us in our determination to steal the products of labor and make slaves of men; help us to reduce eighty millions of boasting freemen to the serfdom of the bond-age! Demonetize your paper money, which the people through your instrumentality can issue without limitation, and which is beyond our control; then demonetize silver; reduce the medium of exchange to the gold standard, and by this means make of it a thing to be desired above all things, thus taking away from it its function as money, and placing in our hands the instrument for their destruction!”

The American people never had so perfect a medium of exchange as when they possessed the financial system which was good enough for the greatest emergency through which they have ever passed. It was too good for the people, but death to the bondholder and the Shylock broker. Do we advocate a return to greenbackism, under the competitive system? No; the gold power has come to stay until the crack of doom, and we can assure our readers that the crisis is not to be long delayed. September 22, 1899, we wrote as follows for THE FLAMING SWORD of that date:

“It will be remembered by the readers of THE FLAMING SWORD, that during the last national campaign we predicted the success of the gold standard party, on the ground that the golden calf would be elevated to the sanctuary of the modern soul, to the altitude of the highest human love—the love of money. This prediction we predicated upon the basis that as the golden calf set up in the most holy place in the reign of Manasseh, king of Judah, was the sign (in type) for the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem, so the exaltation of the modern god, Moloch, the golden calf in antitype, must occupy the same exalted place in the hearts of the people before the vengeance of God could be displayed in the overthrow of the evils now afflicting society.”

We further said: “Before us as we write is the San Francisco Examiner, from which we quote the following:”

The American Bankers' Association puts itself on record unequivocally in favor of the gold standard today, by adopting a resolution, the meaning of which nobody can mistake. That action, taken in connection with the placing of Colonel Myron T. Herrick, President McKinley's close friend, in line for the Presidency of the association in 1901, made it quite a day for the National Administration. The adoption of the gold standard resolution was not, perhaps, a surprise. The association is a sound money body from end to end. Heretofore, all attempts to induce the association to take any action which might be regarded as of a political character have failed; but today the view was taken that the money question was one which ought to be elevated above politics. So when the resolution was brought forward, the association forgot its historic rule and voted for the declaration enthusiastically and unanimously. The resolution in full follows: “The bankers of the United States most earnestly recommend that the Congress of the United States at its next session enact a law to more forcibly and unequivocally establish the gold standard measure of all values in the United States; that all obligations of the Government, and all paper money, including circulating notes of national banks, shall be redeemed in gold coin, and that the legal tender notes of the United States, when paid into the Treasury, shall not be reissued except upon the deposit of an equivalent amount in gold coin.”

“While it is a fact that the republican party went before the people with the sop, to put forth its best endeavors to insure bimetallism to the United States, it was never the intention of the oligarchy—in whose interests the republican party was run—to fulfil the pledge. It was never the purpose of the leaders of the republican party to fulfil the pledge made to the people, nor did many of the 7,000,000 republican voters give any consideration as to whether the single standard or bimetallism was the preferable thing. The efforts of the money power in the expenditure of millions of dollars to insure an administration which they could manipulate in the interests of the money lenders of the world, succeeded in accomplishing satisfactory results to that power. The seven millions of people who were in favor of the gold standard, or indifferent as to the policy of the republican party, but who would follow it though it went straight to perdition, are enthusiastic over the one great thing that the republican party has accomplished—the destruction of Spanish dominion in America. The last Administration of the democratic party lost the opportunity of a generation; the republican party seized it, and the hearts of the American people pulsate in unison over the achievement. The enthusiasm will not subside before another election.”

How well we understood the situation, the results of the last election can determine. We will not return to a monetary system in the interests of the common people. The money power will hold the reins until the crash comes. It will be the great battle of Gog and Magog. The people have set up the golden god; it is the calf of their desires and their ambitions. The gold god will reign to the end—and the time is short.

Manifestation of Deity in Personality.

The Revelation of God in His Natural Expression of Life and Truth; the Religion of the Coming Brotherhood; the Messiah and His Message.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

"THY WILL BE DONE in earth," is an expression of prayer taught the primitive Christian church by its Deific Head; and it exemplifies the religious spirit which must animate any movement that successfully establishes organic social righteousness in earth. An absolute knowledge of the will of God is certainly essential to the doing of it. The source of the derivation of such knowledge is necessarily its primary possessor—a primary being of knowable form and functions with which to make himself known as such source to all having derived form and function, and possessing a derived existence.

Humanity is called upon by the voice of every language of thought to know its Creator, its origin, and its destiny. God must be personal if he is universal Cause, for there is naught in effect which is not primarily in cause. He must also be related as center to circumference—every circumference being dependent upon a center of whose radiations it is a defined limit, from which they reflect for perpetuity through reproduction from the first Cause. The central personality of Deity is the involution of all things from which proceeds all evolution, all being in dependence upon the One for their reunion in the divine Unity.

Time extends in cycles or dispensations of order, and each has a primary central personal cause—the age-lasting order being the evolved language of its primary Word. The personal involution of a cosmos or order is therefore its legitimate Hero, whose will must be done in earth in order that whatsoever he involves may be evolved during his dispensation. Such an evolution redounds to his glory and honor, and to the ultimate blessing of his creation—for whom he lives, moves, and has his being. The age-lasting life of a vidual existence in the generation of a Word, depends entirely upon knowing the God of his age, and upon doing his will. In the supreme sense, no one can do the will of God but God; therefore God must be in whoever would do his will; and as a servant of the Most High, he must be as clay in the hands of the potter. God only can make himself known, and can be known only by those whom he has prepared to receive him by a previous manifestation and impartation of himself in a certain degree.

Nineteen centuries ago the true Christian Deity, the Lord Jesus—the manifest Will of God, the product of the laws of divine being fulfilled—gave himself for the life of the order or church prepared by evolution from the God of Abraham to receive him. Paul, an Apostle of that order, declared that "of his own will begot he us." The will of this Deific Hero was, that men should come to the knowledge of his God, Eloah-Jehovah, the unity of divine love and wisdom, within him. The science of the universe, the evolution of himself, alone can reveal this. The selfhood He imparted to the church prepared to receive him, was that of the supreme true lover of divine wisdom, who alone rightly estimates the value of true science.

Science is the servant of the true religion it reveals, the true religion being the omnipotent rebinding of the love of God manifest in his causative personality. To know God through the applied science of his righteousness, is life eternal. To know Him scientifically is to know him in the ultimates of his being, as cause and effect personified, that he may be personally known and loved, and his personality so absorbed that a conjunctive unity of the divine person with that of his worshipers may result, and his divine humanity be multiplied. This multiplication constitutes his divine kingdom of many Sons in the earth.

Koreshans are asked why so much emphasis is laid upon the law of polarization, and the personality of Deity in the movement they represent. Many harmonious replies may be given. We know that this world or age has a harvest resulting from the planting of that holy Seed—the Lord's body, which must be ripened and prepared for the last supper of the great God; ripened for immortality and eternal life by the promised Sun of Righteousness. It is God's declared will that men should know him; and He but obeys the laws of revelation when he makes such knowledge possible by personally revealing himself, that he may be personally known, supremely loved, and implicitly obeyed. He comes, therefore, as the one Scientist who knows to do the will of God because God is in him.

The ultimate manifestation of Deity on the plane of our common humanity, is referred to by the prophetic spirit, as the presence of the Assyrian, or the Scientific reasoner, able to disclose to the world the mysteries of Godliness. This divine service of the Most High to humanity is for the purpose of saving sinners from their sins, by delivering them from the powers of darkness. With their understanding opened, they are no longer mystified by what are called the problems of life, nor left to speculate as to their origin and destiny; for they are made fully aware of the science of the law, through obedience to which the Lord Jesus attained that life and immortality brought to light by his manifestation.

It is certainly a rational conception that the Deity, the central source of all mentality, becomes centrally personified and related to his dependent humanity in ways most efficient, to result in its approach to and conjunctive unity with Him. Such a conception is a primary one in the foundations of Koreshanity; and it is proclaimed as a fundamental doctrine that the Almighty Eloah, the God of Jehovah, known to the world as Jesus of Nazareth, has entered into conjunctive unity at the close of the age with a man of our common humanity, born in mortality like ourselves, to make of him a new Deific Name—a Name demonstrating the transforming powers of the mind of God which renews the life of all things. This "New Name" or personality to be in manifest conjunction with the centralization of the divine mental energies at this epoch, was declared centuries ago by the prophet to be one named CYRUS or KORESH. It is a fact that a man possessing this name has appeared in humanity, in due season, as Prophet, Priest, and King, to minister to such as are prepared to receive his message.

As all the begotten of the will of God intuitively desire to grow into knowledge of that will until they become men in Christ, perfect in wisdom and understanding, they are looking for the coming of One who knows, and are ready to recognize him as the name or personality of their life source, and as the possessor of the science of their God—unified wisdom and love. Koreshanity is naught without the accepted Unit of its being, its Hero, whom to know aright means for the Koreshan the attainment of immortality and life—age-lasting life in the immortal, incorruptible flesh of Jehovah, and eternal life.

Many may be enthusiastic about the Koreshan system of Cosmogony, or its system of Equitable Commerce, and co-operative industry; we are glad to have them so, but if they find no place in their thoughts and in their hearts for the Source of Koreshanity, in its personal manifestation, they are still without the knowledge of the way of life. Koreshanity is the religion of the one kingdom in earth in which the will of the Lord God will be done; for KORESH is the one man who has a true scientific understanding of that will, to declare to the people prepared as the fruitage of this age, to do it. This prepared people is chosen of God to enter into that supreme ultimate trust and combine—the Social Theocracy of the God kingdom.

The God-men are the only ones in any divine sense brothers, and are the only men who will ever enter into and demonstrate the power and glory of the Brotherhood instituted by that elder Brother of the whole House of Israel—the Lion of the tribe of Judah. Of this brotherhood Joseph was promised the chief rulership; and the name of the anointed Shepherd and Stone of Israel, is CYRUS. This Shepherd King, whose Bride is the New Jerusalem, High Priestess of the Sun of Science, is now present in this land of more than Egyptian darkness, which he will illumine with that greater light of the Lord's day, the Sun of Righteousness—true science of Love divine, all love excelling,

Joy of heaven to earth come down.

The law of divine love is fulfilled in the performance of use to the neighbor, the neighbor being the coworker in Christ, the true Vine, dwelling in the unity of the communistic fellowship typified by the fig-tree—the unity or binding power of the fellowship being the "one Lord, one faith, and one baptism." The Lord's Anointed, the Messiah of this age, is the storehouse of the divine love and wisdom with which this world is to be baptized. We are exhorted to send all our tithes to the Lord's storehouse if we would receive the blessing of the baptism due to be poured out, that the knowledge of the Lord may fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. The coming baptism is to bring all who seek the Lord of the harvest of this age, into conjunctive unity with the God of the world to come, and into the glory that excelleth—the glory of all known preceding worlds.

"When Christ who is our life shall appear, we shall appear with him in glory." Glory is the radiance of light. Divine light is true science, from the unity of wisdom and love, which in its harvest glory is manifest in the Sons of God, creators of eternal life, without beginning of days or end of years, and giving age-lasting joy to the winners of every Christos, who is the perpetuator of God in humanity and humanity in God. The Christos or Messiah is the one altogether lovely, production of each age, and most precious to all who believe. Without him we are nothing; with him we may become as Gods knowing good and evil, may eat of the Tree of Life, which produces the fruit of the God kingdom, and with him be translated to the throne of God.

If any man glory, let him glory in the Lord, for his is the glory that excelleth. Koreshans should be animated by the deepest reverence for him whom they regard as the Ripener and Reaper of the fruit of the Tree of Life, because he gives to the world the science of the truth, the Light of the world to come, which quickens the earth to newness of life—the love of God.

The Lord Jesus, the incarnate God, that is, God in the flesh, came into the world not to save man in the violation of law, or by faith without the works of the law, but by faith in the works of the law. He came to put life into man—God's life—that man might be able to keep the law. No being in the universe can keep the law but God. The law is "infinite," eternal, and divine. Man will keep it when he is "infinite," eternal, and divine, or when God is in him as completely as he was in Jesus the Christ.

The law of appropriation or eating is, that the substance eaten is transformed to the body making the appropriation. The church which ate the body and drank the blood of the Lord (through his theocrasis) was a sinful church, and was not to come into life until raised up at the last day, or end of the aion; that is, dispensation or age. The power that was to raise up, was the life of God, which the church, as the Grand Man, or the sinful body of Christ, has eaten.

Men may talk of the intolerance of a people and a religion urging the execution of the Lord of Glory in the beginning of the Christian age; but it bears no comparison to the ripened religious ignorance, bigotry, poisonous venom, and intolerance of today.

THE UNIVERSE is the great system of existence; it is the great complex world comprising all the various kingdoms or planes of life, from the mineral to the divine. The machinery of the universe is intricate; every principle of mechanics, of physics, and of applied electricity, is utilized in speeding the sun in his orbit, in impulsing the planets in their paths, and moving the stars in their courses. The gigantic battery—the immense dynamo, generates the forces which sweep the seas, which warm the earth, which stimulate the plant, and which invigorate man. Men of all ages have known of these wonders; but they have not always been able to penetrate the veil of mystery which precludes views, by curious eyes, of the workings of the subtle energies in every form of life. There has never been a darker period in the intellectual world than that which now envelops humanity. The world is full of mystery; life is not understood; God is unknown—yet the universe now contains all that man has ever known, all that God has ever conceived; and it constitutes the field of future exploration and exploitation. God and his universe are always revealed together, for the Creator himself is manifest in the universe in its least form, the microcosm—the perfect Man. Koreshanity is the uncovering of the form of the earth, the unveiling of the tabernacle of heaven; it exposes the character of man, and discovers God as the shining Sun of the world of humanity. We take the keys of Alchemy and pass with ease from department to department of human knowledge; with the eye of Science we may explore the smallest cell and the great shell; we may connect, in our logic, the molecule and the man. The universe is the great laboratory of life. The great Alchemist takes the crudest substances from the bowels of the earth and puts them through millions of transformations and complex distillations, until they are ready to be absorbed into the very consciousness of Deity. The great world with all its resources, contributes to the life of man and to the luxury of the Gods. Thousands of years ago the knowledge of Universology covered the earth as the great intellectual Light of the world. Humanity was in the form of the cosmos, with its anthropotic solar sphere inhabited by Solar Men. In the great declension, the breaking-up of the great ages of light, the science of cosmogony was lost; and that which remained were but traditions of the teachings of the Solar Men and their relation to the universe of humanity. It was but natural that the world, when it presumes to occupy the position and altitude of the central Mind, should pervert the truth and see through eyes of illusion. When man began to reason again, how inevitable, in his ignorance, was the conclusion that the earth was the center of the universe—for had not the Solar Man stood at the center? This was the first conception that the earth is convex—it was a perversion, a fallacy; but it was the starting-point of that series of conclusions which ultimated in the Ptolemaic system of astronomy—and it was but a step from the system of Ptolemy to the gigantic fallacies of Copernicus, Kepler, and Newton!

We are frequently called upon to answer the objection made to the Koreshan Geodetic Survey in 1897, that it would be impossible to make adjustments so accurately as to eliminate an angle of .000082 of an inch, which is supposed by some to be the angle of deviation from a true rectiline, of each twelve-foot section of our apparatus, necessary to follow the curvature of the earth. The minute angle enters into the objection against our processes of leveling the first section at the beginning of the line of survey as well. We always enjoy driving our critics into the position of inconsistency—they have never urged such objections against the work of the astronomer. The axis of an astronomer's meridian circle is supposed to be level—at least, the bubble in the spirit-level attached is so sensitive as to move if the axis is thrown out of level .000001 of an inch; and this is less by 82 times, than the figures which constitute the basis of the frequent objection to our survey. But for a marvel of accuracy, observe the astronomer measure the parallax of a star. The annual parallax of Polaris is $0''.52$; and the astronomer is supposed to be able, by means of his transit instrument or meridian circle, not over 6 feet in length, with a spider-lined reticle not over three inches from the eye, to measure the minute angle of $0''.52$ at the supposed distance of 375,000,000,000,000 miles; and yet it is claimed that we cannot extend a mechanical straight line four miles in length, for the purpose of testing the contour of the earth's surface! This would be equal, if the Copernican system were true, to measuring with the same apparatus, an angle of 15 inches at the distance of 100 miles; .15 of an inch at the distance of one mile; or to measuring by any process, an angle of .00034 of an inch at the distance of 12 feet, or .000028 of an inch one foot away, or .000009 of an inch 3 inches from the eye—the space between the eye and the reticle of the meridian circle. This last requires 9 times greater accuracy than that necessary to eliminate an angle of .000082 of an inch! The attempt to measure the distance of a star 375,000,000,000,000 miles away, from the basis of the supposed diameter of the earth's orbit—185,000,000 miles—is equal to attempting to measure the distance, by triangulation, of an object 750 miles away, from a base line only 2 feet in length; that is, the sides of the parallactic triangle would be 2,000,000 times longer than the length of the base—and yet the astronomer claims that more wonderful feats and still greater accuracy are possible!

When Christendom boasts of its civilization, it conceals the facts of the existence of gigantic evils and of the alarming increase of crime. Western savagery, American barbarism, is expressing itself. Inhumanity is manifest; the love of vengeance is in the human heart; lawlessness prevails in the civilized United States, and the horrors of the Inquisition are repeated. America has a race question, the crimes of Negroes to deal with; but there is a greater proportion of white criminals to the million than blacks. One Negro in Colorado attacked and murdered a helpless twelve-year-old girl; but a heartless, lawless mob of a thousand citizens became parties to the crime of slowly torturing the Negro to death—of burning him at the stake; and the "civilized press" incited the mob to the deed! The sheriff as well as the governor of the state of Colorado, it is said, virtually delivered the criminal into the hands of his torturers; millions of people sanctioned the work of savagery,—lynchers are rarely prosecuted. This is but a single instance out of hundreds where irresponsible mobs "take the law into their own hands" and illegally execute criminals because they are Negroes. No less criminal are thousands of proceedings throughout the civilized world. Human life is cheap—it matters not to the modern mind how many lives are submerged beneath the waves of the stormy sea of humanity. With barbarism rampant; with the thousands of agencies of destruction of life; and with all the factors of oppression and instruments of unhappiness, the civilized world rushes forward to the time of revolution. The church steeples have cast their shadows over the world; and in the shades of perverted religion the criminal lurks to strike down his fellows—yet it is said that humanity is one great brotherhood!

Newton was an astronomer and mathematician; and he was a theologian who endeavored to interpret prophecy. He enlarged on the Copernican system of astronomy; but when he came to interpret the book of Daniel the Prophet, modern astronomy failed him, and he was compelled to use the hollow globe, with its central sun, as the basis of his interpretations; he held that the language of the prophets was taken "from the analogy between the world natural, and an empire or kingdom considered as a world politic." The Sphinx thus reviews the conclusions of Newton concerning prophecy: "The heavens and the things therein representing thrones and dynasties; the earth and the things therein, the inferior people; and the lowest parts of the earth, the most miserable of people. The sun is put for the whole race of kings, the moon for the body of the common people, and the stars for subordinate princes and rulers. In the earth the dry land and the waters are put for the people of the several nations." A king is the center of his kingdom; a king is represented by the sun. From the king, from the center, the radial lines extend to the body of the common people—to the circumference, the moon, the shell with its dry land and water; and between the king and the people are the subordinate princes and rulers, as the stars are between the central sun and the earth. This is the Cellular Cosmogony; it is the Koreshan form of government, the form of the divine Kingdom, concerning which Newton wrote. If the Copernican or Newtonian system of astronomy was worth anything—if it were true, it might have been taken as a scientific basis of Newton's interpretation of prophecy; but he could not make his own astronomical conclusions fit any idea of the divine Kingdom!

In 1897 we surveyed a straight line on the Gulf coast of Florida, for the purpose of proving that the surface of the Gulf is concave; we might have taken the word gulf itself and demonstrated the concavity of that great body of water. Ships sail on the bosom of the ocean. Percival said, "On thy fair bosom, silver lake, the wild swan spreads his snowy wings." We cannot use the word gulf, nor the term bosom of the ocean, without at the same time conveying the idea that water is concave. The word bosom, as applied to other things than the human breast, means any deep or enclosed place, or supporting surface; as the bosom of the earth, or of the deep; an interior; an embrace; the curvature of a sail swelled concavely by the wind! The "bosom of the church" is its loving or affectionate embrace. Our word gulf is from the Italian golfo, which is from the Greek κολπος (kolpos), which means, according to Liddell and Scott's Lexicon, the bosom or lap; also mother's womb; a fold which serves as a pocket; any bosom-like hollow; a deep hollow between waves, or the cavernous depths of the sea; a bay, a deep retired vale. And according to Donnegan's Lexicon, the same definition is given with the additional words, "a deep bay, a deep hollow; a hollow;" while the verb κολποω (kolpoo) means to form into a bosom, to distend sails—and distended sails are always concave to the direction of the breeze. These words with their definitions convey the idea of hollowness; and thus language forces the people to say that the oceans, as well as the earth, are concave—the same as the use of the term "inhabitants of the earth" implies that we live on the inside!

The researches of archaeologists among the ruins of ancient cities and temples, the general opening of tombs in Egypt, Palestine, and Babylon, are indications of the coming resurrection. The Palestine exploration expedition purposes opening the tombs of Abraham and other patriarchs and prophets—tombs in which life was never placed, and from which no life will ever come. The resurrection is from humanity; Jesus was the resurrection—he was developed from the human race, and he was the resurrection of thousands of people, the involution of the Jewish race. The tomb of Abraham stands today; it has endured the ravages of decay through dispensations, until Abraham comes to life in the nineteenth century, in the United States. On the plains of Murghab, in Persia, near the city of Persepolis, is the tomb of Cyrus the Great, the king of Persia; the tomb has stood until Cyrus is resurrected to fulfil the prophecies concerning him. Cyrus in the Persian, is K'urush; Hebrew, Koresh; Babylonian, Kuras; and in the Greek, Kuros. In the Persian and Hebrew it means sun, while in the Greek it means lord or ruler; Adventists looking for the coming of the Lord would do well to look for a name to correspond! From a line of kings ruling in Assan, Cyrus the Great came; and today Khorassan, in Persia, geographically contributes to his memory; while there arises in America a new system, a new kingdom, which is called Koreshan, to perpetuate the memory of CYRUS for all ages to come!

When a city becomes so corrupt that a clergyman is able to see that something is the matter, it must be corrupt indeed! A Chicago preacher has just waked up to the fact that "the wickedness of Chicago is appalling. A greater center of devilism is not to be found on this continent," and wants the people to put on sackcloth and mourn in ashes. Let the clergymen first put on garments of burlap and coffee sack—let a revolution begin in the pulpit, then perhaps the people in the pews as well as out of them may improve on the present! The Jewish clergy were too proud to recognize the Christ in the wickedest city of nineteen hundred years ago; the forces which gave the primitive Christian church its impetus, rebounded against the prejudices of the priesthood, scattered the people, and destroyed the nation. The modern church is called upon to heed the Voice; the clergymen are deaf and the people are blind—and yet Koreshanity will succeed in obliterating the evils and corruptions of society which the modern church has permitted and created.

Modern society, with all its moral and educational institutions, is responsible for its criminals. The greed of commercialism runs to seed in the burglar, the train robber, the highwayman, and the holdup; and licentiousness must have its victims in the bonds of matrimony or out of them. In the crimes and horrors perpetrated by the criminal classes are reflexed the mind and heart of the people at large. The rogue's gallery contain pictures of general human depravity, and the pages of the press, with its records of crime, mirror the very core of modern society. The criminal is not wholly responsible; he involves what is contained in the people—and the external horrors are no worse than the spirit of crime and inhumanity generated in the minds of the millions. The criminal expresses what the impure have thought and wished to do. Let the character of humanity be revealed! Let society be photographed in the deeds of today, that on the morrow the world may heed the lessons of law and of love!

Dr. Hudson, who has undertaken to demonstrate the difference between the objective and subjective minds, and to trace all spiritualistic phenomena to the subjective mind in the human brain, says he can find no facts to sustain the doctrine of reincarnation. It is but a step from his position to that of christian science, which assumes that there are no facts to sustain incarnation or embodiment! If the subjective mind finds it necessary and advantageous to dwell in human brains during a period of one generation, it occurs to us that the same mental substance of the subjective mind would find it just as necessary to dwell in brains during the coming generation, and seek to avoid being vitiated in the atmosphere. Hudson cannot see the facts which support the idea that mentality is inseparably connected with its co ordinate base—brains; neither can the blind man see the stars!

The Chicago Tribune estimates that the total annual waste of food and fuel through carelessness, disorder, and lack of economy, amounts to $175,000,000, and that the stuff thrown away would support 350,000 families at $1.50 a day. In other words, one half of the population of Chicago wastes more than is necessary to maintain the life of the other half. But this waste is but a fraction of the total loss—all is wasted that is not properly utilized for the benefit of the people at large, and especially for the producer. That which is made to enrich the thief and to degrade and oppress the poor is worse than wasted. The competitive system is responsible for all the wastes of the products of industry!

The nineteenth century has developed some remarkable profligates and spendthrifts—notably, Pullman's two sons and Count Castelane, who married Anna Gould's millions; they are dudes—imbeciles, who are unfortunate in being born in luxury. The kind of insanity which afflicts the spendthrift is termed by the medical world as "Coenæsthesia." This lets them down easy—call a disease by a Latin name, and its cause at once becomes mysterious!

Bishop Potter would solve the labor problem by having the employer and employee become thoroughly acquainted with each other. It is of no benefit to enforce a remedy that is worse than the disease. The wolf got acquainted with the lamb, and it was all the worse for the lamb; and even if the wolf could be restrained, the lamb would always remember that "familiarity breeds contempt." The quickest remedy is to abolish the wolf!

Every circumference must have a center, and every center must be environed by a circumference; this is the law of the geometry of form. The existence of the universe necessitates the limitation of its greatest form, because radii of circles cannot be infinite in length.

The Leonids have again failed to fill their appointment as advertised. Perhaps some astronomical Barnum is making a more extended tour in other worlds with his meteoric circus than at first contemplated, and has gotten beyond the gravity of our solar system!

Authorities give the definition of the word κόσμος (kosmos) as "the universe; the earth," because, as according to the Koreshan Cosmogony, the earth and the universe are one and the same—the earth is the physical environ of all that the universe comprises.

A man's worth to society depends upon the amount and kind of service he renders to his fellows. He is worthless who serves only himself.

The astronomers have been shooting stars again with their telescopes and cameras, but they failed to bring down the meteors.

The time is at hand when the people will demand the abdication of the money kings.

All lines of logic lead to Koreshanity.

The Stars in Koreshan Astronomy.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—If the whole heavens are inside a shell about 8,000 miles in diameter, the stars would have a different appearance in Europe from what they have in America, I would suppose; that is, they could not appear in the same position to the European that they would to the American. For instance, in the constellation Lyra, the double and quadruple stars would not seem to hold the same place in the heavens at the same time, to astronomers on different continents.

Take, for instance, the quadruple star Epsilon Lyra; when viewed at the same hour by astronomers thousands of miles apart, it presents the same appearance. The four stars comprising it hold the same position to one another wherever viewed at the same time, however far apart the observers may be.

Could this be the case if these stars were possibly less than 2,000 miles from us? It is asserted that the stars in each pair of these four stars are hundreds of years revolving around each other, and that the pairs are thousands of years making a complete circuit about an invisible center. I do not see how anything but immense distance could account for this phenomenon. Viewed from the two ends of a base-line longer than the distance to the stars at the same time, must present a different appearance—at least it seems so to me. Be so kind as to explain how this agrees with the doctrine of Koreshanity.—J. F., Springfield, Mo.

If we were to attempt to explain the phenomena of the Cellular Universe from the basis of mere mechanical motions of the sun, moon, planets, and stars, there would be many a missing link between conclusion and fact. Modern physics is not true—hence it is in conflict with Koreshan Astronomy; and when one begins the study of the Koreshan System, the assumptions of the old school must be completely eradicated from the mind.

If light were propagated in straight lines; if our view of the heavens were unobstructed by the sea of hydrogen, so that we might observe stars beyond the surface of the stellar sphere—then the whole heavens would appear very differently from what they now do; every star would have an enormous parallax when viewed from the different continents at the same hour, and the position of each would vary as the distance between observers increased or diminished. The light of the heavenly bodies is propagated in curved lines, and we do not see beyond the upper stratum of our atmosphere. These are two important points to be remembered in the consideration of the phenomena of the hollow globe.

That which forms the images of all that we observe must enter the eye. Suppose that we observe the constellation Lyra, with its so called double and quadruple stars; our telescope, in the course of years, will show a change in their relation; but if the eye continually receives the impressions of light from these variables, the minute points would be as constant as the stars, and all the movements of the stars in the constellation Lyra would be represented in the eye. If we could observe the implanted map of the constellation throughout a century, we would see these points of light revolve about each other. Are we to suppose that the actual points on the retinal coat are trillions of miles away, and subject to the action of centrifugal and centripetal forces? Why, no; for they are simply points of light in the eye! But their motion is derived from that which makes the points on the retina.

We perceive in actual sight, the images made on the retina of the eye. The change of position of some stars in their orbits will manifest corresponding changes in the eye or on the camera plate. That which causes the motion of the star-image we will say is Epsilon Lyrae. Now, what causes the motion of this star—what is back of the star to produce the point in the sky, and its uniform shift in its relation to its companion?

The stars are focal points of light. The causes back of them are the earth and the sun; they are pictures upon the stellar camera plate, the heavens which are stretched out as a molten mirror. The fountain of energies which produces the stars is in the central sun, the stars belong to the solar system, and they change in relation to each other as the sun changes in his relation to the equinoxes in their precession. If the shift of certain stars is regular, there is a regular refraction of energies which produces the star. There are corresponding movements of zones of energies in the earth's shell, which manifest in apparent revolution of stars of the double and quadruple orders.

If the movement of a given star can be imaged upon the retina of the eye; if it can be traced upon the camera plate; if it can be diagrammed upon a plane surface to show the angular space its orbit covers, its movement in the sky must certainly correspond. If a star may be a minute point of light in the eye, and move in an orbit, it can be a minute point of light in the sky moving in an orbit—without the necessity of supposing that its magnitude is immense or its distance inconceivable!

The stars are located on the star sphere of force, which is as definite as the retinal coat of the eye; and the reason that so few stars have any parallax at all, is because they are nearly all in exactly the same plane or sphere. The stars in the constellations manifest their familiar figures to observers on different continents at the same time, because the convex sphere of the heavens, through specific laws of physics and perspective foreshortening, appears as a concave dome, embracing one hemisphere of the entire star field.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac.—Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave, and drouth have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company, 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Koreshanity in Masonic Temple.

Synopsis of Lecture by Koresh, before the Anthropological Society, Chicago, Nov. 18, 1900.

The subject chosen for the occasion was "The Science of the Soul;" and before a representative audience of scientists, physicians, lawyers, and others, KORESH delivered a fine address, beginning with the statement that there are two general classes of people in the world today: one (denominated christian scientists) which believes that there is no matter—all is spirit; while on the other hand, the materialist declares that all is matter. Between these two extreme poles there is an equatorial region, or a class of people recognizing the existence of both matter and spirit.

The materialist does not believe in miracles, and yet he asserts that atoms of matter—which he holds are inert—evolved themselves into a complete universe in the following miraculous manner: Matter, which originally existed in a chaotic, shapeless mass, awoke one morning and said to itself, "I am tired of this monotony, and I think I will move." Accordingly, it moved, and continued to move until it had evolved first, the protoplasm, then the monkey, and finally, man himself. This materialistic conception, the speaker characterized as beyond any of the Biblical miracles which are so frequently scoffed at! Miracle is a Latin word, meaning simply wonder or astonishment. The electric light was a miracle when first introduced.

The atomic theory was next discussed, and the premise of modern chemistry—the indestructibility of the atom—was shown to be fallacious. The match (used as an illustration) is composed mainly of silicon, no carbon entering into its composition. When ignited the silicon is consumed, and the precipitate or ash is found to consist chiefly of carbon. Whence came this carbon? It was not in the match. Certainly there has been transmutation of substance; there is no other accounting for the phenomenon.

The light and heat in the flame of the match correspond in a measure to the combustion continually taking place in the brain, which generates the intellection and affection (light and heat) in the human mind. The soul of a personality may therefore be said to be the intellection and affection of the personality. Spirit, soul, and body were denominated by the Greeks as pneuma, psuche, and soma, respectively; pneuma being masculine; psuche, feminine; and soma, the body or environ of their operations.

So long as the material substance of the match remains it may continue to burn, if the oxygen and nitrogen of the atmosphere and its energies are supplied. On the other hand, be the supply of oxygen, nitrogen, and energies ever so great, no combustion can be kept up except the supply of material fuel be replenished; thus the necessity for the recognition of both matter and spirit. Every atom of matter was shown to possess a degree of consciousness; the union of hydrogen and oxygen in the production of water being, in the lower domain, according to the same law which is operative in the union of the sperm and germ in the production of the human species.

At the termination of the lecture, opportunity was given for five-minute criticisms upon the discourse, after which KORESH took the stand in reply to his critics. The time being so limited, he was unanimously requested to lecture again on November 25, at the same place, upon the same subject. This he kindly consented to do; and we await the time with much interest.—A. H. A.

Usury Condemned by Reason.

A Gigantic Evil that Enriches the Few, Impoverishes the Many, and Wrecks Nations.

Adam Smith, and all economists after him, agree that what a man earns is his proper wages. Statistics show that one half, and probably more, of the present earnings of labor goes to pay usury that nobody earns. To speak of money earning, or, as Shakespeare has it, the "barren breed of metal" producing, is to talk nonsense. But has not past labor, as it is called, or capital, a right to a share in the proceeds of labor? There is where we join issue and say, in the form of money, it never has any such rights except in the case of partnership, where the parties divide the risk.

There is a distinction, too often overlooked between the capitalist and the employer or business manager. The latter—from the responsible and extremely valuable kind of labor he performs and the risk he must run—is justly entitled to much larger wages than other laborers; but beyond pay for wear and tear of buildings and machinery, and necessary expenses of insurance, if he has any, and of taxes of various kinds, with something added for risk, he has no right to compensation for use of capital. Laborers, forgetting this distinction between employer and capitalist, often blame the wrong man, and the poor employer, between the blind fury of the laborer and the grinding avarice of the usurer, is the most oppressed man in the community.

But men will not loan anything else for no compensation; why should they loan money? Money is not property, in the ordinary sense, but the legal instrument for the exchange of property. The law of its creation only contemplates it in that light. The holder of it has that which will procure for him, in consequence of this legal power, anything else he may desire, and with which, if he hoards up a sufficient amount, he can take all he pleases of every other kind of property at his own price, since the quantity of money in circulation fixes the price of all kinds of property. The design of money and the good of community whose united will gives this power, do not contemplate men's hoarding money.

When men turn all their other property into money and let it out on usury, they in a sense hoard it instead of spending it, as the very institution of money contemplates, and as the good of community requires. They use a power given by community, the benefits of which, beyond simple use, as Gladstone says, belong to community, to amass fortunes for themselves at other people's expense. No other kind of property has such power. Piling up other property, except land titles, which we shall discuss hereafter, does not affect the value of other property, or even enable the holders to get what they please for that particular kind, unless they can create a monopoly.

Money spent is free to fulfil the design of its creation. Money put out at interest is hoarded, and yet used to get something for nothing. If one buys a horse he must also buy harness, wagon, and various tools or implements; he must build a barn, procure food, and expend labor on him to get any good of his money. In addition to all this, to be sure to get his money out of him, or them, he must pay somebody for insuring them. He can't get them insured for what they cost, and is liable to lose all at any moment. If he lends either or all of them, or any kind of property except money, he ought to get hire for them, which will not be usury if the charge be not too great, but will be pay back for the money put into them. The exception to this is where things are returned in kind, as "victuals."

The usurer requires that his money be insured to several times the amount of the principal and interest, and that the man who thus insures his money, pay him a heavy compensation every year besides. The fact that usurers collectively must be paid an enormous amount of money every year, while they hold in their hands the power of fixing the prices of all commodities, works unutterable oppression in the country.

There can be no such thing as a normal price of commodities where markets are always glutted with all kinds of property, required to be sold at any price they will bring to pay usury. No amount of protection ever has saved or can save such a people from poverty; and the less money usurers allow to circulate, the greater the distress, and the more certain and rapid the ruin and destruction. This is the verdict of history as well as the deduction of reason.

In Greece, in the time of Solon, (Smith's "Greece," chapter ten, pages 11-12), through the means of usury the poor had lost all their property, and in many cases were held as actual slaves by the rich. By his celebrated law, called Seisachtheia, or shaking off of burdens, he cancelled all contracts by which lands or persons had become obligated for debts, and thus prevented an actual uprising of the poor against their oppressors. He gave still further relief to all classes, except the bondholder class, by lessening by flat the value of money something over one fourth, a measure which, like many others of like character in the history of nations, ancient and modern, did not have to be undone.

Tacitus' Annals, Book 6, chapters XVI and XVII, says:

"Usury was, in truth, an inveterate evil in Rome, and the cause of ever-recurring discord and seditions. * * * Afterwards, by a regulation of the tribunes, it was reduced to one half, and at last usury was forbidden."

It was afterwards restored, and was one of the causes of the nation's downfall. Usurers called in their debts and hoarded their money, causing great distress; but finally Scientific Lectures by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanity is delivering an interesting series of scientific Lectures Thursday evenings, 8 P. M., at Koreshan Hall, 316 West Sixty-third street, Chicago. Much interest is manifested at these Lectures. A short time is devoted each evening to answering questions.

The regular services of the Koreshan Ecclesia are now held every Sunday, 3 P. M., at same Hall. Interested friends of Koreshanity in Chicago and vicinity are invited to avail themselves of these opportunities to hear the Founder of the System.

the "emperor brought relief by placing a sum of a hundred thousand great sesterces" where it could be borrowed without interest, by giving landed security to the people to double the value of money loaned. When usurers found they could not have their own way, they too were glad to lend their money without usury."

Without doubt, such would be the case everywhere were usury abolished. Even without usury the money-lender would have a very great advantage over other property-holders. The very fact that he could claim his dues, which are the whole amount of his property in money, while all other property was liable to sudden depreciation in money value, would be a great advantage given to him, not by his property as property, but by community at its own risk.

The Roman law at one time required all money-loaners to invest in property three fourths of their money. As money was a creation of government, it certainly had such right over its own creature. The effect of such law was to pour out the hoards and set money free, so that it could accomplish the design of its creation—effect exchanges. The government that secures the actual freedom and independence and equality of its subjects will strictly forbid all money-lending, whether for usury or not. We learn from Cicero, that usury and debt were the principal causes of the conspiracy of Cataline.

Tacitus says in his "Germania," that usury was unknown among the Germans, and that that other law of God against land monopoly prevailed, land being a common possession. He says that the Romans had fought with these free Germans for over 240 years, and had never finally conquered them; that they had been a greater barrier to Roman ambition than all the kingly governments of the East.

Let the shoddy aristocrats of the country who are now longing for a strong government, as they phrase it, and a standing army to protect them and their ill-gotten gains from their fellows, whom they have robbed, make a note of this. The strongest government in the world is that of a free people, protected in their lives and means of properly sustaining life. The government that properly does these things may safely reckon upon an earthly immortality, as it will have the favor of God and man.—From "National Suicide," by Prof. O. F. L'Amoreaux.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

The Saturday Evening Post.—The Curtis Publishing Company has issued a November Special Double Number, in addition to the double number for Thanksgiving. This breaks the record—32 extra large pages, illustrated, under colored covers, for only 5 cents. Many important subjects are discussed in the current issue. Our Diplomatic Relations with China, by Hon. John W. Foster; Men Who Make Money in Wall Street, by S. V. White; and Dividends Paid on College Parchments, being the most important. All of the literary contributions are fine, especially Bret Harte's, The Stolen Cigar Case, being one of a series of Condensed Novels, imitating the style of A. Conan Doyle. The editorial departments are fine—in short, the Saturday Evening Post surpasses anything we have seen for 5 cents per copy—it is equal to any magazine on the market.

Leslie's Weekly.—This popular illustrated weekly is a fine thing for the reading table, containing as it does, history in picture—fine photographs of places of interest, places where great events transpire. The issue of this week illustrates New York's great $35,000,000 underground railroad. Another subject of illustration is the breaking in of 5,000 wild horses and mules for the German army in China, by cowboys in California. Other subjects and departments make up 24 large pages, embracing as much matter as is usually found in the best magazines.

Monday Edition, Brooklyn Eagle.—The sermons of the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, (Plymouth Church, Brooklyn), successor to Henry Ward Beecher, are published in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle every Monday, together with full reports of the sermons of the pastors of prominent churches in Greater New York. The Monday Eagle contains more articles on homiletics than any other daily paper in the United States. Samples sent on request. Subscription price per year, $1.50. Address, The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The New Voice.—The election makes no difference in the tone of the foremost prohibition organ, the New Voice; it continues the fight as vigorously as ever. We should be glad to have our readers become acquainted with the facts of the great whiskey evil, and they are contained in this vigorous periodical every week. It has an interesting editorial page; and just now, Wm. E. Johnson is traveling around the world, and contributing articles concerning his travels. Weekly, $1.00 per year. 315 Dearborn street, Chicago.

Journal of Magnetism.—Mr. Lloyd Jones, of 156 Washington street, Chicago, is issuing an illustrated monthly magazine, 48 pages, price 10 cents per copy. Free sample copies to readers who mention THE FLAMING SWORD. This new journal will devote its pages to Physical Culture, Magnetism, and Health. It is announced that the first number will appear about January 1, 1901.

The Cellular Cosmogony or Koreshan Astronomy.

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DR. CYRUS R. TEED, OF CHICAGO.

The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, Theocracy, and Social Economy.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univocal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Great Conflict of "Capital and Labor."

The Widening Breach Between the Classes; Mistakes of a Labor Agitator; the Impending Revolution and Coming Industrial Commonwealth.

THE NATIONAL CIVIC FEDERATION has opened its conference for the discussion of the question of arbitration, in the settlement of differences between "capital and labor." At the close of Chairman MacVeagh's opening address, we find this remarkable statement:

Wherever we look we find the evidences that there are no permanent or deep divisions in our citizenship, and that what lines of demarkation do exist are not growing more, but less, plainly defined. This conference is not therefore engaged exclusively in the alleviation of an immediate strain in the relation between capital and labor. It is in a still larger field than that. It is working for an immediate relief, but along lines that will bring the greater and final relief of a friendly, undivided, and homogeneous industrial commonwealth.

It is impossible for us to comprehend Mr. MacVeagh's meaning. There is no commonwealth that distinguishes between "labor and capital." Industry may be divided, on very general principles, into mental and physical activity; and upon the basis of their union in the fields of industrial pursuits, all capital or accumulation of wealth depends. There is no capital which is not the proximate or remote product of what is now called labor. There is no subject upon which the laboring men of the world require information, and on which they need instruction more than on the question of their rights concerning what they produce. It may do very well for a man in MacVeagh's position in the social and commercial world to talk of a homogeneous industrial commonwealth; but it would be a difficult matter for him to define intelligibly to the man who sweeps his office, the homogeneity of their relations, and upon what basis he predicates his idea of an approaching social and financial equilibrium. It may be a fortunate circumstance for existing or coming generations, that the majority have the right to rule here in America, though at present that right is usurped through the public indifference and the administration of our commercial and financial pirates to own and control the world, including the industrial masses.

The divisions of our citizenship are growing deeper, the breach which divides what are falsely called capital and labor is broader, and the social demarkation between the rich and the poor augments with the progress of the world toward the final crisis of social, political, and commercial revolution. Arbitration will no more settle—either immediately or mediately—the differences between the contestants, than the peace conference at The Hague settled the question of international differences. We took the whole matter of that conference as a sure indication of a bloody sequel. To us it amounted to a prophetic declaration of the turmoil to follow; and the effort to solve the "capital and labor question" upon the basis of a soporific administered by the rich to the poor, will not allay the difficulty nor eradicate the disease.

There is no "strain between capital and labor;"

the strain is between capital and capital. It is between the capital which is in labor, and that which is produced by labor but appropriated through robbery. We are at the hour of which it is declared, they shall cry peace, peace, when there is no peace. There can be no peace in the soul struggling against fate ten or twelve hours a day, in the exhaustion of his physical and mental energies, under the merciless pressure of a robber employer. There is no peace in the soul of him who sees wife and little ones deprived of the necessities, to say nothing of the comforts and luxuries, while under his constant observation are those who are enjoying the luxuries which the toil of his hand and mind have produced and provided, and who at the same time these differences in financial footing exist, say with consummate effrontery: "There are no permanent or deep divisions in our citizenship, and that what lines of demarkation do exist are not growing more, but less, plainly defined."

Does chairman MacVeagh of the Civic Federation Conference represent the class which is aiding to "bring the greater and final relief of a friendly, undivided, and homogeneous industrial commonwealth"? If so, will he please inform the public upon what grounds he expects to maintain the social and financial differences which now exist and are broadening every day, and which he helps to support, and at the same time develop that "homogeneous industrial commonwealth"?

There is no question about the coming of the industrial commonwealth; but it will not come until the revolution provides the way. There can be no doubt of the time to come when the industrious shall enjoy the fruits and products of their industry; but it will be when the industrial masses shall have grown to comprehend the law of rights, and through quiet and uniform conviction—moved by a supremely potent influence of love, not hate, which now actuates the soul of the men who smart and chafe under the galling supremacy of boasted capital—shall adjust all the utilities of life according to the laws of equitable relationship.

The industrial commonwealth will come through the creation of the divine Empire, after the revolution, and when the human soul shall have been revolutionized through a new awakening. It will come when the spirit of man shall have become the Spirit of God, and when those who are now rich will so love the neighbor as to place their riches in the treasury of the great Commonwealth. It will come when the communistic life planted in the beginning of the age shall have matured into the fruition of the kingdom of righteousness in the earth. It will come when the baptism of fire which the world awaits, shall have swept away the dross of the degenerate accumulations of a dispensation, and when God himself shall again make his abode in the outer courts of his Temple—the Arch-Natural humanity.

A Question for the Adventists.

WILL THE ADVENT organ, The Last Days, tell us when the Lord was eaten? The Lord has shown the law of the resurrection. The earth brings forth the blade, then the ear, and finally the full corn in the ear. The good seed are the children of the kingdom; the field is the world, and the harvest is the end of the world (the end of the age). According to the modern Christian belief, the Holy Ghost is God. According to the declaration of the Scriptures, the Holy Ghost (Spirit) is God. According to the Scriptures, the Word is God. Now the Holy Spirit was sown or planted in the race (church) as the Word of God; therefore the Word was sown or planted, therefore God was planted. The Son of God was God—so the church claims; the Son of God is the fulness of the Godhead bodily, therefore the Holy Spirit was in him; the Holy Spirit was he.

"Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day" (at the end of the dispensation). What fool of an Adventist, who pretends to believe in the Bible and the declarations of the Lord Jesus, the Son and Christ of God, will assume to deny that the Lord was eaten [appropriated], as he declared he would be? The Lord's flesh and blood were appropriated by the church in the reception of the Holy Spirit, which was the Lord himself. Thus the Lord was planted in the race, and from that planting—in the process of regeneration (reproduction)—he will come again just as he declared he would.

The so called Advent church has set the time for the Lord to come, about fifty times in the last sixty years. These prophecies of the Lord's coming are false predictions made by false prophets. We do not know of better evidence of a false prophet, than the nonfulfillment of his repeated predictions. We say again that Mr. Miller did not state the manner of the Lord's coming, but his arrival in 1839. He told the truth; he uttered the midnight cry, and was the truest of all Advent prophets.

The Lord Christ was sacrificed that his life should descend into humanity, that by it man's corrupt nature should be transformed to the incorruptible, immortal quality of the life of the Lord.

Troubles of the Subsidized Press.

Newspapers which Clamored for Continued Republican Policies Complain of Prodgal Extravagance and Unbridled Debauchery in Public Funds.

THE REPUBLICAN Chicago dailies, after warring to the knife for the continuation of a republican administration, are groaning over the results of their previous frantic efforts. The single standard, the avenues of commerce, ship subsidies, and the enslavement of the masses are all involved in the influence of the money power upon the Congress of the United States. Mark Hanna is the head of the republican party. He loves the people in proportion to their influence at the polls. He will exert his influence in the direction of controlling the wealth of the world for the millionaires; he lives for nothing else, and nothing more nor less can be expected of him. What is the bagatelle of $9,000,000 a year, and why should the great millionaire dailies make a fuss over what they have labored so assiduously to accomplish? A ship subsidy of $9,000,000 a year makes no draft upon the money powers of the world. It is merely an additional link in the chain of that human bondage and destiny which reduces the great mass of the people to abject slavery. The people have shown that they wish the money of the world to be reduced to its smallest possible dimensions; that they desire this money power to remain in the hands of the bloated bondholders. The people have endorsed the trust, and whatsoever the trust may perform during the next four years.

"The subsidy bill," says the Chicago Record, "hints very strongly of a determination on the part of the republican leaders to abuse their power to the end of inaugurating a period of prodigal extravagance and unbridled debauchery in public funds: [The Record ought never to talk that way, after the benefits derived from the hundred million dollars' New York City tax:]

it is time for the leaders of the party to stop short in their progress and consider soberly how the party will stand before the nation if it thus abuses the trust which the people have reposed in it." Has any one ever doubted the purpose of the leader of the republican party to compel the people to augment the accumulation of the millions through which that party perpetuates its power? Can there be a question that the people are to be enslaved in the greatest bondage ever instituted in the history of this or any other nation?

The republican party has demonstrated the fact that it prefers to make money of gold, which has no monetary value except by virtue of the stamp of endorsement, and to place this watered stock in the power of the bankers of the world, thus depriving the people of the right to create money which may remain in their own hands. It has favored the great commercial robbers in the past; why should we expect that the party which has endorsed the gigantic steals of the past forty years, should become suddenly honest after this last enthusiastic endorsement? In the next four years some lessons will have been learned. The gold power will have had an opportunity to demonstrate its character, and Wall street will have dictated its terms to the asses who have sacrificed their liberties.

We are not complaining. We have advertised a crash to be brought about through the exaltation of the gold power to pre-eminence in the world, and we have the satisfaction of knowing that as the new dispensation is to be ushered in through revolution; and as that revolution is the battle of Gog and Magog; and as Gog is the money power, that the limit is reached in which the prophecy of the destruction of the old church and state is to be fulfilled.

The Femininity of Deity.

IN The Life, of November 28, 1900, we read: "The 'divine feminine' is no better than the divine masculine, if there are such distinctions in the Godhead; and there are more men who have more of the divine feminine in their make up than many women. Let us be done with sexing God. There is no distinction of sex in virtue or principle." All of which goes to show that the author of the statement is entirely ignorant of the subject in question. If God is not biune in sex, he is not the author of sex in Nature. The Bible expressly declares the bisexuality of Deity, and virtue is sexed. Wisdom is feminine, as language in its very nature determines; while love is masculine, as determined by the same law. Electricity, even, is bisexual. One current—electricity flows by inverse currents—forms a sheath, it being feminine; the other forms a point or apex (masculine), and flows interiorly to the sheath. It does not follow, however, that either one is better than the other.

"Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." The Lamb of God is God the Lord. John said: "He that hath the Bride [in him] is the bridegroom." This is not a figure of speech. It sets forth the facts as they obtain in the character of Deity. God made man after his image and likeness; he made him male and female, like himself; hence it will not be wise to ignore or contradict facts and principles. It is better to know the truth, even though it may upset preconceived opinions.

The Great Divide Between the Ages.

The Wonders of a Hundred Years ; Progress of the Old Century, and the Possibilities of the New ; the Dawn of Empire and Universal Peace.

PROF. U. G. MORROW.

GREAT EPOCHS mark the periods of human history; with the rolling of the centuries, humanity passes from generation to generation along lines where great forces are at work, where events of stupendous import occur. There are central lines of progress of peoples and nations, through which flows the great stream of life which moves the world; it is the hidden power of Deity, the undercurrents of progress, the threads of destiny. The science of history reveals the fact that events of world-wide interest express forces which are making for a common great climax; that war and revolution, which indicate that the great Cause is continuing the struggle for the mastery, are factors of progress; and that the rise and fall of nations are but the rhythmic flow and ebb of the tides on the sea of humanity. There are reasons why there is no monotony in the universe; there could be no progress without change, and change makes the events of centuries, eras, and ages.

It is a great thing to stand between the centuries; to look back over the past; to look forward and contemplate the future. The most wonderful century of all history has receded into the past; the time has elapsed, but that which the century developed and expressed is here, ready to achieve still greater things. Go back a hundred years, when the great cities of America were but towns and villages; when there were no railroads nor steamships; no telegraphs nor telephones; no electric lights nor appliances; when great inventions were few, and when the people did not dream of the great possibilities of the nineteenth century. Compare the world a century ago with the world of the present, with its accelerating forces, its marvels, and achievements; and see progress unparalleled, and the swift march of things to a great climax.

The world has been startled at the rapid growth of the American nation. Nothing in history is of greater import to humanity than the ascendancy of the West. Europe belongs to the period of medievalism; the continental powers of today are but remnants of that which has been—fragments of the Latin empire which centered about the Eternal City. America is the land of destiny; during the past century the United States has risen from the state of mere freed colonies to a gigantic world-power. It began with thirteen states along the Atlantic coast, but in 1900 it counts forty-five states, and a number of territories and colonies; the eagle has grown, and the shadow of his wings covers half the globe!

The nineteenth century is not the century of Washington, for he passed away at the close of 1799; but it is the century of the development of his country. Washington as a centenary city is equal to many European capitals which have stood for 500 years; and New York's 200 years rival London's 1,000. At the beginning of the century there was no Chicago; where now there is a city of 2,000,000 inhabitants, there was then but an impassable swamp by the Lake shore. We have passed through a period of great things, a century of marvels. It is the century of Napoleon and of Lincoln—the century which will stand out conspicuously in the background of views of the past from the standpoint of the new world, because the century is marked by the coming of KORESH, the great anthropotic Sun, who put on the robes of authority when the temporal power of papacy was destroyed in 1870. It was the time of the founding of the great Koreshan System, through which the world passes from the last century of darkness to the first century of the age of Light.

The facts of the development of the world during the nineteenth century are sufficient to show that the Koreshan picture of the world's future is not an idle dream. Let the progress of the world continue at its present ratio, and what marvels will be manifest before the close of the twentieth century! KORESH plans the greatest maritime city of the world, with its golden domes and glittering temples; with its perfect system of order, and with its millions of inhabitants and institutions for the development and blessing of humanity. Chicago, in a haphazard way, has developed in fifty years; but its development is but a shadow of the growth and glory of the New Jerusalem. The site of the CITY OF KORESH was selected in January, 1894, and the center of the great Temple located; but before the end of the new century, the nations will point to the Capitol of the world in recognition of the purpose and the power of its Founder!

It is a great thing to stand between the centuries; it is a greater thing to stand on the great divide between the ages! The great forces which have impulsed peoples and made history are focalizing in a climax. We have reached the end of the old dispensation of Christianity, because the life of the age becomes involved in its seed; we are nearing the culmination. A new volume of history is beginning, written by a new Hand upon the scroll of human evolution; the Messiah has come again to sit in judgment over church and state, to destroy the old, to build the new. The Koreshan dispensation is at hand—it is just beyond the world's greatest revolution, the revolution which the new century brings, there volution which veils the glories of universal peace, of the coming Empire, which will center about the Eternal City of the Golden Age!

Human happiness is a possible attainment, to which all men and women have the right to aspire.

The Emancipation of Woman.

Woman's Degradation Under the Curse; the Desecration of Sacred Functions; Her Restoration to Purity and Power by Koreshanity.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

AN EXCHANGE of THE FLAMING SWORD, bearing the name Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, has seen fit to communicate to its readers some facts and some opinions relating to the science of Koreshanity and its Founder. Koreshan Universology is being published to the world for its enlightenment, and for the salvation of all who will apply the truth it teaches to life. Universology means what the name implies, that is, the science of the universe; and it includes all there is of science. By it the universe is revealed to be such a systematically organized structure, that a part of it cannot be thoroughly known without a thorough knowledge of the whole. A knowledge of the whole necessitates the knowledge of its form and functions, origin and destiny. For believing that KORESH, the Founder of Koreshan Universology, possesses this knowledge, Koreshans are prepared to give to the world adequate reasons. Intellectual humanity is supposed to be investigative to the end that sometime, somewhere within the universe, some one shall come into possession of the knowledge of the ultimates of truth concerning it, and that such knowledge once possessed will have a use commensurate with all that it involves, and that it can be applied for the reproduction of the ultimates of that Life which is Life indeed—Life that is as Almighty as its inherent Divinity, the known and beloved truth.

We once had the pleasure of presenting to a woman of accredited intellectuality, the premise and general outline of the Koreshan System. She listened to the presentation with a mixture of amazement and intellectual delight; then as she realized what the reception of the science would mean to one accepting it as the prime resource of life, she said: "The concepts of the system are most rational, the premise seems irrefutable, and the deductions logical; but if one should accept such a system as you have presented as the truth, one would have to be tied to its Originator, and for that I am not ready. I want my freedom." In other words, she would be one ever learning and never coming to the knowledge of the truth; forgetting that whom the truth makes free is free indeed—free to enjoy the liberties of the Sons of God, and to be thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Freedom is not license to entangle oneself in the meshes of occult mysteries, nor to be absorbed by the delusions of false lights which lead to disaster and destruction. Hence to give men freedom from the prisons of the realms of darkness created by ignorance, Truth—the Almighty, voices the science of herself through anointed prophets,—the dispensational Messiahs, who become eyes for the blind, and Shepherds for the lost sheep. These Messengers of conjunction with the Deity of truth in her progressive involutions, are they through whom the Word of God is communicated, and each universal dispensational order vitalized for the reproduction of its kind.

It is consistent for the opponents of the divine authority given by the anointing of the spirit of truth, to be wise in their own conceit, which, being unfounded upon anything which demonstrates their superiority and established rights to be teachers of men, prepares them for their covering of shame and confusion when the Book of Life shall be opened, to reveal their names omitted by its inrolled wisdom, because they loved darkness rather than light. Divine justice is so operative in the functions of eternal law or love, that the emplacement of men and things in the ultimates of divine order is just where they place themselves by their attainments in the order of law. Lucifer sees in the reverent attitude of mind, described as befitting the true Koreshan, in relation to their Prophet, an indication that the subordination of woman to man is inculcated by Koreshanity. He must lack reliable information concerning the teachings of Koreshanity in regard to woman and her relation to man.

The professed disciples of KORESH are about equally divided as to sex, and are united in the belief that reverence for their Prophet is a quality of mind that gives moral exaltation to the character and grace to the manner of each, proportionate to the attainment of it. This reverence is awakened by the intellectual perception of the fact that the divine truth or Word of God is in conjunction with the mind of the Messenger, and is to be spoken by his mouth, that he may become the Savior of men assembled in the Name of him whose Truth and Life constitute their bond of unity. The inculcation of reverence for the Prophet or Eye of God, who perceives and teaches the ultimates of truth, leads our critic to promise the public an article on "The Subordination of Woman to Man," inculcated by Koreshanity. Koreshan women desire that he shall communicate to his readers only the genuine instructions of Koreshanity, embodied in our doctrines and in the Constitution of our social orders. We will presume he aspires to be just; therefore, let him reiterate our declaration, that it is the high and holy prerogative of the disciples of KORESH to herald to a wicked and adulterous generation—by which woman is made the legitimate slave of man, and man the slave of his own lusts—the Advent of a Man, now the subordinate of a divine spiritual woman,—the Church Triumphant in the heavens,—who, in deference to her profound constructive potencies, is destined to restore to him the image and likeness of the Son of God, and to crown and clothe him with her glory and honor.

This woman's name is Wisdom in the realm of celestial being, Faith in the realm of the spiritual, and Truth in that of the natural; and Her science is the supreme need of the hour. Possessing it, the Man being heralded by Koreshanity, recognizing the divine femininity of the divine origin of all things to be their constructive potency, signs himself in her presence, "the Servant of the Most High," with a reverence equally becoming in his following. Furthermore, Koreshans are pleased to declare that this "Servant of the Most High" is pre-eminently worthy the reverence of all women, fallen as they are from the divine femininity, in that he has given to the world the science of their being as women, and of their origin and destiny in Deity, to the end that they may regain the image and likeness of the divine Motherhood. To effect this grand ultimate of woman's destiny, a social order has been instituted, representative of the united functions of church and state, in which the political and ecclesiastical rights of men and women are equal, and of which the Pre-eminent executive head is permanently feminine during the long cycle of the matriculation of the Sons of God.

Every Koreshan woman is granted by the constitution of the Koreshan Unity, the right to her own body; and no sex unions are by it legitimized, save for the God-ordained purpose of the propagation of the species, in obedience to the laws of perfecting the animal life of God. Lust for woman is demonstrated by Koreshanity to be criminal; and in sex commerce is that quality of the love of money denominated "the root of all evil." The function of motherhood is declared to be too sacred ever to be sacrificed for the satisfaction of lust. Furthermore, Koreshan women receiving the science of their divine origin, are by it led to return to it by the science of the potency of the conservation of all their constructive energies to that end; and are also led to retire from the old social orders to the new order of the Church Triumphant, that they may—in the sphere of its chastity—do works meet for repentance, and become characterized by that Godliness of moral purity profitable to themselves and the world awaiting salvation from sin. Thus do they furnish to the truth now radiating from its Messenger, a psychic potency by which he can reorganize a world in the order of the divine Kingdom to be established in earth. There have been no women in any age, since the decline of the prehistoric Golden Age, called to a mission so high and so holy as that to which Koreshan women are now called. It is a mission which involves the severing of all mortal ties, that by an immortal unity this world may be made to know, and be born again of its Father-Mother Deity.

The holy Seed of the Koreshan order once enunciated these statements: "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. * * And he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." The sacrifice of mortal life with all of its familiar loves, is demanded by the eternal laws of immortality and eternal life. These laws are being restored to their legitimate abiding place—the human heart of the great temple of humanity to be purified and glorified by their application; they are to be written upon the hearts of men by the pen of the Flaming Sword—the theocrasis of God's one true Prophet—now defying the priests of Baal. Then will men and women keep the law; they will live as the Christ lived nineteen hundred years ago, who will live again with the Brotherhood of the order of Melchizedek, whose Holy of Holies will be the divine Motherhood of their Godhood—true women restored to the image and likeness of their divine origin.

The day is not distant when not alone a little group of disciples, scorned by a surrounding social order too ignorant and corrupt to esteem them, but when millions of God-redeemed followers will recognize the Hero of Koreshanity, whose science called them out of darkness into its marvelous light, to become to a new world true Lucifers, or light-bearers, bearing the light of the Son of the morning, the Morning Star of God's reformation in the image and likeness of that Son of man who was the Son of God. Koreshanity is the divinely appointed emancipator of both man and woman from the potencies of the three curses under which they exist, suffering the ultimates of the three concomitant woes—the curse upon the man, the activities of which we see in the woes of the degraded industrial orders; the curse upon the woman, visible in her prolific offspring, bred for sin, sickness, and death; and the curse upon the serpent, symbol of commercial wisdom, manifest in the vices of ignorance of the laws of each domain of commerce.

When our critic can project for the world's enlightenment a scientific system of organic unity, built upon the rock of a demonstrated premise, eternal in its nature, and can offer to woman a loftier destiny than that of the Motherhood of the divine life of that system to be expressed by the living temple of God's humanity, Koreshan women may turn aside to do him reverence, and, as on the morn of her Lord's resurrection, be first to discover and first to say "Rabboni," first to voice the glad tidings to a waiting world, that the Christ has risen indeed!

When the Holy Spirit was shed upon the church, its influence actuated all who received it, to sell their vidual possessions and bring the price of what they sold to the common treasury. The day had not then arrived for the establishment of an orderly kingdom of uses, or such an industrial system as to insure permanency of equitable adjustment in the uses and commodities of life. The time is now ripe, however, for the initiation of such a movement; a nucleus is already established which shall, in future generations, be looked to as the beginning of the fulfilment of all human hopes, and the basis for the consummation of human destiny.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

CHRISTMAS is the great day of Christendom, because it is the anniversary of the birth of the Founder of the primitive Christian system. The day on which the Christ was born marks the beginning of a new era, a new dispensation of progress; and today, the entire civilized world dates its coins, legal documents, and publications, 1900 years since the coming of the Messiah. The evidences that Jesus lived are many, and are too palpable to be successfully denied. The great effects we observe in civilization bear the stamp of a powerful Cause. A myth could not perpetuate its memory for an age; only the Man with noble character, with the spirit of self sacrifice and of brotherhood, and with the scepter of power in his hand, can rule the world supremely above the combined power of the kings and emperors of the age! There is no such thing in history where a stupendous fraud foisted upon the people ever stood the test of a dispensation. That which began the Christian dispensation was a power: Jesus was a Man, not a myth. His name has come down to us; the day on which he was born is still celebrated; the history of his work is written in the volumes of the Christian Scriptures; Pliny plead for the disciples of the Christ in Rome, and Tacitus mentions the sect and the persecutions which they endured; the church which Jesus founded, though now in apostasy, is still standing as a tangible evidence of the existence of its Founder. Critics may deny that Jesus was a man; but there are the facts, the evidences that he lived—facts as palpable and indisputable as that Napoleon, Washington, Cromwell, Alexander the Great, Homer, and Cicero lived and made history. The facts prove that Jesus not only lived, but that he was a man of extraordinary character, that he was martyred, and that he lived again to impulse the minds of his following. There is Buddhism in the world today, because there was a Buddha centuries ago; Mohammedanism points to the fact that the man, Mohammed the prophet, lived and taught the Arabs; and there is Christianity today, because there was a Christ in Palestine, in Jerusalem. The tragedy of the Messiah culminated in the destruction of the Jewish capital and nation, the facts of which no historian has ever attempted to deny. The evidences of the existence of the Christ are sufficient to teach the Christian as well as the skeptic, many lessons; from them the agnostic may learn that the Man lived, and from them the Christian may learn that that Man, though born of a woman, was the Almighty Jehovah! It seems to us strange that after an age of familiarity with the facts of the conception, birth, development, ministry, martyrdom, and resurrection of the Messiah, that the Christian church should fail to comprehend the greater Messianic law—the law of the periodic manifestation of Deity in humanity. There are the facts as plain as day: The God man was born from the human race; he was the resurrection from the mortal world; the reincarnation of the dead; the Seed of human salvation; the fulness of the Godhead bodily—and these facts, if they mean anything at all, mean that in the Lord's coming again he will appear as a Man among men, the tangible Messiah, the Messenger of Truth, the Conqueror of death, the Savior of the world!

Every person conversant with theosophy knows that its theory of cosmogony or creation is allied with the modern conception of astronomy. The theosophist endeavors to demonstrate his conclusions by the expressed opinions of men engaged in promulgating the vagaries of nineteenth century science. But for the popular idea of astronomy, who would think of conceiving that the universe is infinite; that God fills all space, and that the progress of life is from planet to planet? Karma is to theosophy what gravitation is to the Newtonian system of astronomy; it is a name which is applied to all things mysterious. The astral light of theosophy corresponds to the astronomer's luminiferous ether; and according to both theosophy and astronomy, the universe is illimitable, its origin a mystery, and its destiny beyond the grasp of man. All systems that take for their bases any department of modern fallacious science, must necessarily fall when the premise is overthrown. How little would remain of theosophy and associated fallacies, if the popular system of astronomy were instantly destroyed! Madame Blavatsky trembled because of the insecurity of the "scientific" foundation of the occult system which she presumed to originate. "And the system of those two princes of science [Copernicus and Galileo]—a system which has revolutionized the whole world—how long will it be allowed to remain as a complete and undisturbed whole? Is it so that even three centuries and a half have not sufficed the men of exact science to construct one theory that not a single university professor would dare to challenge? And these quarreling hypothesisists still arraign as ignorant and superstitious those giant intellects of the past, who handled natural forces like world-building Titans, and raised mortality to an eminence where it allied itself with the gods! Strange fate of a century boasting to have elevated exact science to its apex of fame, and now invited to go back and begin its ABC of learning again!" It is even so; and with the scientists, who are agnostics, must go also those who have been nourished by their pabulum of fallacy!

Prof. Goldwin Smith, in viewing the relation and progress of science and religion, concludes that Christianity is already far advanced in the processes of decay and ultimate extinction. He believes that scientific and destructive criticisms have made every dogma of Christianity untenable—even that of the personal Deity. It does not require the sharpest intellect to perceive that the church is failing, nor that modern science is not in harmony with the idea of the personal Deity; but we should judge that it would require a shrewder mind than that of Prof. Smith, to show how modern science demonstrates that the idea of the personal God is untenable. Let us see what estimate he places upon science itself: "Towards what bourne, then, is thought, critical and scientific, apparently tending? It is apparently tending to the belief, from which our inmost nature recoils, in a universe without guidance or plan, the relation of man to which can never be known"! Again, "In the universe revealed by science, blind chance, in the form of evolution, rather than any determining authority, seems to reign." Of course this is all very consoling to the truthseeker; it is the voice of the agnostic, who knows that so called science is a mass of uncertain and unproven hypotheses! The possibility of the solution of the great problems of the universe is evident from the fact that the hope of solution is instinctive in the human heart—so much that the Professor himself admits that our inmost nature recoils against the conclusions of agnosticism! Let the world flounder in the meshes of modern "scientific" delusions until it is willing to exchange the uncertainties of fallible fallacies for the certainties of the infallible Truth of Koreshan Science, which demonstrates the personality and humanity of Deity.

The army canteen is an institution of the Government to supply the soldiers with intoxicants. It is a Government saloon, which follows the army wherever it goes; it is in the fort, in the field, in the camp, and in the line of march. It is to the soldier what the saloon is to men, young and old, at home; it debauches the man, destroys brain power, and deadens the moral sense. The House of Representatives opposes the canteen, and in a bill relating to the reorganization of the army, the House inserted an anti canteen clause, looking to the abolition of this curse. The canteen is sustained by the Government, and its officials favor the institution. The secretary of war is spending hours before the Senate committee on military affairs, urging its members to vote for the retention of the canteen, holding that the "canteen or post exchange is an important factor in army life, from a social point of view." It is not very surprising that government representatives should oppose the House bill; the whiskey trust is sufficiently powerful to organize an effective lobby for the purpose of urging legislation in its favor. However, it is surprising to some minds that representatives of the greatest sects of Christendom should appear before the Senate committee on the same mission as that of the secretary of war! Archbishop Ireland and Bishop McGoldrick have made vigorous claims at Washington, concerning the great and lasting good that is being done by the canteen—that "it is in the interest of sobriety and good morals in the army." The church and the state join hands in the canteen curse; the government supplies the liquid fire, and the church furnishes the men to drink it, while the new century begins—and war continues!

Ruskin said that "Labor without art is brutality." There is plenty of both labor and brutality in the modern civilized world; labor, because performance of use is a drudgery under the competitive system; brutality, because it is in the head and heart of the human kind. One has only to become cognizant of the facts of human depravity, to reach the conclusion that not only strains of savage blood course the veins of the civilized, but that the blood of the modern world is the blood of barbarism! The following demonstrate the character of civilization as it obtains at the beginning of the twentieth century: The unhappiness of the modern home; the demand for satisfaction of appetites and gratification of passions; the deaths and injuries resulting from college games; lack of refinement and general brutal disregard of the welfare of the neighbor; general dissipation and debauch; grinding monopolies and strike riots; robbery—both public and private; general dishonesty and hypocrisy; the world-wide business of making drunkards and criminals; the superstitions of Christendom; and the warfare of Christian nations. It would be doing the peoples of China and India a gross injustice to say that we found these evidences of barbarity within their borders—we find them rather, in the circle of the so called enlightened civilization of Europe and America!

Dr. Peebles reviews the hope of the Adventists, grows enthusiastic over the fact that the Lord is coming again, and suggests that if the Lord should come in the common atmosphere with a retinue of angels in the clouds, he would be as much of a stranger in appearance as Plato, Socrates, or Alfred the Great; and suggests further, that he should be very much rejoiced to see Jesus come again in the flesh. The question of recognition of the Christ is one of great moment; the Messiah comes, and thousands do not know him. The Jewish church was still looking for another, while the One was present; and that One suffered martyrdom at the hands of those whom the priests blessed and the prophets taught. The credentials of the Messiah are the marks of authority which come with him; they are not what the people have feigned to make for him—not what they have dreamed that he has. Look for a modern Man—one who has come down through the age with the human stream, taking on the world's corruptions while being fitted to redeem humanity from its evils. Koreshanity proclaims the fact of the presence of the Messiah, the God of truth, the Lord of wisdom!

Ian Maclaren (Rev. John Watson), a representative orthodox clergyman, says: "One fears that the blight of the commonplace is settling upon the church, which ought to be an overflowing fountain of enthusiasm and the home of spiritual romance." This is putting a startling fact concerning the collapse of the church in too mild a form; it is the expression of one not awake to the fact that the church craft nears the terrible Niagara; it is now in the rapids, where the rifling rocks tear barks asunder in the inevitable drift. The wide-awake know that the consequences of an age of apostasy are settling upon the church which, instead of being a mere shell, a corpse, should be a body teeming with life! The church has lost its power and its purity; it has perverted its spirit and desecrated its temples. Its condition is corrupt, and its relations competitive; it is broken down, and crumbling to pieces; and with it, the old state passes away to give place to the institutions of the new order.

Darwin wrote of the "Descent of Man." That man has fallen from the altitude of perfection is obvious—the fact that degeneracy prevails is proof that man has been, and is susceptible of being, regenerated. Darwin endeavored to do one of two things: To lower man to the level of the baboon, or to elevate the baboon to the plane of humanity—at least he brought the planes so nearly together that only a "missing link" is necessary to complete his chain of evolution. It appears that the border line between the animal and human kingdoms has been obliterated at Grenoble, France, where the whole town population recently attended the funeral of a chimpanzee, and erected a bronze statue in honor of the animal!

The highest conception that the immortality faddists have of immortality, is the mere continued existence of the mortal, dual state. A corpuscle in the plant is visible, divided; we may isolate it, and preserve it indefinitely, but it would still be visible—mortal. The attainment of that degree of immortality which obtains in the plant is in reaching the seed, the state of biunity—male and female in one form. To put on immortality is to experience a radical anatomical transformation, the processes of birth into a new natural kingdom, of the character of which modern theorists have no conception.

Maurice Maeterlinck, a Belgian author and philosopher, says that "an absolutely just man can hardly be found under the present system; if there were such a man he would certainly be in danger of being taken for a crank and of being treated as such." There now! that explains why Jesus was persecuted, and why the Founder of Koreshanity is vilified by the modern pulpit and press. All the people are not all right on all questions all the time; but they can always agree upon who is the good man, because they unanimously treat him as the devil!

If it is impossible for man to know God and his universe of creation, it is equally impossible for God to reveal himself and the knowledge of his creation to man. We hold that that which man is incapable of comprehending, that which is not susceptible of being revealed, does not exist. God and his universe are limited and knowable; his manifestations are finite and tangible; and his truth is definite and comprehensible. It is possible for man to know all that God knows, else no man can become the offspring of Deity and of the universe.

"The church moves forward to the scenes of the twentieth century." That is nothing; the criminal moves forward to the scenes of the scaffold. The Jewish church moved briskly into the first century of the Christian era—moved to its doom! The Christian church enters the twentieth century with all its corruptions; it enters the judgment. The church was safer on the eighteen side of the century mark; the pivotal year of 1900 brings accelerated motion and hastens the consummation.

There is no equality in the world: none in riches nor in poverty; none in intellectual strength and moral worth; none in rewards and punishments; none in rights and wrongs of man. The idea of equality is a democratic dream never to be fulfilled, because equality is impossible—there are no two thoughts, no two brain cells, no two men, no two stars, exactly alike and equal in every particular.

The newspapers announce that Prof. Chamberlain, of the University of Chicago, has published a "working hypothesis" concerning the sun's motion in space, for the purpose of accounting for pre historic glaciers. Men who are not able to perform rational mental work, always resort to hypotheses to do the work for them—hence, the kind of rubbish which fills the text books!

If it were true that "life is that intelligent essence of divinity diffused throughout all space, and infused in everything both animate and inanimate," life would certainly be the same wherever manifest; from which it would follow that Darwin was as rational as a baboon, and the clergyman as wise as a vulture!

Koreshanity does not hope to succeed by mere agitation of the masses; it will develop from a specific Head and radical nucleus at an accelerated ratio of progress, until it sweeps every evil from the face of the earth! The coming kingdom is the great monopoly of righteousness, the gigantic trust of the Gods.

People talk of the closing of the century, and yet imagine that time moves in straight lines. The century closes when its circle of a hundred years is completed; an age closes when the cycle rounds out the perfect cell. Even the hours are circles—especially on the clock face!

If modern science were true—that is, if it were knowledge, there would be no agnostics; the fact that there are hundreds of thousands of avowed agnostics in the world today, constitutes a startling evidence that modern hypotheses have never been proven to be true!

The American flag represents the rulers and the ruled; the stars are worn in the crowns of the money kings, while the stripes are borne on the backs of the money slaves!

Blackstone is authority on law at the close of the dark ages; but the light of the law of the new era will proceed from the White Stone of Koreshanity.

The Administration touched upon the question of subsidizing American ships; and it is now waiting for the storm of opposition to subside!

Contestants at the beginning of the battle of life and death, two may be; but at the end of the conflict one is Victor, and the other vanquished.

The clergyman points to things which he cannot understand to prove that God is incomprehensible!

The direction of God's walk in humanity is indicated by the steps of universal progress.

Men who are full of themselves have no room for broad conceptions of the universe of life.

No man who understands a single fact thoroughly can possibly be an agnostic.

THE EDITOR.

How Koreshanity will Convert the World.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—After a year's perusal of THE FLAMING SWORD I am not, by any means, fully convinced that all claims and theories of KORESH are absolutely correct. I am willing to admit that this may be because I have not sense enough to thoroughly understand his doctrines; one needs to have a good education in the various sciences to intelligently follow and comprehend his writings. About the only thing that causes me to think that the Koreshan System may be correct, is the mechanical proof you give of the earth's form. I can find no loop-hole of escape from it. I am not prejudiced in the least, and would gladly believe the entire System if I could; and no doubt there are others who feel the same way.

It puzzles me to know how KORESH intends to get all this motley array of humanity—as varied in action, thought, and desire as is the movement of colors in the kaleidoscope—to unite in harmony on his System, and, greater still, how he expects to get them to live up to its teachings. It seems to me like putting all the beasts of the world into one pen and expecting them to be friends. There are millions of people today who have never heard of the Christ and the religion he founded, and it is now 1900 years old. How, then, does KORESH expect to convert the world in a generation or two? He has so far claimed that Koreshanity is to supplant Christianity; but what about Mohammedanism and Buddhism and the other great religions? Unless they fall also, and the members become Koreshans in thought and action, where does the brotherhood of mankind come in?

There have not been many converts made for the length of time that KORESH has been expounding his System. This may be partly because it goes too much against the grain of modern thought, and partly because the learned articles on paper are not as effective in making converts as deeds. Deeds speak louder than words. The claims of KORESH are perhaps no more startling than were those of the Christ in his day; yet, according to the Bible, in less than three years he had followers by the thousands, notwithstanding the fact that he had no such things as the modern mail system and printing-press with which to spread his gospel throughout the world.—Wm. B., Orange, Tex.

The multitudes followed Jesus previous to his martyrdom, because he cured their diseases free of charge, and supplied them with food. He had no large following during these years; to only a select few did he teach his radical doctrines, and he cautioned them not to reveal the fact that he was the Christ until he should rise from the dead. It was not His purpose to publicly promulgate his claims in plain terms, but only in such a way that those who were prepared to recognize might be enabled to do so. At the time of His crucifixion, his disciples were few—numbering little more than 500 persons. If Jesus had remained in the flesh, and had taught his doctrines by every possible means of publication of his doctrines, he would not have become the exalted character in humanity that he is today. He employed another factor, through which his system rapidly spread; it was not that of performing miracles, but that of projecting himself into his following!

In the winter of the world's discontent, one may look about him at the decay; the corrupt institutions of the world; the depravity of the human heart; at the stubble and the dead wood; at the mental deadness and moral rottenness, and ask, How are you going to make perfection out of all this stuff? What benefit will it be to gather up all this stuff and endeavor to construct from it a system of human society? Notwithstanding the fact that such a course would be the most obviously ridiculous thing to do, it is the method employed by all modern so called reformers. They cannot hope for success; and if one loses sight of the great factor, the secret of which is in the possession of the Koreshan Scientist, it is not surprising that the question as to how Koreshanity expects to become successful, is puzzling.

The secret of life is in the seed; the seed contains the potencies of life, and when planted in the soil may build up a new structure. Jesus sowed the seed of divine life in his following, and a vigorous church was the result; he was in it; he impelled the thousands and the millions, and moved them in harmony; he destroyed discord; he produced an organic body which has moved the world. What Jesus was to philosophy, Koresh is to science—that is, divine truth is now scientific. We are now preparing the soil; and the time is at hand when the scientific Head of the Koreshan System will become, through processes of theocrasis, the mighty power, the life-giving potency, the accelerating and irresistible force which will be felt throughout the world.

When the great consummation comes; when the revolution has thrown down all existing systems of evil and fallacy; when through revolution the world is prepared to receive the truth; when the immortal Men in the flesh walk the earth; when corresponding changes occur in the physical cosmos and astronomical phenomena, there will be no minds that will resist the flowing, swelling tide of life and truth which, as a great wave, will sweep the world!

There will be 144,000 immortal Sons of God; they will be members of the divine Brotherhood; but below them there will be all the grades of humanity in the commonwealth and the commonwealth of life; and during the ages of light to come, every man will reach the plane of his aspirations, and salvation from the curse will be universal. We are approaching the end; ages of progress have prepared the world for rapid acceleration when the signal is given, when the Messiah performs his functions, and his disciples their work of establishing the New Order.

Public vs. Private Monopoly.

Use and Abuse of Public Utilities; Private Concerns Should not Conduct the Business of Nations!

Wrong always reacts upon the wrong doer. When the extortion of the railroad and the greed of the usurer have changed homes of independent farmers into quarters for poor tenants, they will have permanently destroyed or crippled their hope of future gains. Vastly less of merchandise, machinery, stock, everything that a well-to-do people consumes in vast quantities, and that constitutes the security of the usurer, will be required in the country. Shallow political economists will cry "overproduction," and want more "protection against the pauper labor of Europe."

Editors of so called religious papers, who know something about religion of some kind, but nothing about the causes that produce economic effects; college presidents and officers and boards of trust, who are holding out their hands for donations to the men who are rich and increased in goods from the proceeds of monopoly in its various forms, whether of money, transportation, corn or cotton, coal or oil, or the thousand things men corner for gain; doctors of divinity and ministers, often themselves educated by the so called charity of men who have grown rich by plundering under the forms of law, who now seek to compound the matter with conscience by donating a part of their pelf to educate men to teach that their practices are right and consistent with love to God and man, all these—in addition to the secular press and secular teachers of every kind, with some noble exceptions, who seldom or never have anything to say against the man who takes usury, however much he takes advantage of the necessities of his victim, who may be by profession his brother Christian—censure and reproach the man who, after struggling for years, falls under his burden of debt, that is always growing by usury.

One would think from their talk that it was all right for men to lend money, but very wrong for others to borrow, unless they were rich enough not to need to do so at all. If it is wrong for poor people to borrow, it must be wrong for rich people to lend to them. If poor people did not borrow, the occupation of the usurer would speedily come to an end.

But we are told that railroad stocks are owned as investments by a large number of poor people, and often constitute the entire means of support of people who would otherwise be helpless. These are the "gnats" that the big spiders prey upon by the way of express or fast freight lines, sleeping-car companies, dining-car companies, and other rings composed of large stockholders and high officials who absorb the lion's share of a road's earnings, and deceive the public as to the real extent of the extortion practised upon them. In the end, such investors, instead of being benefited, are usually skinned out of the whole or a large part of their money invested.

While riding on the cars in the state of Iowa, I was obliged to listen to the conversation of a prominent railroad man and high bank official, who described in glowing terms the way the banks, including his own, by means of similar inner rings of the principal officers, organized into a loan and trust company, whose officers, being also the bank officers, borrowed most of the bank's money of themselves at a low rate of interest and re-let it to the dear public at a very high rate of interest, thus fleecing both the bank and the poor people who were stockholders, and the people who had to borrow. The bank reports showed that their rate of interest was reasonable, and the dividends to ordinary stockholders did not seem large, and quid nuncs who never see below the surface, could say banks are very reasonable in their charges and cannot be, as fanatics charge, great means of oppression; but the poor people who were unmercifully skinned seldom are heard in the ordinary papers, and their sufferings pass unnoticed and unknown by the mass of men.

Railroads, telegraphs, and telephones are not like ordinary private property, but are in their very nature public interests. No owner of other private property can have other men's property or that which belongs to the public, condemned and take it for its own use. A public highway is opened, and private property taken for it on the ground that it belongs to the public at large and on no other ground, and yet land belonging to a private owner is taken for a railroad, and its owner is informed that the railroad is exclusively a private road, although it may damage his property far more than the public highway that generally runs on government lines.

By private and corporate donations to build them, and subsidies and land grants from government, they have cost the country one way or another probably about as much as their present value. In steals of one kind and another the public is made to pay for them over again every few years, and yet they are exclusively owned by private companies. They buy legislatures, choose governors and judges, manage parties by means of political lawyers heavily salaried for that purpose, and scoff at justice.

If government is under obligation to protect the property interests of its subjects, and in some cases even their lives, it cannot long choose but own the railroads and telegraph and telephone lines; control in any other way is impossible. As in the case of a post-office, government can mete out equal and exact justice to all without which it fails entirely to perform its proper functions.

Some of the more obvious benefits of government control are:

1. Freedom from the loss and danger to the public and to the employe, of strikes.
2. Freedom from the great inconvenience and cost of transfers from one road to another.
3. Greatly lessened expense for heavily salaried officers for so many different roads. Often these salaries are far higher than the salary of any government officer except the President of the United States.
4. Exemption from the loss and trouble of roads in bankruptcy.
5. If rightly managed, freedom from the load of usury that breaks down first the roads and then their patrons.
6. Exemption from the moral corruption and material loss of stock-watering, railroad-wrecking, and the deadly influence of the vast fortunes thus obtained.
7. Freedom from unjust discriminations that are fast increasing the numbers of the very rich and the very poor.
8. Freedom from the deadly example of a power in the state that is above the state, and that defies its laws and tramples them under its feet.

To be free from all these, the state and the citizens could afford to pay even more than the present high rates of transportation, but, in all probability would not have to pay more than half so much.—From "National Suicide," by Prof. O. F. L'Amoreaux.

Excessive Cost and Waste.

Gotham's Enormous Tax Budget Amounts to One Fourth Entire Annual Cost of the British Empire!

The New York City tax budget for 1901 is ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS! This means that every man, woman, and child in the city will be taxed at the rate of thirty dollars per head for the support of certain branches of the municipal government for the year.

One hundred million dollars! This is double the cost of the government of Mexico, with its 15,000,000 inhabitants, including the cost of Mexico's army and navy. It is almost a third of the cost of the government of the German empire, including the support of that country's immense army, its great navy, and its railroads, and the interest on its debt; and Germany has a population of 52,000,000.

It is a quarter as great as the cost of the government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, including its army, its gigantic navy, and the interest on its debt; and the United Kingdom's population is in the neighborhood of 40,000,000. France's burden of taxation is crushing that wealthy nation of 40,000,000 of inhabitants, with its great army and navy, and the interest on its colossal debt—the largest that any country in the world carries—yet New York City's government costs a sixth as much as that of France.

The expenditure of the government of the United States in 1860, when the country's population was 31,000,000, was $63,000,000, or not very much more than half of the yearly cost of the support of the government of New York City at the present time. The cost of the United States government in the present year, when the country's population is in excess of 76,000,000, will be but little more than five times as great as that of the city of New York, although the United States at this moment is supporting an army of 100,000 men, is building a big navy, has just been engaged in a war in China, and has been participating in one in the Philippines for almost two years.

This one hundred million dollars represents the earnings of a quarter of a million wage-workers for a year. At five dollars per week for each individual it would keep nearly 400,000 persons a year, and the average cost of living in this country is considerably less than five dollars per week for each person. The value of the gold and silver produced in this country in 1890 was but $99,000,000; of anthracite coal but $66,000,000, and of iron-ore but $33,251,000. The taxes of the people of New York City are greater per year than the value of the country's production of gold and silver, one third more than the value of the entire amount of anthracite coal, and three times as great as the value of the iron-ore mined in the country in 1890.

Koresh at Washington.

One hundred million dollars! This is in excess of five times the cost of carrying on the government of the imperial state of New York, with a population considerably more than 7,000,000. Excluding the State's income from indirect taxation, it is ten times as great as the commonwealth's tax levy for the present year. The state maintains 638 miles of canals, numerous normal schools, charitable institutions, asylums for the insane and other wards of the community, reformatories, prisons, courts, and also bears a large share of the cost of the national guard. All these items, as well as a considerable percentage of the cost of public schools, improving roads, abolishing grade-crossings, together with the entire expense of carrying on all departments of the State government, are met by a tax-levy not one tenth as large as that of the city of New York, with a population of less than 4,000,000.

Enormous as is this one hundred million dollars that is to be raised by direct taxation, it does not represent the cost of government by Richard Croker for one year. The departments of water-supply and of docks and ferries are supported by their own revenues. The city has other income—not, because of official remissness, as much as it might have—from franchises, rent of markets, and other property, permits, and from a variety of other sources.—EDWARD ERSKINE, in Leslie's Weekly.

The Koreshan Astronomy.

An English Astrological Publication Notices our Challenge to Editors and Outlines the System.

THE FLAMING SWORD offers $1,000 reward to the editor of any journal that will publish a scientific refutation of the Koreshan Cosmogony, or, what would be its equivalent, a single fact in demonstration of the theory that the Earth is convex, and that we live on its exterior surface, or in support of any other theory of the shape of the world than the universe as a cell with its habitable surface concave. That journal utters this as a basis of its System of Cosmogony:

There is nothing outside of the earth. The planets are mercurial discs passing between the metallic strata of the earth's shell. We see their reflection in the physical heavens; these reflections are the planets that the astronomers talk about. The sun is in the center of the earth, the positive pole of the great galvanic magnetic battery. We see its projection on the upper stratum of our atmosphere, about 1,000 miles distant at noon time.

We make the examination of the thickness of the earth's shell from the known ratios of specific gravity of the substances of which the shell is composed. We know the specific gravity of hydrogen, of the atmosphere, of water, and of each of the primary geologic, mineral, and metallic strata. Having a knowledge of the depth and weight of the atmosphere, the amount of water in the earth, and such like data, we establish a relation of ratios, from which we compute the thickness of each stratum of the shell—the aggregate about 100 miles.

The projected sun moves in a spiral, covering a belt of 47° in the heavens above us. The light from the projection covers one-half of the concave surface. On June 21, the hemisphere of light reaches 23½° above the north pole, and on December 21, 23½° beyond the south pole; the long days of the poles and change of season is thus obtained.

The discovery of the basis of all science, the law of transmutation, and the fact of the concavity of the earth's surface, that the earth is a cell, constitutes the premise of the Koreshan conclusion. A correct premise leads to correct conclusions. The Founder of Koreshanism demonstrates his premise; correct conclusions are inevitable.—SEPHARIAL, in Coming Events, London, June, 1900.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

Leslie's Weekly.—A novel innovation is made in the gorgeous Christmas number of Leslie's Weekly, now on sale. This beautiful issue, which is enclosed in a cover of rare beauty, printed in ten colors, embraces three fine drawings: The Young Musician's Christmas Gift (double page); Fishing for Presents; and The Interrupted Christmas Dinner (a Revolutionary incident)—all these by able artists well known to the public. The pictures are printed on heavy plate paper, suitable for framing. They are not bound but are loose, so that each one can be framed for sitting-room, parlor, office, or library. The pictures in any art store would bring more than the price of the entire Christmas number of Leslie's Weekly, which is 25 cents. If the supply at the news-stand is exhausted, copies can be had by addressing, Publishers Leslie's Weekly, 110 Fifth ave., New York, N. Y.

Saturday Evening Post.—We are pleased with the Christmas number of this popular weekly; it is a special double number in appropriate and artistic colors, finely illustrated, while the pictures in words are just as beautiful. The entire number is replete with things which please people who enjoy Christmas, for in its make-up there is ingenuity manifest and literary ability displayed. It is a high-toned and worthy publication, one of moral excellence and literary taste; it is a journal of culture and refinement. All its departments are interesting, especially the editorial, stories, and contributions; and it comes at the surprisingly low price of 5 cents per copy. Send for one. Curtis Publishing Co., 425 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Interpreter.—We are pleased to note the appearance of this neat little 8-page journal, edited by Major Ogden Whitlock, Room 30, Granite Building, Denver, Colo. We commend it to our readers—first, because the Major is interested in Koreshanity; and second, because it manifests some taste and ability. We welcome it. For the present it is free—without subscription price; send your name and give its editor substantial encouragement. We reprinted an article on Koreshan Cosmogony from The Interpreter, in the last issue of THE FLAMING SWORD. The time is coming when thousands of publications will enter the field of Koreshan Journalism to battle against fallacy!

Prof. Totten's New Book.—We advertise in another column The Gospel of History, Prof. Totten's literal, interwoven translation of the four Gospels of the New Testament. This work we will favorably review very shortly. At the present time, we will say that we have a bit of Christmas greeting from Prof. Totten, in which he offers the book during December and until present edition is exhausted, for exactly half price—for $1.00 (one copy only to one address.) This is a bargain; the Professor calls it a Christmas gift to professed Adventists. Address at once, Our Race Publishing Co., New Haven, Conn.

Cram's Magazine.—This is a monthly journal of history, geography, and topics of the day, a magazine of excellence. California Big Trees is a superbly illustrated article; and The World's Largest Business House is a review of the U. S. Post-Office Department and its mail business. The departments of this magazine embrace reviews, editorials, historical sketches, and stories. Woman and Her World; Timothy Thinkabit's Talk; and The World's Doings are full of valuable information. Single copies, 25 cents. Geo. F. Cram, 61-63 Plymouth Place, Chicago, Ill.

We have established four new departments to our work. Orders promptly filled by mail or express. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

Our High-Grade, Hand-Finished Razor Strops.

A good razor is of little use unless it has a fine edge, and that cannot be obtained in any other way than with a good strop and a knowledge of how to use the same and keep it in condition. A strop in poor shape means a razor in poor condition. Full directions with every strop.

We manufacture our celebrated High-Grade Razor Strops, the best strops manufactured. If you shave, you need one; you would be delighted with one of these. The prices are low considering the superior quality of the goods and workmanship. Single, horse-hide, 50c. Double swing shell and canvas, several grades, from 75c to $1.25. Extra fine material and finish, $1.50. Packed in neat box. Also strops at 10c., 25c., and 40c.—send 8c. for postage on orders less than 50c. Mail orders a specialty.

The Literature of Koreshanity

Uncovers the Mystery of Ages.

THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A glimpse of Koreshan Universology, in its application to human thought and life, preparatory to the establishment of the Social Theocratic System, called the Kingdom of God, may be obtained by a careful study of fundamental principles.

The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, Theocracy, and Social Economy.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of universal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communist. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Whole No. 421

The Great Sacrifice for the Love of Life.

The Exchange of Mortality for Immortality; the Severing of old Ties and the Leaving of All for the Sake of Truth; the Seeds of Death and Germs of Life.

THE TRUTH AS TRUTH is acceptable to some, but the life which the truth inculcates seems to be hard to acquire. To love God with all the heart is good as a theory, but when it comes to practice, earthly ties are the most binding, and people are not willing to sever one jot or tittle of the relations begotten in sin and the consequences of the operation of segregative forces, for the more enduring affinities which alone can establish the kingdom of heaven. When men so love the Word as to be willing to sacrifice the ties of the sensual flesh,—the ties which so called Christianity regards as sacred,—then will progress be made in the new order of things.

In times of war, there are many no doubt who, actuated by motives of patriotism, are willing to sacrifice home, family, and associations; and great honors are awarded those so imbued with the love of country that they would sacrifice home and life, if necessary, to save the Government from disruption. The love of God is greater than the love of country, and as a theory is so regarded by the church and the world; but practically it is a farce.

In heaven, the ties of Nature are not known. The loves which comprise the fellowship of the kingdom of God are distinct from family or consanguine affiliation, and wrought of principles not to be compared even with the ties of the sensual existence. These last shall be obliterated by the operation of the principles of eternal life. When a thing of hell has been nurtured in the bosom of the church, and the religious element of man's nature has been indoctrinated into an inherent conviction of its sanctity, if any man dare to touch adversely upon the sacredness of falsely constituted sacraments, like those of marriage and the family institution, he would simply thrust his hand into the fire, knowing the consequences. It is only by laying the axe at the root of the tree, and by so doing strike at the germ of mortality, thus extirpating the seeds of death, that the life of God can be made manifest to the world.

The principles upon which the kingdom of God is to be established, are in direct contrast to those of natural life; and he who wars for the kingdom makes war upon the sacred and holy (?) things of a corrupt church and people. The world is preparing gradually for the change to come. It would not be strange if, after all, the beginnings of the new church were to be found in the outcasts of the earth. "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in that my house may be filled," was said because those who were expected to come on invitation had refused.

If there are any to be compelled, it will be such as those who, in their qualities of receptivity, are subject to the operation of the intellectual and spiritual powers of those who preach the new Gospel. A love for this truth—so transcendent as to cause every other consideration to sink into obscurity, especially when conflicting with the love in question—is the first step toward the accomplishment of the end this truth has in view. There is unquestionably a divine order in process of organic construction, which will be established though all the forces of hell and earth conspire to thwart the purpose and end.

The office to which the few who shall be accounted worthy are chosen, is of sufficient honor to warrant the greatest sacrifices on the part of those who shall constitute the firstfruits of the resurrection. It is a poor general who yields defeat to the first repulse, and they are poor soldiers who will not follow their leader into a renewal of attack because of repulse in the first, second, or third engagement. Whosoever regards earthly ties of more value than this cause, is not worthy of the cause; and whosoever holds the ties engendered by the processes of sin as more sacred than such as can bind men to God, cannot have part in the resurrection to Life. It was said to Jesus: "Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee." "Who is my mother, and who are my brethren?" "Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." "Whosoever loveth father, mother, brother, sister, husband, and wife more than me is not worthy of me."

Take yourself, with your family ties, back to the time of Jesus. Consider yourself as regarding the family relation to be the most sacred of ties, and then listen to the man—regarded by the populace and mass as a pretender, and by the literati as a plebian—who makes the declaration that a love to him, personally, should stand before and in preference to any earthly tie, no matter how sacred. Can you not imagine it a cause for the wrath of the people, and an aggravation worthy of the fate which came upon the Lord? What was true in that day is preëminently true in this day. The common earthly ties of this material and mortal plane of being, (the ties which belong to mortality, and upon which mortal existence depends,) are filthy rags whose obliteration by the fire and smoke of heavenly influx is "a consummation devoutly to be wished."

Why should Christians wince at the practical application of their own theories? How often have they who desire to awaken the worldling to a sense of his danger, portrayed the divine vengeance as separating husband and wife, parents and children, brothers and sisters, sending some to endless torment, and receiving the elect into habitations of glory! Of course, these Sunderings always result in joy to those who accept the overtures of the gospel, no matter what the fate of those so ruthlessly torn by the hand of divine vengeance from the loves to which they so fondly cling. Here, at least upon the part of the regenerated, a satisfaction is given in superdominance of the new-found joys which utterly annihilate the old affections. This gospel is more humane, though painful, no doubt to those who will not accept. We have transposed time and place as points at which the breaking of ties is to be effected. The coming of the Lord will no doubt be a time of trouble, but the trouble will be to those who reject the everlasting Gospel.

Reaping the Harvest of Competism.

The Evils of Adulterated Christianity and Corrupted Civilization; the Millionaire's Robbery and the Plunderer's Scheme of Abduction; the Coming Retribution.

THE SUPREME OBJECTIVE point of the present commercial impulse, as founded upon the competitive system, is the possession of gold. The supreme effort, founded upon the love of money, is to obtain it at any sacrifice, even of honor and the expectation of righteousness and an immortal future. "With the manipulation of gold," says the modern Shylock, "I can command the honor and the respect of men, and can control the legislative halls of empire throughout the world. I must possess this all-potent medium of power at any and every cost." The love of money, as now cultivated, induces mankind to believe that one kind of robbery is as moral if not as legal as another,—but the illegalized operator must be careful to elude the guardians of public safety. "If the millionaire may institute the robber trust and steal his millions, and thus make slaves of tens of thousands, why may not I," says the brute, driven to desperation,

"compel the robber millionaire to disgorge upon the basis of any proposition my fertile brain may invent or devise?"

The commercial manipulator, unconsciously to himself, is teaching men to become shrewd in the tactics of enterprise, and to make them bold in the pursuits of financial acquisition and in the evasion of moral as well as civil law. Is it anywise astonishing, that schemes for plunder are hatched and executed by cut-throats and banditti, and that they take advantage of the methods of education adopted in the great curricula of modern mercantile, commercial, and financial training? If one millionaire is compelled to disgorge to the tune of $25,000, let him remember that it is because he taught the lesson and is reaping the legitimate reward of the modern commercial methods.

The financial pirates of the world tell us that gold is the god, and they have exalted this god to the courts of honor. The world is being taught every day of its existence that men are of no account without the power which money gives; and no matter how dishonestly it is obtained, if we manage to evade the clutches of the law, we are not only safe, but highly honorable citizens of the state. This is the competitive system, and it bears its legitimate fruits,—ending in the great curse originally pronounced upon the serpent, now to be fulfilled in the consummate “woe” of that pronouncement. If the love of money is the root of all evil, then the original temptation was in the love of money; and this is the old serpent that beguiled the inceptive Adam. The abominable and hellish competitive system is maturing its fruits; and well has the prophet, looking down through the ages to the present time and to the conditions which competitism has wrought, said: “Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.”

The lesson of Cudahy’s $25,000 will not be lost to the agent on the road. He will see how easy it is to extract a quarter of a hundred thousand dollars. These plunderers who kidnaped the youthful son of the millionaire may be caught, but it will only be a lesson and an incentive to greater skill. When an inventor has racked his brain in the effort to produce a novel and wonderful mechanical device, many will exclaim: “Who can excel this marvel of ingenuity?” But no sooner is one device wrought, than some genius sets about to eclipse all that has gone before. What more infernal scheme from hell can be devised, more consummate in audacity and brilliant in execution, than the abduction of the Cudahy boy? The mind, under the lessons of the competitive impulse, and as the legitimate inspiration of competitism, will hasten to improve upon the lesson until no man of wealth can safely lay his head upon his pillow, or until haunted by the dreams of his evil genius, he tosses in expiation of his mercenary career.

The world will reap the fruit of its sowing. Humanity is sowing to the wind; it will and ought to reap the whirlwind. It will not accept the warning; it must suffer the penalty. We speak only as the prophet; we do not hate the rich—they know not what they do; they operate in the lines of their education, under the direct influence of an adulterated Christianity, which is responsible for all the abuses of modern commerce. If the prophet speaks evil of this day and generation, he speaks only what is in the hearts of men; not what he would, but what he beholds; hence he is compelled to predict evil, though he be cursed for so doing.

The only hope of the age is in the absolute destruction of the competitive system of production and distribution, and a return to and substitution of the communistic system introduced to the world by the Lord himself.

The Betrayal of the American Nation.

The Original Commonwealth and Government in Contrast with the Rule of the Money Power; the Robber System and the Remedy.

THE PEOPLE of this country own the Commonwealth; at least, that was the original plan of its construction. The plan of its administration, as originally conceived, was that the people, whose voice was the sole dictum of the Commonwealth, should rule the nation. They have attempted the administration of their interests through representatives in Congress assembled, but through the general tendency to corruption the people fail to be represented. Our Senate and House of Representatives are packed with conscienceless men, controlled by corrupt party demagogues who have given the people over—body and soul—to the manipulations, not of representatives in Congress; not of representatives of the people, but, if representatives at all, only such because they represent the power of mercenary authority and control by which the people are robbed, not represented.

The so called representatives of the people have lain heavy burdens upon their shoulders, burdens which augment with every succeeding year of political power, and which, though oppressive, are imposed under the alluring and specious promise of relief. Taxes like mountains are being piled upon the backs of an overburdened populace. What for? Why, to make their burden easy, is the reply of the political shark and trickster,—the wire-pulling organ-grinder who goes about leading by a cord the hoodwinked monkey of his conscienceless political control.

How does taxation help the people? Why, just this way, to be sure. We send our representatives to Congress, and they heap taxes upon us. The rich do not pay taxes, or if they do it is nothing compared to the taxation of the poor. The people are taxed, and the money goes into the treasury of the people. It is thence loaned to the rich at one per cent, and the people hire it back at from 6 to 10 or more per cent interest. It is a very intelligent people, metaphorically speaking, that will meet the burdens thus laid upon them by filling the treasury vaults with hard-earned money, and, through their representatives, loaning it to the financial nabobs at one per cent and then pay these same nabobs ten per cent for what already belongs to the people! It is a very intelligent community that will keep a party in power which, for nearly forty years, has been promising relief, and then meets those promises with the imposition of heavier burdens!

Does our remedy lie in driving away the well-filled and bloated absorbents of the people's life, and supplying their places with a more hungry swarm with still less conscience than their predecessors? This will not correct the evil. There can be but one remedy and but one method of its application. God and Nature alike—or God through revelation as given us by the prophets, and in the prophetic declarations of the kingdoms of Nature—have promised humanity a kingdom. The Lord Christ, its germinal beginning, is the archetype of the kingdom's greatness. His coming according to the promises of old, is the hope of the world; his baptism, the remedy for a languishing people.

There is no power in heaven nor in earth, short of the Lord's own growth in the human race, with a force of reconciliation sufficient to overcome evil. The Lord Christ, planted in the beginning of the age as the firstfruits of the Tree of Life, the firstfruits of the resurrection of the dead; the Lord Christ descending into humanity in the beginning of the Christian era; the Lord distributed through his broken body and made a part of the substance, the substance of the world he would redeem, must rise again, first in his personality, to lead his people, then, through his people, bringing them into the resurrected life he will unfold.

The world awaits its baptism—a sanctification for which some are prepared as the firstfruits of immortality. The great red dragon, hydra-headed and many horned, manifest in modern Christianity, spiritualism, theosophy, "christian science," socialism, and Adventism, seeks to devour the child of immortality so soon as it is born; but Koreshanity—in its recognition of the unity of the Godhead in a visible, human personality, the unity of God and man in the eternal covenant of God, with the humanity raised in his image and likeness—attests the power of Godliness and the virtue of God's law, and his promise to restore all things. The salvation of the world is in the rapid development of the Koreshan System of Unity, and the substitution of its kingdom for the kingdom of ungodliness.

Startling Phases of Present Issues.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

WHEN PRESIDENT KRUGER of the Transvaal reached Marseilles on the Dutch cruiser Gelderland, November 22, he made his way to his hotel amid cheering throngs of sympathetic people. The French republic welcomed him with characteristic effusion and ardent recognition of the principle for which he has been contending. At the banquet given in his honor, Mr. Kruger declared in his speech that the Boers would never surrender, and that if the two republics lost their independence it would be because all the citizens had been destroyed.

The Boers have been fighting for independence, and the reason they hold out so persistently is because there is no principle for which men are more ready to shed the last drop of their blood—and yet, in the absolute sense of the term, the idea is false and represents a perversion of wisdom. Interdependence not independence is the true law of divine and human relationship. The independent nation, like the independent man, is the one who does not want to hang together (Latin prefix in, and dependent, from de and pendere, to be pendant, to hang) with the rest; who prefers to step outside the bonds of unity.

"But" you ask, "must not a man have the courage of his convictions, assert himself, deliver his own message regardless of the world's opinion?" Certainly, he must dare to oppose the world if need be, but in so doing he does not and cannot become independent of his fellows, for if he respond to the monitions of the higher self, the interior mind, he is acting not for his own interest nor development, but from the purest love to the neighbor; it may well be that his neighbor misunderstands the motive and condemns the act. Later on, as the latter progresses he will understand, reflect, and approve.

God himself is not independent, but relies upon man to renew the substance of Deific life; moreover, He is bound by the laws of his own being, laws that make for righteousness, for the highest good of the greatest number, and for the perpetuity of the universe. So the man who claims to be independent is pushing himself beyond God; and the term as a term is one that is applicable in its just meaning only to phases of erroneous thought; of course, in common speech, it may be used without respect to its interior sense. When a nation or an individual is obliged to fight for liberty, which is not independence but, like free will, is the liberty or the freedom of the star to pursue its own orbit without tangling up the solar system by trying to get into some other star's orbit, it is always because a tyrannical force is exerted upon it from the outside.

There are two governmental issues before the world today. Republicanism and Imperialism are contending for supremacy, with a force which will test the quality of the two principles and determine which is better suited to the coming phase of social development. The subject may be discussed in its higher bearings quite apart from any opinion as to the justice of the Boer's quarrel with the Briton. The admiration, excited by the former's courage, must not be allowed to obscure the fact that he is fighting for a governmental form that has served its time and must be superseded by a greater.

In his nomination speech, Mr. Bryan truthfully stated that the election of 1900 was a contest between imperialism and democracy. The result of the contest has proclaimed a victory for the party which upholds the former. While the republicans are exulting in their triumph, they do not suspect that all unwittingly they have incorporated a principle which is destined to destroy their party as relentlessly as the laws of destiny forced (Edipus to slay his own father.

The republican party, whose name represents the form of government in this country, in its financial platform, its practical endorsement of wage slavery, the trust system, and the protective tariff, is in direct opposition to the principles of a righteous Imperialism. Every one of these measures tends toward division and disintegration,—that is, toward independent and tyrannical motion out of the orbit and away from the center, not toward concerted action. Republicanism aims in theory to be an orderly system of government by the people, but in practice it is every man for himself; let the strongest take the spoils.

Imperialism in its divine aspect vests the central power in one head, combining the unity of church and state in the person of the ruler who is the continent of wisdom and love—wisdom to direct and love to serve: "He that is greatest among you, let him be your servant." Every department of the body politic will act harmoniously when it acts in obedience to the supreme impulse from the center.

The same party cannot incorporate unity and division. The triumph of imperialism means the downfall of republicanism, as surely as the day succeeds the night. The republic must go; all existing forms of imperialism must go, because they are but antithetical phases of political life. Nation is warring against nation because the incoming of the new order is preceded by the destruction of the old. A little handful of Boers has vexed and weakened mighty England. Every one of the great powers has its secret fears, its parasitic foes. The French have been looking forward with dread to the closing days of the great Exposition. During its progress, party issues have been put aside by mutual consent, but the republic is hourly menaced by outbreaks from the anti-Semitic and the anti-Protestant factions. Ferdinand Brunetière, editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes, wrote not long ago that science had failed in a signal manner to interpret existence, and the hope of the world must lie in religion—a striking instance of perspicacity.

Koreshan Sociology holds that republicanism is a dead issue. The publicans, as KORESH has pointed out, were the taxgatherers, and re-publicanism is the iron rule of the taxgatherers come again to lay heavy burdens of taxation upon the people. Examine the recent proposal to remove some of the taxes imposed by the War Revenue Act. The plan of the House Ways and Means Committee contemplated, it is said, a reduction of about $30,000,000 in the revenue. What class of persons will be more directly benefited, and what articles of consumption will be rendered easier of purchase?

The proposal has been to abolish the taxes on bank checks, express receipts, telegrams, insurance policies, and proprietary articles. What relief does this afford the common people? It is not proposed to lessen the tax upon the most necessary commodities. The rise in the price of sugar has netted exactly $30,000,000 for the trust during the past year, a sum amounting to nearly two dollars a family. It is clear that the great corporations are going to profit most from such a reduction, while the trusts and monopolies rob the people of an equal sum.

Is there a vital germ in the old organism? Is there a true principle embodied in the republic as a political form? It has been repeatedly stated that the government of the Koreshan age will be Imperio-Republico-Regal. As such it will incorporate the true not the degenerate features of republicanism and democracy. In their root meaning, the two words are the same, the former being from the Latin, populus, the people; and the latter, meaning the strength of the people, from the Greek. Both refer directly to the common people as a national factor; and the existence of two opposing parties contending over the commonweal as the republican and democratic parties now contend, shows the downfall of the republic as a house divided against itself.

The Imperial system is patterned after the Grand Man, and represents the brain as the controlling center of motion and sensation. The people represent the body to be moved upon by the center, and the coming government as involving a republican element, implies the culture of the people into an obedient response to the monitions of the brain; it implies also a proper recognition and representation of the rights of the people.

The republic is not the acme of political development, but only an accessory feature, an element to be incorporated into the social constitution of the coming age. By the term republicanism, the democratic party is comprehended also in so far as it stands for the evils of competition.

Were it not for the fact that liberty of conscience is maintained and held sacred by the powers of atheism and infidelity, which weigh at least equally, or nearly so, with the divided or sectarian religions of the age, the hope of a new religion—a rebinding of God and man, could not exist.

Out of Darkness into Light.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

HER PARENTS entertained staunch opinions in favor of universal salvation. They expressed views neither orthodox nor acceptable to their neighbors, concerning the region where some contend, and many more then affected to believe, that God for his pleasure and glorification keeps countless souls in writhing forever, and adds to the number on all suitable opportunities. These opportunities were supposed to be mostly vested in creating from innocent nothingness, with foreknowledge of their doom, myriad souls to eternal damnation. According to one eminent divine of a time but slightly previous, the floors of the inferno were paved with the bones of infants not a span long. We speak of a half century ago. Since then religious sentiment, as changeful as modern science, has modified some of the more objectionable proclivities of its God. It has mostly curtailed him in the matter of baby-roasting, and upon some other negative lines, but has added little to his power and purpose on the score of any efficacious redemptive effort.

Our Girl—the little pitcher with the big ears—was early filled with faith in never-ending bliss to commence at the point where the name, date of birth, and demise should be ornately whittled into the marble, or plainly and simply painted upon the slab of pine. Her play-mates were sure that it was quite wicked to think that everybody would be saved; but “they were all wrong, so they were, cause why, father and mother say there is no such place as hell!” But one day a leaflet of the tract tribe found its way under her eyes. Miss Pitcher pounced upon it, and after some laborious spelling, wrung the meaning from this assemblage of letters: “Hell is a place where God punishes the wicked;” at which she cried out:

“O Mother! O Mother! there is a hell!”

“How do you know there is a hell?”

“‘Cause this book says there is a hell!”

From practical experience Miss Pitcher already knew that different people spoke different opinions; but a new and upon the whole, a comfortless vista of knowledge opened up when her mother made it clear that different people also wrote different opinions and had them printed. True, she was reassured and serene in the matter of her favorite theology; but the typed page had fallen from the high place where her childish veneration had enthroned it. It never again could be quite the same. Vaguely, life was more confused and difficult.

Disturbing influences uprooted the parental bias planted in the child. It was the opinion of two against the multitude, and our Girl crossed the threshold of womanhood and of an orthodox church almost simultaneously. Observation, thought, and experience ensued, met by words, forms, ceremonies, and lives of emptiness. Then came abandonment of the church, followed by the repudiation of the Book upon which it claimed to be founded; for in this Book she met more of the un-understandable, than in the sum of the residue of books. But though never in strict sense a Bible student, she understood enough of its spirit of directness and consecution to concede it a deep purpose; and sometimes a midnight awakening was filled with the creepy misgiving: “What if the Bible, with its warnings of hell, should be true?”

From church vacuity she turned to and exhausted a prevalent fallacy, and the next scene found her adrift upon a tempestuous sea, with nothing certain but uncertainty. And then the Interpreter came. The Bible took its rightful place as a source of divine knowledge, the one and only scientific book extant. The mysteries of the hells and of the heavens stood revealed. To know that the hells natural and spiritual are but so many degrees of discipline through which the unregenerated are passing to regeneration, did not make these schools of preparation called life, more hellish. The knowledge conveyed by the Interpreter gave power to the girl to woman grown, to earlier escape from the meshes which her own undesirableness and ignorance has woven about her.

When she reads: “No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven,” she herein discerns that all beings less than God, and so less than righteous, dwell in some degree of hell. She perceives that the history of our Lord through all his embodiments prior to his birth from the Virgin, are so many steps through the hells wherein “learned he obedience by the things which he suffered.” She knows it was of these hells that the Lord, as King David, expressed his knowledge and the conviction of his hope in these words: “Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell.” The remainder of this quotation—“Neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption,” she groups as naturally affiliated, with the first four words of this: “And being made perfect, He became the author of eternal salvation unto all of them that obey him.”

She considers that the reasonable deduction from the above words, is that the Lord Jesus was once imperfect or unholy; that his holiness was not outwrought in the embodiment which begun its career in the year one, for the message to the Virgin from the angel proclaims that the Christ was born a “Holy Thing.” “Sin entered the world, and death by sin;” “This corruptible must put on incorruption;” “Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell;” From these she gathers that sin, death, corruption (corruptible decay following death), and hell are yokefellows; that to escape one of them, one must escape all of them: that they are infernal compatibles, the first three being hinges to the gate of the last.

“When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying, death is swallowed up in victory.” This was the triumph of the Lord Christ; this is the path of progress for those who follow Him, and the Woman decided to follow. Now came the hand to hand conflict. There was but one way given by the Lord to those who inquired of him concerning eternal life, and across that way was written: “Keep the commandments.”

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY brings a tidal wave of expectancy; even in the words there is the sound of greatness which surpasses that of other centuries. There is a general feeling that we are nearing the greatest epoch of all history, the beginning of a new era; hundreds of thousands are looking for the millennium, and millions are anticipating an age of universal peace. What a wonderful century will the twentieth be if it fulfils the world's destiny! So strong is the hope that it will—that the world's ideals will be reached during the period of the coming hundred years, that the peoples of civilization delight to hear the quickening tread of time and the majestic march of progress. The great minds of the world are asking, What will the new century bring forth? There is bound to be a great impulse along all the lines of thought and life. The world's spring time is coming; the day is at hand. The verdure of the new world will manifest its virtue; beauty will be seen in bud and bloom, in foliage and flower, in stalk and seed; and the world will breathe the purified atmosphere of a perfected humanity. That which is now will then be in the past; it will be the old, the vanished. We see about us now all the present institutions and conditions of humanity—but the new century will witness a transformation in society and government; in industry and commerce; in religion and science; in literature and journalism; in thought and art; and in human life itself. The glories of the Twentieth Century will be the result of a powerful impulse, of a specific evolution, of a marvelous transformation. The new world will not be the continuation of the old; it will not be the old world with the mere sloughing off of a few present objectionable features. The new will be the manifestation of that which has been in development in the world of unseen life and mind for ages past. The great forces which move humanity must find their Pole and Pivot; their Genius and General; their Lawgiver and Leader, the chosen Man and Messenger, to express into the world of science the truths of life, that the divine energies may bring humanity into realization of all that Science reveals as possible. From the highest to the lowest the Light must proceed and pervade; the waters of life must wash away all that is impure; waves of enthusiasm must thrill the nerves of nations; the stream of life must flow on—currents of vital forces from the great biological battery must flow out in irresistible volt and volume for the blessing of the millions. The marvels of the Twentieth Century will be the achievements of Science. Korshanity holds the key that opens to the world the possibilities of the new century, the new age; it analyzes the past, reads the present, and forecasts the future, for its Science is the prescience of its Prophet. The century of greatness is here; the darkness with which it begins is that which precedes the dawn; the revolution of the old comes before the evolution of the new. The scientific Eye sees the gathering and the bursting of great storm clouds, the growing, the whirling, and the sweeping of a mighty vortex, before the calm of the new Day, before the success of its Science, before the glories of the Golden Age.

The world of art may express the universe of life. There is nothing in life nor death, nothing in heaven nor hell, that may not be revealed by the poet's pen or artist's brush; in the sculptor's clay or singer's voice. There never has been a gem of poetic inspiration, no masterpiece upon the canvas, no marvelous symphony, no thrilling drama, that was not true to Nature, that did not speak the universal language of humanity. All that is in the great human world of effect has been the subject of human arts. If it is possible to picture mortal passion, it is possible to portray immortal love; if it is possible for the poet to breathe substance from specific mental spheres, the man with the supremest desire, the loftiest aspiration, may come into conjunction with the powers of the Most High. Whatever the true artist may spread in colors; whatever the sculptor may chisel in stone or mold in clay; whatever character may be involved in the drama; whatever may be the subject of rhythmic, orchestral strains; whatever may be made to speak through forms of beauty either in Nature or Art, is but that which man has thought, which man has been, and which man may be. If art may display Nature in symbols; if human passion may be written on the music scale; if storm and calm on the sea of humanity, the mighty billows and the placid pools, may alike run from the painter's brush—if art may be true to humanity, the great world of effect, it may be true to the Creator, the Cause; for God, in his complex experiences through his manifold transformations in his ascent and descent through all kingdoms and planes, is expressed in all that we see, in all that we are, in all that we may be. But art can reveal nothing that is unknowable; it belongs to the world of knowable things. Art reveals God, because He is within reach of the human intellect and in touch with human love!

We are living in an age of excessive waste, of extravagance. There is no economy in any department of modern industry; there is no economy of life itself—life and the substance which maintains it are wasted; an enormous amount of energy is wasted in producing that of which no real use is made. The competitive system makes waste inevitable; and the feeling of personal liberty licenses people to destroy, to waste, not to build up, to conserve. It has been estimated that the people of Chicago alone expend over $67,000,000 a year for intoxicants—about $185,000 per day. This money would do wonders if turned into other channels—it would do all these: Employ 10,000 men at $1.50 per day; 2,000 teams at $4 per day; give 60,000 families $1 per day; pay the carfare and buy lunches for 250,000 workmen for one year, and suitable clothing for the same number; build 30 school houses; build a million dollar library, and support all the poor of the city in luxury, and have millions of dollars remaining for incidental purposes. To estimate the income of all the saloons of the United States, multiply the enormous aggregate of $67,000,000 by 35. But Christmas comes in for a moment's consideration of the people's waste. It costs Chicago $5,000,000 to celebrate a single day. Their Christmas trees, standing side by side, would extend 40 miles; there is a 70-mile line of pie; a 10-mile street full of oranges; their aggregate turkey would weigh as much as a skyscraper; the stockings hung up for Santa Claus hold 10,000 bushels; and the cost of decorations is enormous. If it costs Chicago $5,000,000 to celebrate Christmas, a nation of 70,000,000 people expends 35 times as much—and how enormous must be Christmas expenses throughout Christendom! At least for one day, Christian spirits cost more than spirits from the distillery!

The modern socialist makes a serious mistake when he supposes that the new era may be a peaceful evolution of the old. It is being held by many modern agitators, that the present heaping up of wealth is directly paving the way for nationalism, for government ownership and control of all business; and the coming of the trust will bless the world in the institution of the people's monopoly. It is impossible that the spirit of greed, the power of oppression, should voluntarily renew itself in righteousness; despotism will not willingly abdicate the throne in favor of the Goddess of Liberty. However, the trust is the signal of the approaching end. We have almost reached the limit of the evolution of the old order, and it can proceed but little further without a breaking of the shell. In every incubation there must be a collapse of the cell of development for the birth of the new life; there must be a revolution, the birth pangs of the old world. The present tendency to the establishment and conduct of great things on the universal scale, is but the shadow of the order that is coming—it is not a part of that which will be realized; it is but the dark reflex of that for which the world has waited, and that which the world will welcome. The greatest institutions of the ages have come from the hands of great men. Heroes are a necessity. Heroes are never democratic; but Nature has produced them, and nations have used them. They have headed great reforms and moved the hearts of millions. Let the modern reformers look for the Leader and the Teacher; the war-maker and the peace-maker; the destroyer and the builder—the Hero who must stand in the breach between the dangerous factions of the whirling vortex. The world must be revolutionized by the Pivot of power; it must be calmed by the Prophet of Peace!

The relation of center and circumference is so natural, so obvious, that it is strange that the human mind should ever conceive that the universe could exist without central nucleus and tangible shell. People of all ages have known of the circle and the sphere; they are so familiar, and their principles so universal in life, and thought, and Nature, that language itself is but the expression of the activities which relate the seed and plant, acorn and oak, sun and shell, Messiah and men. The idea of one great central sun has been entertained by all the world's great teachers, and by the people of all nations and ages. All great civilizations have taught that God is the great Sun of humanity, and that his truth is the light which shines out from the great Center to the circumference of the human world. Correspondingly, there must be a central sun of the physical cosmos, with its necessary material, tangible environ or crust. The ancients knew that the universe is enclosed in a shell, the cell walls of which constitute the great firmament of Nature. The principles of language, of law, and of life, force the conception of the Cellular Cosmogony. There is no other explanation of the great system of existence; no other system can corroborate its conclusions by the very roots and foundations of language itself. There is an awful lack in all other conceptions, because they are not true. Religion and reason, logic and law, demand that the ultimate form of truth shall be premised upon the scientific foundation of the cellular world; the great System has come, and in succeeding ages the entire world of humanity—with its government, society, and commerce—will be molded and renewed after this conception of the form of the cosmos and the processes of its creation.

History cannot be explained from any other standpoint than that of the science of human progress in re embodiment. According to the usual conception there could be no progress; there would be a continual coming of raw material, which would but touch the circumference of the great wheel of life and fly off as a tangent, not remaining in the crucible of human activity long enough to give character to an age! When substances are refined they pass from raw material to finished product. Humanity progresses because from age to age the one humanity is here. If there are refined characters, they are such because experience in thousands of embodiments has eliminated the coarse and the crude. If there are nations more enlightened and civilized than others, they are so because they are made up of people who have been all that the people of lower planes have been; their substance has been in other strata, in other fields and relations. The nations of humanity go down the stream of time together; in the progress of peoples, men come back from the spiritual world to the natural, because mind and matter co-ordinate and progress at the same rate, for the reason that progress is in the activities, the interdependent relation existing between the two states. History is the record of events of the one and only humanity that has ever been. One generation passes into the succeeding generation; the natural humanity of one age is the embodiment of humanity of the age preceding. The catastrophe of death breaks the continuity of life, of mind, of memory; but the people who are here now are the ones who made history through all the ages; because they participated in the events of the past, they are able to record their actions in the events of the world today.

The mystery of the seed is the mystery of life, because all life is propagated through its seed. But for the co ordinate activities of involution and evolution, there could be no dispensation, no ages, no cycles. One dispensation succeeds another, because the seed of the dispensation is planted to produce another period of progress. This is in accordance with the meaning of the word succeed—it is from sub, under, and cedere, to go; the seed goes away under the soil to perform its functions of perpetuity. Space extends from the center to the circumference of the physical cosmos; and correspondingly, the time of a dispensation extends from seed to harvest, from the sowing of the Man till the resurrection. Jesus was the promised Seed to be sown; he came to go away. He said if he went not away he could be of no benefit to his disciples; he went away as the seed goes, that another dispensation might succeed the one from which he was generated; that another Man might succeed (sub seed) him in his supreme office of Messiah and Shepherd, in the true order of the Messianic and Apostolic succession. The seed intercedes; it goes between the substance of the soil and the life of the plant; it is the mediator between the kingdoms, it saves, it elevates. Jesus made intercession for his people, because he was the inter seed-er, the seed of conjunction, the seed in them. The seed must go away; it goes out into outer darkness; it falls; it descends into death. That which took the Seed away is the dragon—the power to drag on the life to the end of the cycle of development; it is that system of commerce of life which produces the stalk to die and the Seed to live.

There are golden opportunities in defeat which, if embraced, may lead to victory; there are golden opportunities in success which, if neglected, may lead to ruin. The hope of democracy is in the first; the disappointment of republicanism is in the second. The present success of the republican party is intoxicating the leaders; the fact that the present administration has responded to the throbbing pulse of patriotism in times of war, does not guarantee unqualified endorsement of every act of a second term. If straws show which way the wind blows, giant oaks may soon bend to indicate the direction of the storm. In the great game of nations, the United States must not play the stakes into the hands of England. To win may be unfortunate where winning makes one less watchful and more careless; the success of the republican party means the staking of America's wealth in the wager of the powers; and the honor of rogues demands payment of blood. The acts of Congress may become the bases of new issues; there is the ship subsidy; the Nicaragua canal; the colonial policy, and the question of the Constitution and the flag. The future of democracy depends upon the improvement of opportunities which jubilant republicanism neglects; but if it would succeed, and succeed for the blessing of the multitude, let democracy become the party of reform, and rebuke—with the people's voice—the profligacy of the party in power.

Chemistry blinds the intellect concerning the real nature of things; its veil of assumption obscures all. With the idea of the indestructible atom in mind, the physicist is forced to consider matter and energy as belonging to two distinct and independent planes of activity, and that energy is not related to matter except that matter may be operated upon by energy as an extrinsic force. It is held that light is but a mode of motion, not a substance—that it is but the vibration of ether atoms, and that when a ray of light reaches the earth from the sun, it can do no more than set a few atoms of matter in motion; it can add nothing to them, because if the atom is indestructible it is absolutely unchangeable. It has become generally recognized that the earth is specifically related to the sun. The coal that is dug from the hills is black and hard; but it burns, and creates light and heat. The modern scientist calls the substance of coal, "stored up sunshine;" while his theory denies that light is substance, susceptible of being transformed to matter—but coal is matter! The simple solution of the phenomena of Nature is in the principles of Koreshan Alchemy: That matter and energy are correlated and interconvertible; that energy is substance and susceptible of materialization. Coal is stored-up sunshine—so is every other material substance with which we come in contact.

The pope closes the holy door between the centuries at the close of the year of jubilee. The ceremonies of opening and closing this door in St. Peter's, Rome, are supposed to occur every twenty-five years; but it is a notable fact that the actual opening at the beginning of the year 1900 was the first since 1825, because events were unfavorable to papacy in 1850 and 1875; after unmistakable indications, inevitable causes took away the papal temporal power in 1870. Tumult prevented the quarter-centennial opening in 1850; and chagrin kept the door closed in 1875; but now, when the papal dominion has narrowed down to the Vatican grounds and churches of Rome, the door has turned on its hinges once more—perhaps for the last time!

There can be no true commonwealth without communism; and there can be no true and lasting communism without the religious bond of unity. A form of communism is useless without the life. The commerce of the new order must pulsate in unison with the great heart of righteousness; and the circulation of the products must be as free as the blood in the human system. There is no genuine freedom except in organic relations, and there is no organic relation without cohesion of substances, the harmony of parts, and interdependence of all the functions of the body politic. The Science of the new century must construct humanity after the pattern of the great natural form of the cosmos.

"None are hoaxed so badly as are those who hoax themselves with the notion that what they do not see through is a hoax," says one. Of course, the agnostic can never see through the Bible; hence, he believes it is a hoax, and there are many who cannot see through Koreshanity; the above quotation fits their case also. Koreshanity enables one to see through everything; it is to the mind what the X-ray is to physics.

THE EDITOR.

The Messiah and His Miracles.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—If the Bible testimony be true, Jesus did not wait until he was converted to Holy Spirit to show that he was something more than an ordinary man. The loaves and fish miracle, for instance, if performed upon the streets of Chicago, would, to say the least, create considerable excitement. It would be a real act of humanity toward Chicago's hungry hordes, and it would be bread cast upon the waters. One such miracle would cause more people to believe in the teachings of KORESH than a hundred able articles in THE FLAMING SWORD that not one man in a thousand can comprehend, and which does not subdue the hunger of the man who does. The man who is starving today is not interested in the promise of something to eat 20 or 30 years from now. Jesus did not scorn to show his power in deeds. Why should not KORESH do the same?—WM. B., Orange, Tex.

Every teacher of truth begins his movement by specific application and practice of what he teaches. Jesus introduced his system of communism while he was yet with his disciples; and in doing so, he did more for the benefit of humanity than all his miracles combined. Miracles excited attention; they were necessary in that day and age; but miracles were not the convincing factor, not the power of conversion. Without the truth and its application, miracles would amount to nothing.

With all the miracles performed by Jesus, he was not known outside of Palestine until after he gave impulse to his disciples by going away and into them through his baptism. Today, Koreshanity does not wait until the crisis has come, to begin its work. It is the Gospel of Science and of Work, of deed, of application of truth to the most external affairs of man. The present living of the life in communistic relations, the effective application of truth in actual organic relations, contains the very germ of the world's true philanthropy.

Nineteen hundred years ago, miracles were the sign of Messiahship; today they are the sign of the antichrist, because imitators know no better than to copy the methods of nearly two millenniums ago! When that which wrought miracles at the beginning of the age has passed through the Christian dispensation—another long period of experience and progress, it will have left the plane of miracle-working for that of the more practical phases of application of truth; it will come in the intellect, not specifically in the will; it will come as Science, not as philosophy.

Koreshanity does not come to excite mere wonder. The sign of Messiahship at the close of this dispensation is the absolute truth of Science. Miracles cannot possibly enable the mind to comprehend and apply a single principle and law of life; today, they would not even convince the world that Koreshanity is true, for miracles are wrought by hundreds of modern geniuses, healers, and seers. The nineteenth century has been a century of miracles; but whom has it proven to be the Man with the truth? The man who is convinced of the truth of Koreshanity from the basis of comprehension of the great and eternal principles upon which the system rests, possesses the kind of fiber that is necessary to stand the test of the ages.

Men may admire a man and wonder at his work, his miracles; but it is another thing to honor and obey the Man who is himself the greatest miracle of the ages, with the power to redeem the world from the curse in the right way and at the right time. It is better to wait 25 or 30 years for the universal application of a perfect system after it is recognized, than to remain in ignorance that such a system exists. The waiting of a quarter of a century is but a brief waiting compared with the waiting of the world for thousands of years. If Koreshanity presents its gospel in such a way that not one in a thousand can understand it, it commits no greater crime than Nature itself who has produced a humanity that is incapable of comprehending language. If Koreshanity progresses as slowly as it must until the critical hour of triumph, it commits no greater crime than the great tide of forces of the universe of life itself, which has not yet redeemed humanity, though the great horizon of history embraces years which are numbered by the thousands.

Koreshanity is searching for the few with fiber, not for the many who have no courage nor moral worth. Jesus taught the multitude in parables; he did not intend that they should understand; for he knew that only those who had progressed up to a certain standard could understand him, no matter how he should express himself. Men who cannot understand Koreshanity as it is now presented, could not comprehend it no matter what may be the character of the language chosen to convey it.

Koreshanity begins at the very root of life, and builds up a System of Science, a system of application of that Science—its Communism, its Socialism, its Industry, its Commerce, its Educational System, its Society, its Church, and its Government. Of all the systems of the world, Koreshanity alone is the one applying its doctrines to life, effectively and successfully, for the establishment of the great Kingdom of Righteousness, for which God Almighty has waited for thousands of years to manifest. If Koreshanity be true, leave the responsibility with its Founder; even now nineteen hundred years after Jesus, the world seeks to be freed from the curse—and another must put his shoulder to the wheel of Progress and move the world!

The Course of Empire.

The Power of the Russians and the Supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon Peoples.

Even the novice in the world politics must see that for Russia there remains a magnificent destiny. Her area amounts to one sixth of the land surface of the globe, and her white population is nearly 140,000,000, while her resources, mineral, agricultural, and otherwise, are enormous. It is inevitable that such a country should assert itself.

The Titans of the North will soon have planted themselves in China, and ere long they will be in India. They are simply biding their time on the "roof of the world," awaiting the opportunity to descend upon the coveted prize at the southern slope of the Himalayas. When necessary, they can put 1,000,000 men in India: and if it takes 250,000 British soldiers to whip 30,000 Dutch burghers in the Transvaal, how many will it take to beat 1,000,000 Russian regulars in India? When the Bear once puts his paw down on India, it will do the Lion no good to growl. He will simply have to retire and leave the prize with the Bear.

Europe contains but two powers today—Russia and Germany. But Germany cannot long contend against the northern giant. Sooner or later the Russian will break over Germany and plant his standard on the Dardanelles. Said Napoleon at St. Helena: "In a hundred years Europe will be either all republican or all Cossack;" and, with a little extension of the time, it looks as if Napoleon's word was coming to pass. All Asia and all Europe! Such is the future empire of the Slav!

And the Teuton? That is to say, the Germanic, Scandinavian and English speaking peoples. Well, theirs is to be the rest of the world—the two Americas, Australia, Africa, and all the islands of the seas. The ocean will be theirs, and upon its waves they will ride supreme. The commerce of the earth will belong to them, and in their hands will be the purse-strings of the nations.—REV. T. B. GREGORY.

The Primacy of the Anglo-Saxon.

In the time of Charles I., says John Fiske in the December Atlantic, there were about 5,000,000 people in the world speaking the language of Shakespeare; at the time of our first national census there were about 12,000,000, one third of them in the United States; today, there are more than 120,000,000, three fifths of them in the United States; and there are children now going to school who will live to see this vast number trebled. The task of organizing society politically, so that such immense communities might grow up peacefully preserving their liberties and affording ample opportunity for the varied exercise of the human faculties, is a task which baffled the splendid talents of ancient Greece, and in which the success of the Romans was but partial and short-lived. We believe that the men who used the mingled speech of Alfred and of William the Norman have solved the great political problem better than others have solved it. If we except the provinces of the Netherlands, the Swiss cantons, and such tiny city-states as Monaco and San Marino, which retain their ancient institutions, there is not a nation on earth, making any pretense to freedom and civilization, which has not a constitution in great measure copied, within the present century, either from England or from the United States. Thus, whether willingly or not, does the civilized world confess the primacy of the English race in matters political.

Twentieth Century Woman.

A Woman's View of the Crowning Work of the New Century; Woman as a Factor of World-Reform.

Since the earliest dawn of my intellectual consciousness I have firmly believed in the equality of the sexes in natural endowments. The fact that women have a weaker physique and a smaller brain than men has always appeared to me to be fully offset by the superior fineness and delicacy of their constitution and the enduring quality lent to it by the faith and love and other spiritual attributes which enter so largely into their nature.

A generation ago these facts were less widely recognized than at present. The experience of the last thirty years has done much to correct the old ideas of woman's inferiority, but I do not believe that her real equality will ever be fully recognized until it is seen that not only woman herself is the equal of man, but that the field of labor assigned to her by nature and custom is fully equal in dignity and importance to that occupied by man. That whatever capacity women may develop in commerce, literature, or the professions, it must always be less than that of which she is capable in the management of the domestic side of life and the great moral and spiritual issues therein involved.

It remains, therefore, to demonstrate, and I believe this will be the crowning work of the approaching twentieth century, that the home is not less in importance than the State as the nursery of citizens, and is the glory of its existence.

The experiments of women, therefore, in the trades and professions I regard as mainly tentative. They serve perhaps the double purpose of demonstrating that woman possesses certain capacities which have not always been acknowledged, and of training these capacities for the grand work which must devolve upon her in increasing measure as the world slowly learns the importance of the work which can be done nowhere else than in the home. Then will come the great struggle for better homes for all classes of society, not only better sanitary and hygienic conditions, but a better moral and religious atmosphere, less of greed and unholy ambition, more of purity and unselfishness, and a better understanding of the scientific truth that both the body and the soul take on their final character to an almost incredible degree from the conditions under which they have their first inception. We shall never cease to have idiots, incompetents, and criminals until women are so protected in their maternity that they cease to bear them, and homes so carefully guarded, even down to the lowest strata of society, that they cease to rear them.

Just so surely as that the world is coming slowly to realize that the supreme glory of a nation is no longer in its territory, its armies, its navies, its commerce, but in the intellectual and moral grandeur of its citizens, so surely will it be recognized in the coming time that the work for which nature has especially fitted woman is the grandest and most excellent work which she can possibly perform, and that it can never be outranked by any achievements of trade, commerce, statecraft, nor diplomacy.—CAROLINE F. CORBIN, in Chicago Tribune.

Goldwin Smith on Religion.

Agnosticism Growing Upon the Church Under the Influence of Modern "Science."

Professor Goldwin Smith's article on the "Genesis and Outlook of Religion," in the latest issue of the Contemporary Review, is even more gloomy than his book, "Guesses at the Riddle of Existence." This eminent historian and essayist feels what John Burroughs calls the "cosmic chill" of unbelief, but he is without Burroughs' cheerful faith that mankind can grow accustomed to it. In the Contemporary article he rapidly traces the rise and fall of the chief religions of the world's history, concluding with his reasons for believing that Christianity is already far advanced in the process of decay and ultimate extinction. He believes that science and destructive criticism have made every dogma untenable—even that of a personal Deity.

"Toward what bourn, then, is thought, critical and scientific, apparently tending?" he asks. "It is apparently tending to the belief, from which our inmost nature recoils, in a universe without guidance or plan, the relation of man to which can never be known."

The writer states his conclusions with sadness and with unfeigned fear for the consequences of the change which he believes to be impending. After summing up the good and the evil in the world's religious history he finds the good predominating, and he admits that the departure of the churches, simply as moral and social organizations, would leave a great void in life. Yet observation has convinced him that "the churches, as dogmatic organizations, both in Europe and America, are apparently breaking up." The tone of educated society everywhere is increasingly skeptical. Mr. Smith believes that both the Old and the New Testament have been permanently undermined as books of inspired authority, and that practically nothing remains of them except their ethics. But ethics are not religions and cannot take its place.

Though an agnostic, Goldwin Smith is not one of those who can console himself with any scientific rhapsody over the "majesty of the natural law." He strikes down the rationalist's vague substitute for a personal Deity quite as ruthlessly as he dismisses the claims of inspired revelation. He holds that the word law involves the idea of a lawmaker and when the word is used by a materialist it hides a fallacy. "In the Universe Revealed by Science," he says, "blind chance under the form of evolution, rather than any determining authority, seems to reign." Professor Smith admits that man will not rest in a blank agnosticism such as he has arrived at, yet his only constructive suggestion is that everybody should now look for "rational data" on which to base a new religion.

Koresh at Washington.

A grave question is suggested by the increasing number of such utterances. To what extent is Goldwin Smith's pessimism justified by actual loss of belief among the people? It is not a question of theology so much as a question of terrestrial facts. That there has been a marked change in the controlling force of religious ideas during the last century is undeniable. How deep is the change and does the liberal movement necessarily lead to the unlovely goal depicted by Professor Smith?—Chicago Tribune.

Notes of Warning!

Modern Extravagance Paving the Way to the Greatest Revolution of the Ages.

Counting permanent and transient guests, it is reckoned that the first-class hotels in New York take care of about 50,000 persons a day. The average cost of entertainment, as estimated by three expert hotel men, is $6.25 a day. At the Mills hotels—there are two of them—the cost of living, including room and board, is 65 cents a day. The cheap fare houses are magnificent structures,—one cost a million dollars and the other a half million. They are kept scrupulously clean. The beds are spotless and thoroughly comfortable. The food is wholesome and well prepared. The dinners, which cost fifteen cents, are served in courses, and each guest receives more than he can eat.

The 50,000 first-class hotel patrons who now expend $312,500 a day, could live at hotels like the Mills houses for $32,500; and $32,000 is expended for luxury, pure and simple, not for anything that is needed for the benefit of the guests.

The hotels in the United States are the most costly and splendid establishments of the kind in the world. The more magnificent they are made the more profitable they are. The Waldorf-Astoria, which cost $12,000,000, is a great money-maker. It is filled all the time—summer and winter—though it accommodates 1,500 guests and has 40 public rooms. In this hotel, and in others in New York, the payment of $75 to $100 a day for rooms, exclusive of meals, is not at all uncommon.

The cost of furniture alone in the Waldorf-Astoria was $1,000,000. A New York millionaire, who occupies a suite of rooms at the Waldorf-Astoria, the transient cost of which is $500 a day, is said to live in greater splendor than any monarch in Europe.

Even the structures devoted to trade and commerce in this country are palatial in their appointments. They are richly ornamented with carvings of brass and marble, and are furnished at a lavish cost. The broker lolls in mahogany chairs and scatters cigar ashes over rugs that cost more than a hewer of wood or a drawer of water could earn in a year.

The desire for these things is growing, and its gratification is becoming more general. What will it lead to and what will be the end of it all? The American schoolboy still declaims courageously about the enervating and corrupting effect of luxury on the ancient Romans, whose profligacy was really pure and simple as compared with the indulgence of modern millionaires. An occasional note of warning, pointing to danger ahead, is heard from the rostrum and the stump, but these admonitions are taken as needless signals of alarm from radical agitators.

The nation is yet too young and strong, it has not gotten far enough away from wholesome beginnings, to show the demoralizing effects of extravagant living, but is there, in fact, any reason for the hope or the belief that the rage for luxury, which is growing in the United States of America, will, if unchecked, have any other termination here than that which has come to pass in all other lands where it became a passion?—Kansas City Star.

The Saturday Evening Post.—Ex-President Cleveland is writing for The Saturday Evening Post a series of strong articles which will appear in the magazine during the winter months. Some of the papers will deal with political affairs, and others with the personal problems of young men. They will be Mr. Cleveland's first utterances in any magazine on the questions of the day since he left the White House. Mr. Cleveland's opening paper, which appeared in The Saturday Evening Post December 22, discusses in a masterly manner a most important phase of our national politics.

Pan-American Exposition Folder.—The Bureau of Publicity has just issued a very complete booklet descriptive of the Exposition to be held at Buffalo next year; it contains 48 pages, with 121 titles and 82 illustrations. It gives a very comprehensive view of the scope and purpose of the Exposition. The total cost of the Exposition, apart from the exhibits, is over $10,000,000; of this $3,000,000 is to be expended on the Midway. The grounds cover 350 acres. It is to be distinctively American, representing the industries and arts of the republics of the great West. Our High-Grade, Hand-Finished Razor Strops.

A good strop is indispensable to one that uses a razor. A good razor is of little use unless it has a fine edge, and that cannot be obtained in any other way than with a good strop and a knowledge of how to use the same and keep it in condition. THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A glimpse of Koreshan Universology, in its application to human thought and life, preparatory to the establishment of the Social Theocratic System, called the Kingdom of God, may be obtained by a careful study of fundamental principles.

The Cellular Cosmogony or Koreshan Astronomy.

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DR. CYRUS R. TEED, OF CHICAGO.

The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, Theocracy, and Social Economy.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of universal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Laws and Principles of the Commerce of Life; the Great Truth Concerning the Conservation and Appropriation of the Hidden Manna; the Pivotal Man of the New Age.

THROUGH THE MESSENGER OF THE EKKLESIA IN EPHEBUS, WRITE: THESE THINGS, SAYS HE WHO HOLDS THE SEVEN STARS IN HIS RIGHT HAND, HE WHO WALKS IN THE MIDST OF THE GOLDEN LAMP-STANDS; I KNOW THY WORKS, AND THY FATIGUE, AND THY PATIENT ENDURANCE, AND THAT THOU ART NOT ABLE TO TOLERATE THE WICKEDNESS; AND THOU HAST TRIED THOSE WHO DECLARE THEMSELVES APOSTLES, BUT ARE NOT, AND HAST FOUND THEM LIARS; AND THOU HAST PATIENTLY ENDURED AND HAST SUFFERED, AND THOU HAST NOT BEEN UNWILLING.—REV. ii: 1-3. (From the Original Greek.)

“THROUGH THE MESSENGER of the congregation in Ephesus, write,” is signified to commit to posterity the restraints, liberties, adjustments, and appropriations of commerce. It cannot be known what the restraints, liberties, adjustments, and appropriations of commerce are, until the central principle of commerce is scientifically comprehended. Commerce is the intertransportation of the things which are conducive to life, and their economical and equitable distribution for appropriation. This law is equally operative on all planes of activity. There are three primary planes of commercial activity on the material side of existence. As the propagative center is the pivot on which life itself turns, we will first consider the relation which this pivot of being sustains both to the descent and ascent of human development.

The uses of the sperm and germ of reproductive life are manifold, as may be observed through the law of correspondential analogy. The sex function is usually regarded as specifically designed for sensual gratification; at least, the common prostitution of this function would lead one to suppose that it is intended primarily for self-gratification—incidentally, for the accidental propagation of offspring. The interchange of the life forces of the two sexes, in the union of the sperm and germ of procreation, is called commerce on the sex plane of active life. Through correspondential analogy, we may locate the heart, source, and central function of life on all other planes.

There are two prime uses of the functions of the sex centers; the first use is the propagation of offspring,—considering the function on the purely material plane,—and not for the gratification of sensual desire. This belongs exclusively to the animal, and to man only as he retains and lives in his animal nature. Children produced as accidental products of the pleasurable gratification of the sex sense, are the fruit of the lowest elements and principles of the human organism and mentality. We do not pretend to say that strong characters may not be produced on this plane; but they are gross, and if at all spiritually inclined, their spirituality is of the diabolic kind, not of the divine order. The second use of the potencies and energies of the centers of sex resource,—through their conservation and appropriation,—is to feed and sustain, in perpetual vigor, the physique and the mental organism. The waste of sex energy, in both the male and female, produces collapse of the brain cells and the gradual but certain disintegration of the brain, as the foundation of mental and physical energy—potential and kinetic.

The restraints of commerce on the sex plane of human activity consist, first, of a scientific comprehension of the purpose of restraint; secondly, the power to so control the mind in relation to the functions of reproduction, as to be able to absorb and appropriate the vital fluids. Restraint, to be effectual, must not be direct. Direct effort is of such a nature as to create resistance, and if persisted in becomes overpowering to oneself. The law of substitution must be brought actively into operation. One should always avoid the attempt of abstracting the mind, or of turning it in upon itself, without a conscious knowledge of how to direct the thought. "Resist not evil, but overcome evil with good," is a fair presentation of the thought we here wish to convey.

Overcome an evil love or tendency by cultivating an opposite one. To learn the theory is not enough; the results come by persistent and determinate practice. No person can become a musician by learning the theory of music merely, but by cultivation through practice. The only danger lies in wrong practice, therefore the necessity for the application of scientific principles to begin with. As in music or any accomplishment, so it is in the purpose to rise out of the animal into the plane of a moral consciousness. Man is a tree, and like all other trees, culminates his life in the germ of reproduction. This germ may be transmitted through the law of propagation, or it may be conserved and appropriated for the perpetuity of the existent life. The seed of the human tree is the hidden manna; it is the vital fluid, the secret essence, the veritable resource of immortality. It is for this reason it is said: "To him that overcometh I will give to eat of the hidden manna."

We wish to emphasize the great truth, that just so sure as man transmits his life through sensual propagation, so absolutely sure is it that he will die; but "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." And for the same reason it is said, they who are accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage. But this doctrine is only for such as are ripe enough to receive it. These will constitute the firstfruits of the resurrection, the first-born from the dead. Jesus the Lord said: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another;" but we now say, in addition to this commandment, perform the uses of life to the neighbor, upon the basis of a scientific application of the principles of use according to the genius of the age, and the people of the new dispensation who shall constitute the firstfruits of the resurrection.

It will be observed, that to restrain the passions there should be substituted a higher and divine love, and that such a love must supersede the sensual affection. And further, it will be noticed that by such restraint the essences of the interior life are conserved for a more perfect use. In presenting a revelation of this once secret but now naked doctrine, we will draw a contrast between the esoteric philosophies of the day, originating in the Oriental traditions and degenerate religions of recidivating ages. All of the modern phases of thought—each of which is only a fragment of an effete Oriental propaganda, such as christian science, falsely so called—teach the false principle that to obtain power one must turn the mind within. "God is in man, and man is in God," and "that to find God you must look within." Contrast this statement with the doctrine of the Lord: "I am the good Shepherd, and the sheep hear my voice and will follow me."

The Lord was external, tangible, and visible. He was supreme, and did not hesitate to affirm it. He was the Truth, and was not ashamed to confess and declare it. The disciples did not look within for the resources of salvation; they looked to the individual Redeemer. They did one thing, however, in the exaltation of their love to their Lord and God—they found a controlling substitute for their sensual tendencies, and were not only able to conserve their interior essences, but to direct them to the store-house of their affections, and also to create a pole of generation in which the potential energy of their desires should be transformed to the kinetic energy of their baptism. They drew upon their esoteric forces by creating an exoteric vortex, which resulted in the theocrasis—the dematerialization of the Son of God—and their own baptism. This law is eternal.

The new age will be ushered in through the directing potentiality of one revolutionary character. The new age, like the preceding ones, will originate in and proceed from the pivot. The Lord was not a master; mahatmas cannot be compared with Him; he was the Master, the Son of God. He was the only heir to the throne of God, and when absorbed, he became the pivot of the invisible anthropostic cosmos. He is the astral nucleus of the universe. The forces of the interior life of men and women cannot be utilized through vidual concentration and esoteric resort, but all viduals—to find their life—must turn their thoughts exoterically to the Messianic personality of this, the new dispensation. This means to first turn their thoughts outward, and not within.

The restraints of the passions through the new substitution, by relinquishing the old liberty, inaugurates and ensures a new vitalizing liberty. It is the sacrifice of the old and devitalizing false liberty, bringing the subjects of this sacrifice under subjection for a little time and for essential discipline, that they may awaken into the liberty of immortal life and the Sons of God. After liberty comes adjustment. The adjustments of commerce are to be made on the lines of a scientific astrological recourse, or rather upon the basis of a soli-stellar anthroposophy. In the firstfruits of the new dispensation, there will be no external exercise of the function of sex. They are biune beings, made so through transformation, by virtue of the restraints above defined. This supreme adjustment comes through the primary application of restraint.

In the consideration of appropriation, which follows in order after the creation of the biunities (here let us emphasize the distinction of biunity and duality), we will define the relation of these men-children, full grown, men-grown infants, the beginnings of the new creation in external and visible manifestation, to the interior and invisible fathers. It may thence be seen how Elijah the prophet will turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers. The appropriation consists of the final universal conflagration, which will spread from the theocrasis of the center to the tens of thousands who shall be consumed by the brightness of His coming.

There will come a general adjustment of society into a common fellowship. Societies or churches (congregations) will be gathered into communistic groups, to be finally consumed by the fires of absorption. This will be a longed-for, delightful experience, a consummation devoutly to be wished. This is the burning up of the world, the electro-magnetic disintegration of the prepared humanity; and to such as oppose this consummation it will be the great and dreadful day of the Lord, referred to in Malachi iv: 5.

He who holds the seven stars in his right hand, is the resurrected Lord. The seven stars are the seven Messianic manifestations. Jesus, the Lord, was the sixth in order. He held in his resurrection, the preceding five. In returning, which is his arising in the new Name, he will infold the seven, but he will be the eighth, for he will burn up to sacrifice, to waste, which is perdition. Perdition is from perdere, to waste. This is the antitypical high priest of Levi; that is, the high priest of conjunction. Elijah the Prophet, the Messenger of the Covenant, holds the seven primary stepping-stones to the Temple of supreme Righteousness, and he is the builder of the Temple. Who "saith of Cyrus [Koresh], He is my Shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure; even saying to Jerusalem [the New Jerusalem], thou shalt be built; and to the Temple, thy foundation shalt be laid."

The right hand is the hand of authority. It is the external, and therefore the ultimate, because all things come into power in ultimates, in externals. The tree cannot reproduce another tree from its body nor its spirit, but only from its matured, literal, natural seed. In the right hand, is in external, visible, and tangible manifestation. He walks in the midst of the golden Lamp-stands. The Lord walks by the transmission of his Spirit. God walked in the ruach (spirit, cool of the day), in the Garden of Eden. Jesus walked in the Garden of God in the beginning of the Christian age, through the operation of the Holy Spirit. This was the pneuma (spirit) in Greek, but ruach in Hebrew. To walk in this higher sense, is to go forth in the operation of the Spirit. In this way, the Lord walks in the midst of the seven churches, taking the church of Ephesus as the first manifestation.

"I know thy works, and thy isolation, and thy patient endurance." The angel which brought the message to John, from the Lord, could look down through the age and see what the conditions were which were to be endured, first by the lone Messenger, and then by those who should come into the first conditions of the resurrection. These works are not perfect, but the desire is commendable, and therefore its people are blessed with encouragement. There is a determination to overcome, as foreshadowed in the declaration: "Thou art not able to tolerate wickedness;" and by works accompanied by faith, wickedness (sin) will be overcome, first in the personality of the Messenger, thence, through him, sin in the church in its external aggregation.

"And thou hast tried those who declare themselves apostles [teachers, sent], but are not." This refers to all that power of antichrist in which there is an attempt to set up religions independently of the true and only Messiah, and to those who oppose his science and his authorization. They are liars, and are not to be believed.

"Thou hast patiently endured, and hast suffered, and thou hast not been unwilling." All the churches are first involved in the Messenger of the Covenant. In him is the New Jerusalem. Through him, the New Jerusalem will descend into the external manifestation of the seven churches—the order of Melchizedek. Therefore, what is said to the church of Ephesus, is said to the conditions and character of the one in whom the seven churches exist, before their externalization in their universal form. God encourages his Messenger, that he may not fall under the great burden of his life, when every man's hand is against him, and when his hand (his doctrine of life) is against every man.

The Problem of the Lord's Coming.

The Solution Found in the Two-Fold Advent; the Manifestation of the Man, and the Outpouring of the Holy Spirit; the "Man of Sin" and His Mission.

THE COMING OF THE LORD in the end of the age, is usually referred to by the church as the Lord's second coming. Koreshans take a different view of it. The Lord came twice in the beginning of the Christian age; he therefore came the second time, and it is said of him that he will come again the second time. If He comes again the second time, the inference is that he came once the second time. Jesus came first in his person; he came the second time by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. He will come again the first time through the theocrasis of the Man whom he has chosen, and by this will consummate the baptism through which he will bring forth his children—the Sons of God. The coming of the Sons of God, or the coming of the children of the resurrection, will constitute the second coming.

It is seen, then, that there are two comings in this the end of the age, as well as two comings in the beginning of the age, dispensation, or aion (world). There are also two methods of his coming in the end of the age. He first comes as a thief in the night. The uninitiated will hardly get the force of this statement, as referring to the coming of the Lord in his first and personal coming. Everybody knows that a thief comes to steal, and that when discreet, he comes unobserved. But does the Lord come to steal? According to the Scriptures, there comes a time when shall be taken from a man what he seemeth to have,—that which, though in his possession, does not belong to him, and it will be given to the one who has. It might so happen that to accomplish this, the Lord would be compelled to enter upon his possessions as a thief. This, however, will be better appreciated later in the day. "Be ye therefore as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves."

There can be no question that the Lord comes as (not like) a thief in the night, and that the kingdom of God cometh without observation. Does this conflict with the other Biblical statement: that "they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory," and that "every eye shall see him"? Of course it does, unless He has two comings; his first one as a thief in the night, his second one in the clouds of heaven; that is, in the literal Word, or the literal manifestation of the Sons of God.

The "man of sin" must be revealed first. The "man of sin" is he who took upon himself the sins of the world; he was made to be sin, therefore the coming of the Son of man is the coming and revelation of the "man of sin." The Lord Christ did this after his resurrection, by breaking his body through his theocrasis (translation) and distributing it as Holy Spirit for the appropriation of his apostles and disciples. By breaking His body and disseminating it through the descent of the Spirit, the Lord began his descent into the hells of the sensual and sinful humanity, and thus began to be sinful flesh. Through this the Son of God, who was without sin, transformed himself to sin, and comes forth in a sinful man—born in sin and shapen in iniquity. He therefore literally comes as a thief, and he comes to steal. When he comes, he will be the Sign of the Lord's coming. None are able to see this Sign but those gifted in divine prescience, or the discernment of rational thought, and who are ready to be instructed by this Sign in the principles of the kingdom. It would almost seem too bad that the Lord should come to his own and his own should receive him not, and that he should thus be compelled to steal that which belongs to him for the use of his people. This, however, is the Lord's plan.

"Then shall ye see the sign of the Son of man in heaven." The sign of the Son of man precedes the coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven. This sign is Elijah the Prophet; he will precede the coming of the Son of man. The coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven, is the manifestation of the harvest after the baptism; it is the fruit of the Tree of Life, the Sons of God who come forth by reincarnation as the product of the planting of Christ the Lord.

The Seed was sown in the beginning of the age, and the fruit will come in the end of the age; but before the fruit can set, the anther, by its pollen, must vivify again the ovary of the plant. "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And unto her it was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen clean and white." Linen is the righteousness of saints. "Christ is our righteousness;" he is therefore the fine linen.

Is the Bride, the wife of God, clothed in fine linen, that is, Christ's righteousness (wholeness, perfection), and not made free from the filth of sensual corruption? There can be no salvation except through the purification of the desires of the flesh. By such purification, the corruptible flesh may and will be transformed to the incorruptible flesh, and the mortal (dying) flesh transformed to the immortal (undying) flesh.

"Behold, I will send my Messenger." "But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap: And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness."

The Theology of Koreshanity.

The Science of the Propagation of the Life of God and Man; Corroborated by the Bible and Demonstrated by the Laws of Nature.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

GOD IS ONE IN PERSON, possessing a triunity of attributes—Fatherhood, Motherhood, and Sonship. In these three attributes reside the propagative principles of the “divine nature, the creative power and function of everlasting perpetuity.” In these statements is embodied the first of the fundamental principles of the Koreshan Ecclesia, the Assembly of the New Covenant. The tri-personality of Deity, a fundamental dogma of antichristian orthodoxy, is a fallacy destined to lose its power by the united and destructive testimonies of the exact science of Koreshan Cosmology, and the scientific interpretation of the Scriptures of inspired prophets and apostles—known during the Christian era as the Bible. We read in the Scriptures concerning the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; but these three are in ultimates revealed as attributes of one perfect being, known to primitive Christians as the Lord Jesus, the Christ or Messiah, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the legitimate King of the Jews.

The Apostle to the Gentiles declared Him to be “the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature,” by whom “were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him and for him.” It is declared that “He is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the pre-eminence.” The Apostle John testifies concerning this involution of universal being: “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.” “And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us.” The prophet Isaiah testified concerning the coming of this embodied fulness of the Godhead in these words: “Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.” The Lord Jehovah—“the beginning” in whom, by whom, and from whom the Deific spirit of the universe creates and preserves all things—was born into the world a helpless infant, to become the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

From the divine standpoint of science, the human Divinity to whom we refer was externally the manifest generation or Son of an inherent biune Deity, the Father-Mother God. Jesus, the involved or personal form of Deity, recognized no father but the inherent one, with whom he declared his conjunctive unity in the celestial degree. He confessed no motherhood but that of the Bride within him—the spirit of his church to be, which should reproduce his image and likeness when animated by the vitalizing and gestative potencies of the externalized Fatherhood and Motherhood which he, the Son, should attain in his progressive evolution from external sonship. The evolution of the holy (whole or biune) seed—the Son of God, ultimating in the harvest reproduction and multiplication of that seed—the Prophet of Koreshanity sometimes illustrates, somewhat in this way: Take as an example of a biune seed that of the common pumpkin; the male and female potencies of the vine, with its fruit, inhere in its form—the form making of the seed a triunity.

When planted, a vine is produced, bearing in its blossoms the dual forms of its male and female potencies, to be reproduced in the biunity of the triune seed—the ultimate of the vine’s most progressive energies, and the creator and preserver of its kind. When the expressed femininity of the plant is vitalized by the forces of its masculinity, the pumpkin is reproduced, revealing as a fruit the golden glory of the constructive potencies which in the order of law environ the holy triunity, the seed, representing the prophet, priest, and king of its kind.

The Lord Jesus—fulness of the Godhead bodily, the holy Seed, the universe in its least form—transmuted himself to the spiritual energies of divine Father-Motherhood, and became a manifest spiritual vine in earth, from least to greatest form. His reproductive potencies have now become a spiritual harvest of constructive forces focalized in one form—the Pole Star of human destiny, the center of universal Fatherhood, the Sign of the coming of the Son of man with power and great glory. To those who have eyes to see, “the Sign of the Son of man in heaven” is clearly visible; they may also perceive the sphere from which he is to be reproduced in the image and likeness of the Son of God, whose Abrahamic principle the Sign now represents. God dwells in the generation of the righteous, that is, in those Messengers of God’s covenants with men, who know in order to fulfil or keep the laws of the progressive evolutions and involutions of the divine creative and preserving potencies.

Deity is primarily spirit, secondarily matter; or the reverse, according to the standpoint of the divine estimate of the relations of the terminals of dispensations to center and circumferences of being. The supreme Deity,—being the involution of all things, or the universe in its least form,—in dissolving his form to become the regenerating energy of his environing universe, precipitates forces which revitalize everything after its kind; so there is a sense in which we can say God is in everything; he is in the tree only as the vitality of the tree—body, soul, and spirit; he is in the animal as animal vitality; but in the ultimate of his universal being—in man, his personal image and likeness perfected—he is in the fulness of His holiness and power; and the most exalted and the most profound confession of Deity is the confession of the divine-human, his holy Name or personality.

God's name is made holy to men by the obedience of his perfected Name to the law of the cross, by which the Son of man, as the Son of God, goes to the Father, or attains the recognition of universal Fatherhood or Deity by impregnating and quickening humanity for its reproduction in his own image and likeness of divine Sonship. When he finally comes forth from the race which he has vitalized, he is its lawgiver and sin-bearer, its Father-Mother Deity, crucified in mortal form; and we look upon the one bruised for our iniquities, wounded for our transgressions, a "man of sin," a high priest of the order of Levi, touched with the feeling of all our infirmities. The science of the law which he exalts to condemn sin in the flesh, awakens those who have slept—the dead in Christ, to recognize him as the promised Sign of the coming of the Son of man, the image and likeness of God.

Those to whom it is given to know the secret of his presence by the science of the law and the prophets, call upon his Name and proclaim him as the "desire of all nations." "Faith, the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen"—the faith which works by love, is awakened in humanity to substantiate all the promises of God, by doing works meet for repentance, and revealing the all-conquering power of the love of Deity in and for humanity; and the resurrection of a church loyal to God's humanity, calls into being all the Motherhood of Deity, to ultimate in the manifestation of the Lord our Righteousness as the Motherhood of God, fulfilling the prophecy: "She shall be called the Lord our Righteousness."

We need no trinity of incomprehensible persons to reveal the attributes of the Lord God of Israel, the Savior. The confessed father of antichristian orthodoxy is a spirit, an infinite or unfinished non-entity, "without body or parts," everywhere, but located nowhere in his illimitable universe—a formless void. The father of modern orthodoxy is supposed to have a son just as old as himself, the two being co-eternal; and the chief business of the son seems to be to appease the wrath of the father, make diplomatic schemes to support his throne, and help him to repair the damages of his blunders in creation. There is also an unaccounted for third party of the trinity, according to orthodoxy—a kind of nondescript, who is of the same age as the son and the father, and who is said to be "influential" with the enthroned father and his rebellious subjects.

Antichristian orthodoxy offers some very troublesome problems for rational minds to endeavor to settle. There is the Son of God, with flesh and bones, ascending to that unlocated throne of the father (who is "everywhere" and without body or parts), to sit down at his right hand; then there are the three persons of the trinity sitting upon three thrones in the unlocated center of the illimitable universe; and these three are supposed to be taking an active interest in our mundane affairs, and millions of earth inhabitants are educated to indite petitions to them quite contradictory in character of sentiment. We might instance the petitions of the Boer and the British—both good fighting trinitarians in an unlimited universe with unnumbered worlds to fight over and conquer. Marriages being made in heaven,—according to trinitarian priests,—it might help the peace of such a universe to assign each pair united in the holy bonds of matrimony (by a priestly formula patterned after "the curse" upon the woman recorded in Scripture) to one of the unnumbered worlds, there to reproduce every variety and species of their corruptible mortal forms, without let or hindrance, till the uncalendared day of doom! There are so many varieties of antichristian deities, orthodox and in "good and regular standing" in modern Christendom, that we cannot consider them all. The public is referred to views of them recorded in the commentaries of theological libraries, owned by the prophets of Baal.

The mission of THE FLAMING SWORD is to offer to the world thoroughly rational and scientific views of a modern Hero, bearing the credentials of the law and the prophets, and well equipped with the practical science of law to attain the life of God in the flesh, and how to translate the kingdom of heaven to earth and the earth to the kingdom of heaven. The Lord has descended to the planes of the hells, and the hells are to feel his presence; for they are to be dashed in pieces as a potter's vessel, and to be reformed and ruled with a rod of iron, till every knee shall bow and every tongue confess the Lord Jesus, the Seed and Savior of the humanity of God. On the basis of the hells brought into the divine order of the kingdom of the Gods, the Messiah now awaiting the world's recognition by the light of the Science of Universology, will create new heavens and a new earth. By this we mean a new church and a new state—a new state of industrial order; a new church with a new system of equitable distribution of the products of industry, united in social relations that will finally reveal the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man by producing from the heavens within humanity, the Mother of all living, the God's—the Sons of God in whose moral and intellectual natures the Father's name is written.

When a people is manifest who not only desire the Lord's coming, but who are also willing to hear the doctrine when presented, because the doctrine finds agreement with the desire for it, then the wheat is ready to harvest. It is time to put in the sickle (the divine declaration); that is, to advance the truth, for the truth does the reaping. Then will come the organization of the concrete body.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

WITH THE ROLLING OF THE CENTURIES, history is written on the scroll of human evolution by a hidden Hand which impulses humanity from age to age, and perpetuates the universe from cycle to cycle; it is the power that makes history and fulfils destiny. Whatever that power is—by whatever name it may be known, it is that which creates and controls all; it is that which is eternal—that which is true to the great purpose of existence; it is as real as the great world of Nature. The existence of the universe cannot be called into question; the stupendous effect is a stupendous fact, hourly witnessing, in the most unmistakable terms of expression, the existence of a supreme Being who is inseparably connected with this marvelous world of activity and life. When the mind rationally contemplates the eternal round of the ages; when it connects, link by link, the great chain of human life and the trend of human events from the distant horizon of human history to the very gateway of the New Era, to the very flood tide of the great human sea, it cannot escape the conclusion that something guides and guards the central line of life, the forward march of progress, the course of civilization. Stationed along the ecliptic of human progress and development, we see the great civilizations of the past—each with its central religious conception, and its moral and intellectual impulses; these civilizations have embraced nations which clustered about a controlling nucleus. Something passes from people to people, from race to race, in the line of progress—something operates in humanity to throb hearts and thrill nerves, to illumine minds and lavish life; whatever that is, it has been, and is, bound up in the affairs of man. The power that makes man and moves through specific channels of progress; that is in war and peace; that is in national greatness and decline; that makes events; that rolls the centuries, and turns the gates of ages upon their hinges, is Deity! The modern mind looks for God in the mineral kingdom; in space; in other worlds; in the realms of the "infinite;" but Koreshan Science reveals the great fact that the mysteries and marvels of that Almighty power which controls all are in the field of human activity—that that Power has his throne in the world of man! The problem of human life can be solved from no other standpoint. There is no other way to fulfil destiny than through the unity of Cause and effect; there is no other way to perpetuate the universe than by operating in and through the highest kingdom; there is no other way to rejuvenate and renew the world of man than through processes of periodic involution of the human world—through the manifestation of Deity in personality, the Seed and Savior of divine and human life. Evolution and involution are the two great co-ordinate factors of the progress of humanity, of the propagation of life, of the perpetuity of the universe; the indisputable primary evolution is humanity,—and the highest and inevitable involution of all is Man!

The modern world boasts of progress, while it forgets the wonders of the ancients. The idea that a while ago the universe began; that man has risen in the scale of being from a state of barbarity; and that the ancients were unskilled and unlearned, has played havoc with appreciation of the greatness of the past. There have been greater civilizations in past ages than that which exists today. Ancient Egypt bloomed forth in national greatness and manifested the fruits of culture and of peace. Great empires have existed in times when peoples were units in mind and purpose—there were Babylon, Medo Persia, Greece, and Rome, the greatness and wealth of which are not surpassed today by either the English, the Russian, or the American nation. With these great civilizations have existed all that makes people great—religions, philosophies, industries, arts, and schools. Savages did not construct the Great Pyramid of Gizeh, nor carve the Sphinx of Egypt—the wonders of the Nile valley. There are stones in that Pyramid which modern engineers cannot devise plans to remove; and there is in it workmanship displayed which cannot be excelled today! Barbarians did not build Solomon's temple at Jerusalem; there are no buildings constructed today that equal it—none so beautiful, none so costly. The modern mind discounts the wealth of the Hebrews and the greatness of Solomon's kingdom; the glory of his dominion has faded away, and false conceptions have destroyed the memories of its wonders. Solomon was the typical Shiloh; he brought the typical peace that came after the wars of David. The kingdom was a type of the new Kingdom, and its wealth foreshadowed the wealth of the new age. From the Star of the Magi, we glean a few items of a computation made by Villapando, concerning the cost of Solomon's temple: The gold, silver, and bronze used in its construction amounted to over $34,000,000, while the jewels and finished work exceeded this amount. The golden vessels, according to Josephus, approximated nearly $3,000,000,000, and the silver vessels nearly $25,000,000,000. The regalia and robes of the priests and attendants cost $10,000,000; the trumpets $1,000,000, and musical instruments $250,000. The construction of the temple cost nearly $320,000,000, while the cost of the material is estimated to have been nearly $25,000,000,000—the total cost of the entire temple and its furnishings being nearly $84,000,000,000, or about $20,000,000,000 in excess of the total wealth of the United States of America!

The great mind of Abraham was a stupendous factor of human progress; it was a force which began in one man, and which has come down through the centuries; and through it, that one man has stamped his character upon the civilized world. The Hebrew race is a wonder; it rose to national greatness and glory under the leadership of powerful mentalities; and a semblance of the Hebrew economy is found in the economy of the nations. Somehow, the world cannot escape the conclusion that the Jewish people have made their superior mark in the world of man—a mark more indelible than any other ever made in history. Dr. Abbott observes that "we are more intimately connected with the Hebrew than any other people. In our literature more references are to be found to the literature of the Hebrews than to the literature of the Romans or Greeks." Why is civilization so inseparably linked with the life, law, and language of this people? There would be nothing of Shakespeare if there were taken from it that which has grown out of the moral and religious impulse which has moved the world during two dispensations from Abraham of Chaldea. There would have been no Milton if there had been no Bible; no Dante but for the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures. Abraham passed into his posterity and lived as the millions; in the evolution of himself, he became all that the Jewish people were and are—and more, he crowned himself in the majesty of the perfected manhood of the personality of Jesus the Messiah—in the involution of life refined, in love revealed, in law fulfilled, and in language spoken as the Word. The Jews were the people of destiny; they have made history. They were stationed on the ecliptic of human progress, and through them the great mind of Deity moved as the Sign which passes through the anthropostic constellations. Through that channel the forces of destiny have operated to produce a great consummation; from that line have been expressed the great Hebrew and Christian civilizations; and the extension of that line will bring the civilization of the Golden Age.

In greeting the new century, the American press points to western imperialism. It is with a feeling of national pride that the optimist reviews the century's growth of the republic. There has been sufficient progress to justify optimistic predictions of unparalleled progress in the future; and there is also a sufficient number of gigantic and alarming evils and evidences of world-wide corruption and depravity, to justify the pessimist in his predictions of ruin. Outside of Koreshanity, these evidences are not harmonized. There is to be a revolution as well as a resurrection—the forces of destiny must pass through some awful fires! Before us there is darkness, as well as dawn; chaos, as well as the coming Kingdom; night, as well as the New Era. We are in the transition period; thrones must totter and kingdoms fall; wreck and ruin of the old must precede the building of the new. Not many minds thought ten years ago that a phase of imperialism would be popular in America at the beginning of the twentieth century; the masses did not dream that the daily press, in giving the course of the dawn of the new year of 1901 around the world from the 180th meridian, would contain anything like this: "Progress of the twentieth century in United States dominions: First dawn, Semisopochnoi Island, Aleutian group; Wake Island; Guam; Philippines; Porto Rico; Calais, Me.; Cuba; the United States; Hawaii; Island of Attu." The wings of the Eagle grow, and who shall clip his feathers?

Great Britain is feeling the effect, both financially and morally, of its rash resolve to conquer the Boers; even among the English subjects there are those who are feeling that the war waged is an unrighteous one, a crime against humanity. The world applauds the bravery of the Boers; and it does not rejoice at reports of British successes. 250,000 imperial troops are having serious trouble with less than 20,000 Burghers in the field; and the dashing, daring, and determined spirit of the generals of the Boer republics commands the admiration of the nations. The war "ended" some months ago—according to British reports; but the Boers have reorganized their forces, and have recently begun activities on a scale large enough to surprise the English war office. England could not stand the strain of many such wars of injustice; and it remains to be seen how much longer she can stand the strain of this one. The American forces in the war of the Revolution were not so well equipped as the Boers are now; and England was not more determined to conquer the Americans than she is now to crush the Burghers—and a handful of American colonists defeated the purposes of an empire. The beginning of the twentieth century witnesses the bloody spectacle in South Africa; victory over the Boers would not cause the imperial government to rise in the scale of civilization; but it is possible that the struggle may contribute largely to England's ultimate ruin!

After humanity has struggled for dispensations for knowledge; after realizing that what fragments of practical knowledge have come into the possession of the people through laborious research covering centuries of time, have contributed to the progress of the world, there are people who, upon learning that Koreshanity is the uncovering, the revelation, of all truth of all things, ignorantly ask, Of what benefit will it all be to humanity? Scientific knowledge is mental light; it will shine into all departments of human relations, and direct the steps and rule the conduct of men. Science will revolutionize human thought, destroy the old institutions, and open the door to new opportunities and greater possibilities. Where now men feel and grope, where now men plod and hope, they will, through application of scientific law, stand erect and walk in new ways in realization of the rewards of light and life! Humanity has looked forward to the coming of the age of science; all of the activities of the human and physical worlds for ages have been in the direction of the great consummation; Deity has worked and waited for this time, and humanity has groaned under the burdens of the age of darkness. The great hope of the world has not been in vain; Nature is true to herself and to the world of man, and must ultimately manifest her treasures of promise; but she must reach the climax in Man, and execute her highest laws of life and love through his intellect and will.

The church is making its last rally around the flag of failure. The clergy are zealous in stirring up enthusiasm with which to begin the twentieth century; $100,000,000 are asked by mission boards for the purpose of church extension, that the kind of civilization which curses the modern world may be carried to the interior of nations, of which they have as yet but touched the borders. There is nothing in the turning of the centuries to inspire Christendom; the history of the church for the past 500 years is sufficient to demonstrate the fact that its determination in lines of apostasy is too strong to admit of reformation; the church is too dead to admit of resurrection. The church has made civilization what it is; it has filled the nations with corruption; it has cursed the world with false commerce. It has waged war, it has not brought peace; it has promulgated fallacy, it does not contain the truth. It is but the old garment of the dispensation, and it cannot weave the new. It has reached the limit of its evolution, and is breaking up; it has seen its best days, and must now pass away. It preaches judgment, and enters it; it pictures hell, because it reflects itself. The dooms-day of the church is at hand; it has made itself Babylon, and the signs of the times declare that it is falling! The old church and state must give place to the institutions of the New Era: the revival of religion is in the coming of the Messiah, the coming of the new Kingdom.

The idea that the universe is eternal is suggested outside of Koreshanity by a few such minds as Haeckel and Huxley; it is welcomed by all classes of agnostics, and especially by higher critics because it is opposed to the common Christian idea that the universe first came into existence about 6,000 years ago. When an agnostic finds something that will serve as a basis of an argument against the popular conclusions of the world's creation, he does not hesitate to use it, regardless of the consequences. The logical mind, however, is distinctly aware of the fact that if the universe is eternal it was not created, according to the usual conception of creation, either by a universal force which men call the infinite god, or by a universal force which men call evolution. If the universe is eternal, man as a part of it has always existed; consequently, he never grew out of any other kind of protoplasm than that which is produced in humanity today. Koreshanity demonstrates the eternity of the universe; and this scientific conclusion destroys every fallacious conception of cosmogony; it dissipates the nebular hypothesis as an absurdity on a par with the theories of the theologians. The facts which overthrow ignorant interpretations of the Bible, overthrow also ignorant interpretations of Nature; Christianity and modern science go down together, for they are equally irrational and absurd!

The powers are not satisfied with making war upon China, with demanding the punishment of the leaders of the massacres, with the payment of indemnity in accordance with terms of peace. The treasures of the Chinese capital must be looted to satisfy greed. Civilization has not yet progressed far enough to prevent outrages; Christian savages must commit atrocities—they must defile Chinese women; teach the natives tricks of dishonesty; force upon China the evils which curse at home; wreck works of art; and destroy old landmarks of Chinese science and civilization. The famous astronomical observatory at Pekin is now emptied of astronomical apparatus and records which were the result of the work of centuries. The observatory tower is stripped of its instruments. The great celestial globe; the large bronze azimuth; the special transit instrument; the magnificent sun dial; the planispheres, and other apparatus of Chinese invention and construction—the pride of China, useful in celestial research in the hands of royal astronomers—have been removed and shipped to Berlin and Paris. These were not purchased, they were not presented to the European powers; they were stolen by Christian commanders!

Modern evolutionists have yet to learn that cause and effect are equal, and that cause puts forth no more than that which it contains. The acorn is as complex as the oak—it contains all that it is possible for the oak to be. It is said that materialism holds to the universality and invariableness of law; and yet we find such expressions as this: "Materialism teaches that in the history of this world there has been an evolution from the simple to the complex, from the special to the general, from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous." We would suggest that minds which cannot comprehend the definite vocabulary of Koreshanity, may perhaps find some consolation in endeavoring to mentally digest, in accordance with the principles of chemistry, what is expressed in the above "gem of modern science."

The effort of the pulpit and press to suppress a few forms of vice in the great cities, is a futile effort to stop the tide of sensualism, to sweep back the breakers with a broom. If dams are built across the stream, a greater volume of force is heaped up, and the polluted waters overflow the banks and break out in unexpected quarters. The best and only effective method is to purify the stream of life, to begin at the source, the secret spring, the heart and root of all evil—but the police and the priesthood, the press and the people, are ignorant of the processes!

The twentieth century is the century of Koreshanity's success in the deliverance of the world from the curse. The great victories of the new century, the wonders of the new age, will be achieved through the application of scientific knowledge. Knowledge is power! Science will accomplish the great resurrection, establish the universal empire, and fulfil the desire of all nations.

The idea that there is no evil, disarms its advocates, and paves the way to defeat. It is an opiate which deadens the senses, kills courage, and creates apathy. It is a delusion which denies the existence of terrible realities which must be swept away by the greatest conflict of the ages!

It is said that money is capital. Man neither eats nor wears money; he does not use it as an ornament; it is not an article of industry or commerce; it is neither wealth nor a semblance of it. But money is capital—the capital fraud!

THE EDITOR.

Koreshanity's Scientific Basis.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I appreciate the new and original ideas which I have gained from THE FLAMING SWORD; and I will say that in the Koreshan Literature I find much that is good and acceptable—so that on the one hand, I cannot altogether reject it, and on the other hand, I cannot altogether accept it. I would like to know, if possible, what Koreshanity teaches—what it offers and exacts, both before and after this life; but I never will, I suppose—for after years of reading, it is evident that long before my present rate of progress will bring me to that much-desired end, my "three score and ten" will be up, and I will drop into the grave—and then what? I do not know; and just now it seems to me that no one else does—only this, I do know that time is passing, and so am I—simply drifting.—G. J. B., Joplin, Mo.

Destiny is not reached by drifting; but the case of one who now drifts is not hopeless. The ability to perceive the Truth is not acquired through the experiences of one embodiment, but through a line of progress extending through the centuries. It does not require a superior education in lines of modern learning to understand the Koreshan System; not many of the so called educated minds of today are to be included in the powerful nucleus of the New Society; and not all of the uneducated are to be excluded. Those who love righteousness and desire to live; those who are willing to learn and to sacrifice all ties and to overcome all obstacles and sensual tendencies; those who possess courage and character, and fiber to fight the elements of death, are the ones who now stand at the door of golden opportunities. What does Koreshanity offer to such? The rewards of life and love through obedience to law—immortality in the flesh, the great resurrection into the new natural kingdom now about to be manifest in the earth.

What does Koreshanity offer to those who cannot at this time grasp its truth? The world will move on, and the people with it. The dying ones will reappear, re-embodied, when the conditions of society are better than now; when scientific truth is being let down to other planes than those from which the central nucleus is gathered—and then every man will be saved to the extent of his aspirations. Salvation, in all the degrees in which it will come to humanity, will be universal during the great Age which Koreshanity brings, because the order of the new Kingdom will prevail throughout the world, the hells will be conquered, and humanity will be rejuvenated through the influence of the vital forces of the Immortals.

We are living in a time which corresponds to that before the martyrdom of Jesus—then there were few who could grasp the import of the teachings of the Messiah; but within a few years there came a mighty baptism, and 3,000 were stimulated in one day to accept the message of the Apostles; then 5,000; then the hundreds of thousands, under the ministration of the primitive church. We are nearing the culmination of the old dispensation; when it ends, the door of opportunity to come into the divine Fellowship is not closed—rather, the door is opened wide, and thousands—hundreds of thousands, who cannot now see the truth of Koreshanity will be made to feel the new influence, and be drawn toward the now forming nucleus.

But somebody must accept the truth now, and sacrifice in the early stages of the founding of the New Order; such, of course, will come into the greatest rewards and highest places of trust. It is not best to defer acceptance of Koreshanity until waves of enthusiasm attract the thousands. Let expectation and desire be in harmony. If one expects and desires to live and not die; if one works to live—begins the work of conquering now, he will reach higher and grasp the greatest and most glorious reward.

Begin the application of what truth you perceive in Koreshanity. The entire System is scientific; it is consistent and harmonious with itself. If one can see that any part of it is true, it should be sufficient encouragement, sufficient evidence that it is altogether true,—the expression of a Man of integrity, without the recognition of whom, either now or ultimately, no real progress can be made in either comprehension or application of the Truth he reveals.

The Incarnation of Deity.

A New York Clergyman Admits that the Bible Unequivocally Declares the Gospel of the God-Man.

One of the marvelous things about the collection of writings which we call the Bible, is the unity of thought which pervades them all. Sixty-six books, but only one dominating thought. More than forty different writers, yet only one controlling purpose. Patriarchs, prophets, seers, kings, peasants, herdsmen, fishermen, learned scholars, and unschooled working men write these books, yet all hold in mind, one thought and one person. From Genesis to Revelation the one thought is the salvation of man, the one Person is the Son of man, our Saviour.

This season of the year invites us to a special consideration of His wonderful personality. Study of the Scriptures shows us that He is spoken of in language which cannot be fairly interpreted except on the supposition that He possessed a two-fold nature. [Dr. Hull is between two fires—popular theological fallacy and the Bible. The humanity of Jesus was divine; his flesh was holy and immortal; he did not possess two natures.—EDITOR FLAMING SWORD.] He was man; absolutely, literally, really man. He was more than [mortal] man; He was God. He was Deity in humanity! He was God incarnate! Fittingly we may inquire: What was the incarnation?

The Mystery of Life Baffles Modern Science

The naturalist studying the simple structure of the lowest organisms, where there are a uniform texture and but one organ performing the offices of brain, heart, lungs, and stomach, has little to perplex him. When, however, he comes to the study of the complex anatomy of man he finds difficulty upon difficulty. The life-long labors of thousands of scientists have not yet sufficed to explain the wonders of our own organism. Our very life, conscious of it as we are, has to this day eluded any satisfactory scientific definition. How much more, then, shall we be perplexed, when we contemplate human life in combination with divine life! * *

Two extreme views have been held of the person of Christ that still survive in modified form, one holding that Christ was only a man in close relation to Deity, thus emphasizing His humanity; the other holding that the body was human, but the soul was divine. This latter view in one of its forms was advocated, in his later years, by the most famous preacher Brooklyn ever knew. Both these views were advocated in the early ages of the church. Both were condemned by the church in councils held more than fourteen centuries ago. It is needless for us [the clergymen] to attempt to explain or to clarify thought on matters so abstruse. Let us rather stand fast by the declarations of the Scripture. By these declarations Jesus is a real man. He is touched in all points with the feeling of our infirmities. He was subject to all the temptations, trials, wants, and sufferings of humanity. His whole life was a real human life. He lived as a man lives, he died as a man dies. In only one respect did his human life differ from ours; He was absolutely without sin.

Jesus Claimed to be God Almighty.

Jesus was more than [mortal] man. He was God! The first chapter of John has no meaning except as it sets out to declare this fact. No wonder that infidelity sought and still seeks to discredit this gospel of the beloved disciple! He teaches us by the record of the words of Jesus himself that he claimed to be equal with the Father. Yes, he claimed to be the Father. Listen to his reply to Philip. The disciple says: "Lord, show us the Father and it sufficeth us." Jesus said: "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou, then, show us the Father? Believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father in me?" We hold that in Jesus there dwelt the "fulness of the Godhead bodily." Thus held Paul, saying to Timothy: "God was manifest in the flesh, justified in spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory."

We may very profitably consider what this incarnation teaches. Certainly, since Jesus is both God and man, we learn that our faculties and our moral nature are similar to God's. In other words, the incarnation shows man's kinship to God. Let who will trace their descent back, through the varied forms of animal life, to the speck of formless jelly. With the Apostle Luke we prefer to go back to Adam and say: "Adam, which was the Son of God." Abate not one jot or tittle of your high descent, ye redeemed ones. Our redemption is possible because of our relationship to Him who in the beginning breathed into us the breath of life.

The incarnation teaches further, that God adheres to his purpose to fit us to dwell with him. Our deprived moral nature separated us from the absolutely Holy One. With that nature there could be nothing but separation from Him who is the source of all blessedness. But the incarnation is God stooping down to lift us up from the awful depth to which we had fallen. The incarnation expects atonement. Bethlehem is the prophecy of Calvary. Bethlehem's midnight glory and the praising angels are the prelude to the awful blackness of Calvary's atoning sacrifice and the forsaken cry. Calvary's quaking earth then resolves itself into the broken tomb and the ascension mount, with the ravishing glories of that coming for which we wait, when heaven's radiant hosts, surrounding the exalted Jesus, shall come with Him to judgment, saying: "Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne," for he is "King of kings and Lord of lords." —DR. R. B. HULL, in Brooklyn Eagle.

The Flaming Sword.

A Chicago Magazine's Review of Koreshanity and its Publications.

Many of our readers have heard of the Koreshanity creed, of which the prophet KORESH, commonly known as CYRUS R. TEED, is the Founder. KORESH claims to be the forerunner of several thousand Sons of God, who will shortly inherit the earth. His somewhat original philosophy is claimed by him to furnish an explanation of all things in the heavens above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth. His views are sufficiently radical and startling to suit the most abnormal taste. Among other original views which he springs upon the unsuspecting public, his doctrine of the "Inside Theory of the earth," also known as the "Cellular Cosmogony," is especially noticeable. KORESH takes issue with the astronomers and other scientists, and holds that we live on the inside of the earth, and that the entire universe is an immense cell, with the sun and stars in the middle, and the earth forming the outside shell, upon the inside of which we live.

KORESH evidently agrees with the conclusions of Aaron Burr, who defined the word law as "that which is boldly asserted and plausibly maintained." He boldly asserts and plausibly maintains some of the most remarkable theories that ever emanated from the brain of man. As usual with these latter-day prophets, he has a large and rapidly growing following, who regard him as a divine Messenger. In common with most of the founders of the new sects, KORESH is a fluent speaker and has an unusual amount of self-confidence and self-assertion.

He publishes the organ of his sect, which journal is aptly styled THE FLAMING SWORD. It is a queer sheet, but is edited with an air of earnestness which is likely to make an impression upon the reader of a certain class. At the head of its editorial page it is announced that it is published under the auspices of KORESH, the Founder of the Koresban System, and VICTORIA GRATIA, Pre-Eminent of the Koresban Unity. In its list of prominent contributors, we find the name of Amanda T. Potter, and one whose title is given as Astro-Vigilus. Just what an Astro-Vigilus is, we do not know, but presume that the office indicated by the name is that of official star-gazer to his reverence—KORESH.

THE FLAMING SWORD is published by the Guiding Star Publishing House, No. 314 W. Sixty-third street, Chicago, Ill. We presume that the publishers will send a sample copy, if the request is accompanied with a stamp. As a curiosity, THE FLAMING SWORD is a success, and will undoubtedly interest you in the direction of opening your eyes to the existence of some of "the queer things going on" in this year of enlightenment, A. D. 1900.—Suggestion (Parkin's Magazine), Chicago, Ill.

The Curse of Competition.

Hon. A. M. Dewey, of the U. S. Department of Labor, Opposes the Present System of Industry and Commerce.

Grant every other reform sought today, and leave the competitive system, and the people will still be in economic slavery, as they surely are today. The cry against the trusts is folly. They eliminate wasted industrial energy from the scheme of production and distribution. The department store is the labor-saving machine of commerce.

Show the people that the co-operative system of industry will promote the cause of humanity—that it will stop strikes and lockouts by removing the cause of such disturbances; that it will lessen the criminal forces by removing the incentive to crime, that it will close the saloon as the place of debauchery and drunken revelry by creating within the individual a higher respect for himself, thus promoting temperance and sobriety; that it will make every man a better citizen, and every citizen a better man, and I believe there are few people who would not assist in the effort to bring about the desired change.

Under the spur of selfish interest, the efforts of the common people are fast being taken away. It was Lord Byron who said: "A thousand years scarce serve to form a state; an hour may lay it in the dust." It should be the duty of every good citizen to do his part to avert such an ending for the fairest republic on earth. I would save the nation and the nation's people from disaster, and I would do that, too, beneath the sheltering folds of our own emblem of civil and religious liberty—the Stars and Stripes. If we are citizens, let us also be men; if we are men let us be men in the truest sense of the word. We can be if we will.

The competitive system annuls the efforts of the church and all the fraternal brotherhoods to promote the cause of justice and universal brotherhood among the people. And there can be no end to that system but anarchy and blood. But with national co-operation in industry, there is removed every incentive to wrong one's fellows, and the end must be the realization of the hopes of the true disciples of the Carpenter of Nazareth, and all of those who have espoused the cause of human progress, justice, charity, and brotherly love.

The conflict for the supremacy of right over wrong, for exact justice to all people, over the insatiate greed of the individual master, is already on, and the man who cannot see it is surely blinded by selfish interests and his fancied security under the inhuman competitive system. But it does not require the prophetic foresight of a Daniel to see in the signs of the times the dawning of a brighter day for the sons of toil.—HON. A. M. DEWEY.

The Great Dragon.

The Comedy of the Powers and Tragedy of the Chinese Empire.

There was once an old dragon who lived all by himself, and enjoyed his own society immensely, and cultivated the fad of having everything about him yellow. There was no one to question his taste in colors, until one day he was visited by a cinnamon bear, a tame lion, a trick elephant, and some other animals who had traveled with a circus and called themselves "civilized." They insisted that he ought to wear a red necktie and cock his hat on one side of his head the way they did, and smoke cigarettes. To this last he offered strenuous objections, but they whipped out their revolvers and made him smoke their "dope," until he got under its influence and rather liked it.

Koresh at Washington.

DR. CYRUS R. TEED left Chicago Dec. 20, on a tour of promulgation of Koreshanity; and may be addressed at Washington, D. C. (General Delivery) until further notice.

They argued with him about God, and told him he must say some words and go through some performances that they would teach him, or he would be eternally damned. They all had different words and forms to teach him, and quarreled among themselves, and as he took no interest in their controversies, they called him an ignorant old heathen.

They told him he had no enterprise, and they proposed to build a railroad through his garden, and to erect factories with greasy machinery and disagreeable noise and suffocating smoke, in place of some of his flower beds. They told him it was a shame to live in such a lazy manner, and that he ought to borrow money and buy a lot of things he didn't want, and pay interest and rent, so that he would be obliged to cultivate habits of industry and thrift.

They offered him money—yellow money, too!—on first mortgage security, at six per cent interest. Then they sat down on his front porch and talked about dividing up the place into town lots, and quarreled among themselves as to which should get the biggest slice. As a result, the silly old dragon lost his temper, and went to thrashing his tail right and left, doing considerable damage to "foreign interests." Of course, he must be punished for his ill temper and discourteous manners, and made to pay an "indemnity"—which is just as good for the purpose of establishing a claim to his place, as getting him to borrow money.—The Straight Edge.

THE PERFECT MAN.

When the perfect man is come,
Earth and heaven shall be his home.
With material senses fine
He shall dwell in space and time,
And shall be a separate part
Of great Nature's Mother-Heart.
In his veins the Sun shall glow;
In his pulse the Earth-life flow.

All that lives and all that feels Utter to his heart appeals;
Speaking in a separate tongue,
Voicing Wisdom ever young.
His great sympathy shall flow
Through all forms of life below;
Flowers and birds shall talk to him,
And the stars that overswim
Through their Heaven-revealing eyes
Utter speech of Paradise.

Largely gifted, largely blest,
Of the world and sky possessed,
He shall be great Nature's heir—
Lord of Earth and Sea and Air;
Like a benediction dwell,
Doing all things wise and well.

There shall be no sickness then;
Health shall weave her anadem;
Music fall from heaven like rain;
Birth be free from mother-pain.
Earth that now in wide extremes
Fever flushed or frozen seems,
Like the human soul shall be—Modulated harmony.

—"Epic of the Starry Heavens."

Four Classes of People

In this competitive age, there are four kinds of people: the unemployed (the dangerous parasites in power); the disemployed, or those who want to work and are unable to get it; the misemployed, or those who are employed on works of destruction, or in occupations injurious to the interests of society; and the employed, or those who work long hours for a small wage, in producing utilities for a capitalistic master-class to reap profit therefrom. And from the sweat and toil and blood of the employed class, the other three classes of the disemployed, the misemployed, and the unemployed, reap their subsistence.—The Toiler.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

The American Review of Reviews.—The January number has a great variety and extraordinary alertness and timeliness; it contains a number of important and carefully written articles concerning people, important questions of the hour and society, and government in prospect. The Editor's special reviews of current events—The Progress of the World—is full of interest. The number is full of portraits and illustrations, numbering about 150.

The Leading Articles of the Month is a department containing matter condensed from other periodicals, and presents many topics of especial moment. The Review of Reviews closes its tenth year; from the outset it met with unprecedented favor from thinking and reading people of the United States; and it is now the leading review of the world. This publication must be distinguished from the English Review of Reviews, edited by W. T. Stead, of London; they are totally separate publications, the one published in New York, and edited by Dr. Albert Shaw, is undoubtedly the most distinctively American monthly published in this country.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.—We are glad to note immense improvement in this monthly. Human interest is its keynote; all its stories and articles follow closely to lines of genuine human experience. The January number comes to us with its cover adorned with a beautiful reproduction of Trumbull's famous painting, "The Declaration of Independence." It contains an important article on the recent Cuban convention, fully illustrated; also a fine illustrated description of the making of locomotives. It contains an unusual number of excellent short stories. It appears in beautiful form, and its illustrations show the best results yet achieved by ten-cent magazines. 141-147 Fifth avenue, New York City.

The Cosmopolitan.—Perhaps the most interesting article in the January number is The Paris Press, by Emil Friend, which portrays the editorial peculiarities of the press representatives of the nation, as well as the character of the French people. Another, Americanisms Once More, deals with the peculiarities of the language of Americans. Some Chinese Oddities is finely illustrated, as also is Beauty on the Paris Stage. The fiction this month is excellent, and the whole number is fine. The Cosmopolitan is one of the leading 10-cent magazines. Irvington, N. Y.

Leslie's Weekly.—The current issue contains a number of messages of the nineteenth to the twentieth century, from the pen of well-known Americans; their contributions are thoughtful and pertinent, and the illustrations are timely—one showing an impressive watch-night service. A page is devoted to sketchy illustrations of the bright side of the Boer war, and another to lively scenes at the immigration depot, New York. A timely article appears, Why Churches Decline. 10 cents per copy, at news-stands, or from 110 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Mind.—Dr. J. M. Saunders contributes a good article, the Social Influence of the Fine Arts; and another is The World We Live In, written from the standpoint of new thought mental science. Religious Training in Public Schools looks to reform in educational methods. The editorial and review departments are interesting. 20 cents per copy. Alliance Publishing Co., Life Building, New York.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of universal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

America's Bondage to the Money Power.

Mental Reflections after Visiting the Government Printing Establishment and Witnessing the Processes of Making Paper Money; the Hastening Consummation and the Scientific Remedy.

WE WERE PERMITTED recently to observe the various processes through which the paper passes in the creation of the paper money of the Government. As we observed the process, our brain was active on many lines of thought. We considered how easy it was to multiply to five, ten, twenty, fifty, one hundred, five hundred, and one thousand dollar bills, and that these notes would pass current anywhere that the nation making them had credit. We thought if the Republic of the United States of America were a commonwealth in fact as well as in name, how easy it would be to so provide as to supply to all the people throughout our vast domain, the necessities, comforts, and luxuries of life, through the distribution of this medium of the exchange of the products of industry and commerce. What, after all, is the object of this creation, upon which there are employed hundreds of young men and women, four hundred being employed in one room? This question would obtrude, and the answer was, to facilitate exchanges. What is behind all these four hundred millions of dollars?—for we were told that in one room that was pointed out to us, there were four hundred million dollars of this paper money. The query led us into a cursory inspection of the monetary system of the American Government.

The first easy proposition resided in the fact that this paper was valuable, not from its intrinsic worth, but from the fact that the authority making the issue had a credit primarily founded upon the vast mineral, agricultural, industrial, commercial, and other resources of our country; it was the promise to pay, signed by eighty millions of industrial people, or signed by their representatives. It resided in the fact that eighty millions of people would guarantee the delivery of the products of their toil to other millions of people who had use for our productions. While this seems an easy proposition, the monetary system of the Government and of the world is much more complicated than this easy proposition indicates.

What would be easier, we thought, than for the Government to issue this money directly to the people, with as little security from them as bank depositors received from the banks wherein they deposited their money? Could not the people trust themselves—if they could find any one honest enough to represent them—as well as the people could trust the bankers? What more is needed, we continued to query, than the security founded upon our vast resources and the integrity of eighty millions of population? For some reason, the industrial and commercial resources of the country are not sufficient to secure the delivery of the goods which this paper represents. In addition to this guarantee, the people of this "commonwealth" must hold in reserve gold enough to meet the payment of interest on its issues, because the money is not issued to the people, but to the bankers of whom the gold is borrowed for which we have issued bonds upon which we are paying interest.

The people of the United States, whose paper would be a complete guarantee for the delivery of any and all goods, and the security of all imports entrusted to them, purchase gold—which has comparatively little commercial value—and endorse the stamps of other governments by their own stamp, thus placing a valuation upon what would be almost worthless without the stamp. We not only promise to pay the interest in gold—the gold which we borrow, but we promise to pay the principal in the gold which we borrowed but have never possessed. We must reiterate what we have a thousand times repeated—the verity that gold is valuable as money because of the stamps of the governments of the world.

Why do we as a nominal commonwealth, take this roundabout way of exchanging our own with the world's products? We do it because the rich banker class controls our legislation in its own interests, as against the interests of the masses of the people. When will the masses learn that they own the government? When will they learn the great lesson, that in forty years of legislation there has not been enacted one law in their interests, but that every act of legislation is in the interests of the rich and not of the poor? We are a great country; we have asserted our dominance over the commercial interests of the world; we have a great navy, and have demonstrated to the powers of the world that we exercise a controlling force; we have made the bankers of the world rich through our supreme benevolence; why may we not now perform a little legislation in our own behalf? We can give one reason why there will be no legislation in behalf of the people,—it is because the halls of legislation are under the control of the money power, and there is but one power in the universe that can meet and overthrow it; that is the power of God.

We have placed ourselves in the hands of the money power of the world, in the grip of the modern Shylock; and the grip will continue until the crack of the doom that awaits the world. We are as completely under the bondage of the money power, as were the children of Israel under their Egyptian bondage. That was a great oppression, and one difficult to bear, but this bondage caps the climax; this is the consummation; now will Issachar know that he is a strong ass couching down between two burdens; the burden of taxation, including the interest on bonds, and the burden of the robber employer.

Has the world discovered the remedy for the evil of the times upon which we have fallen, and the curse of our present legislative methods? Would we have been benefited by the accession to power of the democratic party? Would an increase of our money,—still in the hands of the corporate thief and bloated bondholder,—through the reestablishment of bimetallism, have settled the difficulty? It might have deferred the evil day, but it could not have solved the problem. Would the election of Mr. Bryan have given to the nation the meed which would clothe, feed, shelter, and afford comfort and luxury to the creator of the riches of the world? Not by any means. It was a blessed thing for this nation that the gold power gained the victory; a boon that only the future can disclose. We boast of our prosperity as a nation, but where is that prosperity experienced? Are the creators of this enormous wealth of which we boast, benefited by the prosperity of the nation, or is our satisfaction derived in our exercise of the injunction, that in honor we ought to prefer one another? The common people will never reap the reward of their labors while the competitive system endures.

Koreshanity offers the only remedy; the solution of the problem is already reached. Would we transform the world on the basis of any social movement now in progress? Will a socialism without religion, or a so called Christian socialism, build the kingdom of the future? Koreshanity comes to the world with a thoroughly organized system of social government. The basis of this kingdom is grounded in the deepest principle of the human soul; namely, the religious force, which constitutes the most sacred bond of obligation and organic power. It may be said, "We have had too much religion already;" but the greatest difficulty resides in the fact that it has not been the correct religion since the decline of the church into paganism.

We do not advocate a return to primitive Christianity, and to the religion of philosophy which then obtained and which was suited to the genius of the age and of the people; the religion of this age is purely scientific. It is the religion which first cements the bond of our fellowship with God, thence our fellowship with one another. It is a religion that will pervade the very outer courts of the human fabric, and will adjust all human relations on the principles of equity. It is the religion which springs from the very fountainhead of human existence, and has its root in the laws of reproductive life. It will come through a new baptism, through a spirit which transforms the character of the heart and soul of man.

It is worse than useless for the world to expect any reformation on any other ground than that of a spiritual metamorphosis which will inspire the soul with a deeper love than the love of money. The baptism will come through Koreshanity, as the final channel of the communication of the vital fluid of a new life. The Koreshan System is the only one which has the power of scientific organic unity.

The Mortality of the Soul.

"THE SOUL that sinneth it shall die." Can the soul die? If it can, then it is not undying; immortal means undying. If the soul can die, is it immortal? If it cannot die, is it mortal? Is it not about time that the world did its own thinking? How long will the human mind remain sluggish, and permit clerical numbskulls to lullaby it into false sentiments and false hopes?

"None hath immortality but God." There is but one life; that life is God. Man does not possess it until the resurrection of the dead, when the fruit matures that was planted by the Lord Christ in the beginning of the age. Man has an identity, but it is a mortal one; he has a corresponding mortal spirit. In each embodiment he fulfils an earthly career, which terminates in the corruptible dissolution of the body. The spirit of that embodiment goes into the spirit world, and passes through a career which also terminates when the spirit disintegrates and again descends into the flesh, formulating another body. The identity is lost when the spirit dies.

The organic grade of every spirit and mould is carried along through the ages, when, in the fulness of time, the cumulative thought is aggregated, re-organized, and clothed with its final body in the resurrection or reincarnation; this being the body which God has given it from himself, as the product of the planting of the Lord's glorious body in the race or church which received it. It is then reproduced in the image and likeness of God; it then becomes a living soul; it is then immortal; it can no longer die. Man thus becomes a living soul.

"God said, let us make man in our image and after our likeness: * * * and breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives; and man [spirit, angel,—sometimes called soul,—and body] became a living soul." The soul made alive by the power of the Lord Christ is immortal; the soul under the power and bondage of death is mortal. This is the doctrine taught in the Bible; and the man who will give it consideration without bias, from a Biblical point of view, and cannot understand it, has but little of the progressive spirit, and his case is hopeless.

In the Great Struggle for Liberty.

Origin of Impulses which have Given Character to America; the Conflict of Church and Modern Science; the Founding of the New Religion.

THE SPECIAL IMPULSION from the old world into the new, which has given character to the Government of the United States, and has had more to do with shaping the destiny of this nation than any other, was the religious persecution of the papal church. No man who lays any claim whatsoever to a knowledge of the ecclesiastical and secular history of Europe for the past four hundred years, can deny the fact that the bias or trend of the human mind toward the degree of liberty which we have attained, has been shaped through human purpose to emancipate itself from the thralldom of priestcraft and clerical jugglery, which for twelve hundred years dominated the affairs of men.

A careful examination into the real animus and progress of what the new world calls liberty, will reveal the fact that not so much is due to the Protestant church—even for the right we possess to direct the destiny of the human soul and give it amplitude of scope in which to expand its powers of flight into the realm of prescient circumspection, that by the exercise of reason it might find out God, a discovery left to the untrammelled and progressive intellect of the ripening age—as to the infidel and irreligious, but perhaps moral, determination of human thought.

Since the so called reformation, when the outward march of the religious nature sought to divest itself of the authority of misguided and misleading ecclesiasticism, there sprang also, apparently from the same tree, having its origin in the same root, another phase of progressive effort; and while both struggled for delivery, the birth brought forth, not religious liberty, but another phase of religious persecution; and the salvation of secular liberty was not in the hand of the church, but in the hand of the infidel, who was ever to be found in the van of scientific, not religious research.

Step by step, the various phases of so called science and political economy have fought their way against the opposition of the church; and step by step, the church of so called inspiration has been compelled to yield interpretations of Nature and Scripture to the march of intellect and reason. The intellect may be as cold as the church has been cruel, and the reason may have been founded upon an utterly false premise; yet, notwithstanding this, the church has adopted the conclusions of the infidel and the atheist, because, with all its pretended inspiration, modern reason has fought its battle and is victorious over church in the conflict.

The church fought its battle for supremacy in Europe—and lost the fight. It will rally for another conflict on this continent, and it will here also meet defeat. From the final contest there will arise another faith, founded upon another exposition of the cosmic function and form; and in this new manifestation and truly progressive order—born of liberty—religion and science will again walk hand in hand, and reconciliation, replete with God's fulness, will acclaim the redundant glorification of the approaching jubilee.

Let antagonistic sects and religions fight their battles, while each one struggles for supremacy; let political parties contend for political preferment and the spoils of office; let "capital and labor" compete for the loaves and fishes of the competitive system of activity; let Nationalism, with all the other forms and manifestations of atheism, attempt organic unity; but above all, let the world make way for the rider on the White Horse, upon whose vesture is written the name, "King of kings," and upon whose thigh is written, "Lord of lords;" for despite all opposition, this Rider will lead to victory and supremacy, and the universe will bow its knee to the Christ of God, the personal Immanuel, God with us.

Sorrows of Labor and Joys of Industry.

The Age of Bondage Under the Curse; the Great Competitive Conflict and its Consequences; the Coming Era of Deliverance and Recreation.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

ACCORDING TO THE BIBLE, the curse of labor was imposed upon man in consequence of the fall. What was the fall? It was the voluntary descent of the divine life from its own plane into that of sinful human life, in response to the aspirations of those who looked up for a Saviour. Moved by tender love, albeit constrained by a gracious law, immortal man, perfect, biune, living in the joyous freedom of the covenant relation that placed him above the schoolmaster—the Decalogue, fell as good seed into waiting hearts. The seed that is sown must die ere it be quickened; so the sinless became the sinful.

Labor is irksome toil; so long as man is under the law he labors to keep the commandments. He is angry with his brother, and wrath prompts the murderous impulse; a flood of material desires sweeps away his best resolves and, will dethroning reason, he covets wealth and beauty that surround another. The toilsome effort to resist temptation is labor in a moral sense, and on the material plane of outer life and relations it has its correspondence in the constant necessity for overwork imposed by the enormous difficulties of making even the poorest living. The laborer must eat bread in the sweat of his brow until the curse be lifted.

The term labor comes from a verb that means to totter, to be about to fall. As soon as man comes under the conditions that require labor, he has fallen from the higher spiritual state into one of servitude to lower needs. To labor for the meat that perishes, to be obliged to struggle day by day in order to provide food, clothing, and shelter for the body while the intellectual faculties are given no opportunity for development—this is indeed a curse. What shall lift it in fulfilment of the comforting words, "There shall be no more curse"?

The operation of the great law of transmutation is the hope of the world. No wonder the ancient alchemists sought for it diligently all through the ages that are called dark, when at least a tradition of it remained, and some still believed in the possibility of changing the base and despised to the worthy and esteemed. The law of transmutation will change labor to industry, and industry is the reverse of labor as shown by its root meaning, to stand, whereas labor, as just stated, involves the idea of falling. Industry is joy, labor is sorrow; industry is recreative, because whatsoever form of work is performed with delight, tends toward the normal adjustment of body, soul, and spirit, establishing them in relations of harmony. Joy causes the brain cells to expand and generate a larger flow of cerebral fluid upon which health depends. Any person who feels that his work is valuable to the whole community, rather than to himself alone; who is not obliged to pursue that specific industry more than five hours per day; who knows that in kind as well as in amount, it is best suited to call out his highest possibilities, must be happy. Under the Koreshan régime, such happiness will be a practical reality for every citizen.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." It is the voice of divine love that speaks in tender accents. To come unto the Lord is to come into his character and attributes, to become like him a Son of God, the possessor of immortal life. There is no other form of rest for those that labor, contending with the forces of sin, both subjective and objective—in the heart and in the difficulties of material existence.

The law of transmutation is the hope of the world. For nineteen hundred years humanity has labored and sorrowed, the flesh lusting against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh, waiting for the redemption of the body. The intellect has been a slave, compelled to serve the bodily desires. Those who have heaped up wealth to gratify every fancy, have instituted wage slavery in a collective form, so that the condition of the body social is a perfect reflection of the condition of the individual body. But we have a glorious hope. The divine alchemy will change these mortal bodies into the likeness of the glorified body of the Lord. At the same time, the body social will be redeemed from the curse of labor.

"Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it thou shalt do no work."

The Koreshan age, which is also the return of the fabled age of gold, is the great Sabbath or rest of the Lord. For six days, through the declining years of the cycle, man has labored in heaviness and sorrow. During the Koreshan age he will do no work; he will cease to labor, but he will perform uses to the neighbor and enjoy the exercise and the products of a healthful industry. He will stand erect, not bowed with miserable drudgery and prematurely old, like "the man with the hoe." The rightful application of labor-saving machinery will guard him from the most disagreeable tasks, which all desire to shun, and the reign of order will ensure the highest degree of intelligence and civilization.

The pity which the wage slaves of the competitive system inspire in those who honestly consider their sad estate, is also excited by the toilsome labors of latter day men of science. Their strength is indeed labor and sorrow, soon cut off by the Sword of truth. Some of them have devoted twenty-five years to the observation of certain lower forms of animal and vegetable life.

They have gone out with lanterns to grovel in the night for earth-worms; they have shut themselves in cages in the isolation of African forests in order to acquire the dialect of monkeys. Their efforts have resulted mainly in unjustifiable theories and hypotheses. But while they have labored to collate facts in the circumference, another mind has grasped with ease the central principle of being—the Messianic law. While they have experimented with earth-worms and monkeys, Koresh has apprehended the secret of immortal life.

Statistics prove that the suicidal mania is increasing at an alarming rate. The war between "labor and capital" is a conspicuous example of this phase of decadency. In a last analysis, labor is capital and capital is labor. They are destined to destroy each other, then the Koreshan industrial system will come to the front. In the same manner, those whom the world honors as scientists are destroying each other in a warfare of chaotic and conflicting theories. Memorizing facts is labor; apprehending central principles is a delight. The mind is led on from one to another with ever-increasing surprise and joy. In education, as in sociology, the distinction between labor and industry holds good.

Modern Travesties on Justice.

Relations of Present Humanity in Keeping with its States of Development; False Theories and Imperfect Ideals; Woman's Future in the Work of Construction.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

JUSTICE as idealized by even the most superior type of the sensual race, is farcical; because, as indigent to the soil of its nativity, it cannot surpass its source. The effect cannot exceed the cause. When effect outstretches sensual human confines, it is referable to the great First Cause, who stoops to metamorphose human ineffectiveness. The monarchical, the democratic, the tribal, and the family relation evolves involved principles strictly in keeping with the status of development, and the principle called justice falls as far short of the genuine, as those exercising it fall short of the Deific manifestation. And this is not all: There must always be a painfully wide interval between this imperfect ideal, this lame theory, and the practical application of it.

This last returns the pathetic picture of Maurice Maeterlinck philosophizing over his twain attitudes—the one of his admiration as fully under Deific ban as is the one of his reprobation: He depicts the fireside life conducted in noble, simple, true, honest, charitable, blameless fashion, while the exact opposite is practised where foot and pavement meet. We say pathetic, because it speaks a strong soul crying in the darkness; pathetic because all the context shows that he desires beyond his light, but does not dream that a factor of the basis of his injustice to men lies in the picture wherein his hearthstone is the focal point:

Then one said unto him, behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

Men need not dream that they practice justice in their household while they permit a difference between the hither and the thither of their thresholds. They are beset with selfishness. Before they can rest in the peace of exercised equity, they must inhere its basis—supreme love to God, and self-love equaled by love to the neighbor. Justice will not appear until woman, emancipated from bondage to man, is vivified by the male principle through the baptism of the Father spirit. Deity then inhering in her, becomes her impelling power—her head. Through this power she becomes the constructor of the heavenly kingdom in earth.

In woman resides the constructive genius, universal and specific. Men grant her the apex of constructive function in her specific office of sensual motherhood, but fail to follow her in thought to her office in universal motherhood, wherein she materializes God's government in earth. The curse provided that the woman's desire should be unto her husband, and that her husband should rule over her. If the woman's desires were unto God, while a sensual husband controlled her, she would necessarily exist as a sort of Theo-anthropotic mermaid, belonging in part to the sublime atmosphere of the God kingdom, and in part to the sea of human lasciviousness.

While woman is ruled over by man, the one is shorn of her head, and the other of his glory, and neither abides in the Lord: "For the head of the woman is the man;" and "the woman is the glory of the man;" "nevertheless, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man in the Lord." As they exist today they are two-fleshed; as they are in the Lord, they are one flesh. But woman shall be in the Lord in the day wherein she is called "the Lord our Righteousness." No condition shall be wanting to constitute her the Lord, since he has said: "My glory will I not give to another."

The Power of the Sower.

EDWIN MARKHAM, IN CHICAGO AMERICAN.

SOON will the lonesome cricket by the stone
Begin to hush the night; and lightly blown
Field fragrances will fill the fading blue—
Old furrow-scents that ancient Eden knew.
Soon in the upper twilight will be heard
The winging whisper of a homing bird.

Who is it coming on the slant brown slope,
Touched by the twilight and her mournful hope—
Coming with Hero step, with rhythmic swing,
Where all the bodily motions weave and sing?
The grief of the ground is in him, yet the power
Of the Earth to hide the furrow with the flower.

He is the stone rejected, yet the stone
Whereon is built metropolis and throne.
Out of his toil come all their pompous shows,
Their purple luxury and plush repose!
The grime of this bruised hand keeps tender white
The hands that never labor, day nor night.
His feet that know only the field's rough floors
Send lordly steps down echoing corridors.

Yea, this vicarious toiler at the plow
Gives that fine pallor to my lady's brow.

And idle armies with their boom and blare,
Flinging their foolish glory on the air—
He hides their nakedness, he gives them bed,
And by his alms their hungry mouths are fed.

Not his the lurching of an aimless clod,
For with the august gesture of a god—
A gesture that is question and command—
He hurls the bread of nations from his hand;
And in the passion of the gesture flings
His fierce resentment in the face of kings.

This is the Earth-god of the latter day,
Treading with solemn joy the upward way;
Strong to make kind the grudging ground, and strong
To pluck the beard of some world honored wrong—
A lusty god that in some crowning hour
Will hurl Gray Privilege from the place of power.

These are the inevitable steps that make Unreason tremble and Tradition shake—
This is the World Will climbing to its goal,
The climb of the uncurbable sure soul—
Democracy whose sure insurgent stride
Jars kingdoms in their ultimate stone of pride.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE MAKING OF NATIONS is in the line of progress; as the centuries come and go, the world witnesses the shifting of boundary lines, the transferring of power, and the moving of great commercial centers. History is the record of the development and deterioration of races; of the construction and fall of kingdoms; of the growth and decay of empires; of the rise and decline of dynasties, and of the waxing and waning of civilizations. From the Orient to the Occident the line of progress extends—the course of empire is westward; it has moved from Babylon to Briton, and Destiny pushes toward the great West across the Atlantic—and even now the two Indies are linked together by the growing power of America. As the world enters the new century, minds speculate as to the future map of the world, since it is evident from the basis of the history of the nineteenth century, that a change in political divisions is inevitable through the expansion of America and the contraction of Europe. Modern conjectures concerning the future geography of the world is founded upon the tendency of the present order of things; but how great factors yet unknown to the world may surprise the modern prophets! Sometimes the dreams of kings prove prophetic. The facts of history have corroborated and fulfilled the prophecies involved in the great dream-image of the king of Babylon and interpreted by the Hebrew prophet; in accordance with the predictions of Daniel, the great empires of Babylon, Medo Persia, Greece, and Rome have risen to the zenith of glory and receded into the dead past, until now many of their cities lie in ruins. If so remarkable a line of prophecies concerning the development and decline of empires has been fulfilled to the letter, there is abundant evidence that the great sequel to the story of these four universal empires remains to be unfolded in the course of the events of the world—the great revolution, the fall of fragmentary governments, and the coming of the Fifth Universal Empire—the growing of a great power which will snatch the reins of government from the hand of greed, and rule in righteousness. This is as it should be, and, according to prophecy and science, as it will be, for we have reached the extreme and remnant of the Roman power. In Nature we read the records of the universal dominion of the sun. It sweeps across continents and seas; it shines from pole to pole, and its track is in the tropics as it courses from east to west. Its energies fall upon the entire surface of the earth, and as king of the cosmos, it controls the whole. Every atom in the earth and sky—everything from the planes to the planets, from the strata to the stars, is under its universal imperialism. History for the past 2,000 years has been made in Europe; and now Destiny places the responsibility upon America, the home of genuine liberty, the land of the freedom of the Gods. A Hand now unknown to the world, unrecognized by the nations, will wipe out political boundary lines, open a new volume of history, and write the records of Destiny in the glory of the universal dominion of the Sun!

The twentieth century begins with some wild speculations and sensational announcements in the scientific world, in which Lowell, the astronomer; Tesla, the electrician; and Loeb, the chemist and biologist, figure conspicuously; and the daily press stocks up in line of incredible things. The latest "elixir" is common salt, which is promising to lengthen the life of both man and beast; while "artificial parthenogenesis" is supposed to improve on the processes of Nature. Through the Flagstaff observatory telescope, a bright spot is said to have been observed on Mars, faintly flashing what the over-enthusiastic astronomer assumes to be an unparalleled endeavor of the Martians to communicate a message of joy or distress to the inhabitants of the earth. They do wonderful things on this planet—if sensationalists are to be believed. The marvelous canals bespeak at least vivid imagination of the heads of observatories; and in view of the existence of the great Martian waterways, a heliograph with a reflector several miles in diameter should not be astonishing; neither should the existence of an electrical machine capable of generating more electricity than a score of thunder-storms combined, be surprising to the subjects of practiced illusionists! Perhaps a bonfire on Mars, large enough to cover the island of Cuba, might just be faintly visible to the people of the earth—but who could interpret its flashes? Who of the scientists knows but what Mars has been piteously appealing to the earth for a thousand years, knocking incessantly at the other end of electric currents and rays of light—and only now, at the beginning of the twentieth century, have minds conceived of the possibility of receiving messages from the distant planet by means of physical apparatus? The great Tesla has seen fit to be foolish enough to assert that mere electrical disturbances of his apparatus are the result of vibrations from some distant planet—presumably Mars, notwithstanding the fact that he has not yet been able to send a message across the American continent by means of wireless telegraphy! No doubt the world is ready to swallow these “scientific” sensations, licensed by noted men, and announced by the press; but the time is at hand when all such vagaries will be dissipated by the actual truth of the Cellular Cosmos!

The common plea for “applied Christianity” and “applied religion,” is made by minds under the belief that modern Christianity has, as yet, done nothing in the world of practical affairs; hence it is expected that when that which is known as Christianity today is applied, practical socialism will result, war will be abolished, and happiness prevail. The trouble is that Christianity as it exists today has been too long applied. The false beliefs of the church are expressed in industry and commerce as well as in life and thought; under its influence, wars have been fought and progress impeded. When the church fell, it fell to the plane of all the corruptions of civilization. Misconception of the mercy of God has given license to the sensualist and the criminal, and to the business man in competition with his neighbor. It is also the loophole of escape for the murderer. The idea that absolution is free for the asking, has led Christendom to disregard law, to lose every sentiment of real love, and to waste the very substances of life. We have come down to the judgment made inevitable by the application of perverted Christianity—down to the time of the application of scientific truth, the principles and laws of order and of equity, the founding of a new religion, which will exert its righteous influence in every plane of life and activity. The church is dead, it cannot be revived; its principles are perverted, and should not be applied. Let the true Socialism come from a new Seed, teeming with life and power, and not from the corrupted form in which the leaven of death has worked for centuries!

If we were to believe all that is claimed for Jesus the Christ, he was a Teacher of every conceivable modern idea. We hear of Him today as the great anarchist; the spiritualist; the great medium; the socialist; the agnostic; the freethinker; the infidel; the revolutionist; the hypnotist; the occultist; the magnetic healer; the champion of the brotherhood of man—every new sect claims him as their special ideal. This reminds us of an old Christian legend which says that Jesus once stood by a fire at night in the street of a village; and as he stood his shadow was cast upon a wall. A disciple traced the outline of the shadow with a piece of charcoal. When day came, the pedestrians stopped to wonder whose shadow it was. According to one, it looked like that of a sailor; according to another, like that of a baker; while according to others it represented a peddler; a priest; a lawyer; a stone-mason, etc. But one came who looked at the shadow so long that he grew into a form which cast a sun-shadow which exactly fitted the outline, and the people concluded that it must be his own. Jesus, in fact, was a composite character—he was a composite picture of the people of a dispensation; he was truth involved, and life refined; and it is not surprising that today, advocates of mere fragments should find something in their conceptions which seems to resemble what he taught. Hell is a reflex of the heavens; and inspiration from the hells produces counterfeits of the genuine. But it requires another composite Man to fit the shadow of the Christ.

A socialist monthly, Truth and Freedom, remarks that “THE FLAMING SWORD questions if the world is not in its second childhood, playing with the Chinese puzzle.” It is certain that the world’s representative minds are not solving the great problems of the hour; they are playing with the great issues, while the world is puerile enough to allow itself to be humbugged with all manner of fallacies, and afflicted with numerous gigantic evils. As to its being in its second childhood, it is a fact that the world is growing old; and as an evidence that it is growing childish, we have but to refer to a remarkable dance and supper given in Cleveland, O., January 5, 1901, at which society appeared in children’s dress. It is reported that “the guests were requested to dress and act like ten-year old children, and they did. * * One young manufacturing magnate brought his wife and petite matron in a baby carriage. Some of the guests brought nurses. Bouillon was passed around in bottles, such as those used for babies’ milk. The parlor was arranged like a nursery, and the ball room was full of toys, which were the cotillion favors. When the guests sat down to supper, the waiters placed bibs about their necks. Bald headed men quarreled over toy drums and smashed them. Bad boys invaded the orchestra stage, took the instruments from the musicians and played them. At one figure of the cotillion, the dancers all skipped ropes.”

The editor of Leslie’s Weekly, a journal of world-wide reputation, discusses the question of the decline of the church; and his tone is in keeping with the facts which are disturbing the leaders of decadent Christendom. The gist of the editorial is to the effect that “the admitted decline of the church in its influence and membership is attracting general attention. All great church bodies are suffering from pecuniarily depressing influences.” The causes are attributed to the inroads made by higher criticism; the failure of the churches to adjust themselves to modern conditions, and their lack of interest in and sympathy for the great masses; also to the fact that the church has lost its militant spirit; that it is competing in lines of costly cathedrals, the finest singers, and most expensive chimes; that it lacks the strenuous life; that it does not assert itself; that its members are not distinct from the people in word or deed, and that the church is weak in the face of the gigantic evils both in and out of the organizations. The discussion closes with the following statements and question: “What the church needs is an awakening from the slumber of repose; a leader is needed to sound the battle-cry. Where is the man?” Let the church ask, “Where is the Man?” The rejection of the Man means inevitable judgment—but the lesson of nineteen hundred years ago is not sufficient for the greater Babylon!

Millionaire Carnegie descants on the advantages of capital in its partnership with labor, and asserts that without capital as it is known today, nothing could be built, because “from it comes the first breath of life into matter, previously inert.” In other words, he considers that without the stealing of the millions from the producers, it would be impossible to execute great plans of construction. Why should a few men hold the wealth of nations in their hands, in order to achieve great things in the world's progress? It is absolutely necessary where thieves control; during the period of wage-slavery, when speculators are crowned kings, when tyrants push the world of industry and commerce, the massing of wealth and the formation of gigantic concerns in the semblance of organic unity, enable men to intensify the focal points of the economic hells, and thus control the whole. The twentieth century will witness the wiping out of this old order of misrule, this forcible partnership of so called capital and labor. Usurpation and drudgery will give place to equity and the performance of use in recreation—and then true capital, the energy of the producer and what he produces, will achieve greater things, move more powerful levers, turn more ponderous machinery, build more beautiful cities, and execute greater plans than the world of "capital and labor" now know!

The new century theme of a New York clergyman is, "The task of the ages is to know the Christ;" and his subject leads him to ask the questions: "Are we destined never to find him? Will he always seem so far from where we stand? Is the movement of the centuries a hunt after a will-o'-the-wisp?" Such questions indicate that the modern church, with its clergy, does not know the object of their inquiry. If the church is far from Him today, it is because the church has fallen; if it does not know the Christ, it is because of the prevailing theological ignorance and the false religious life throughout Christendom. The Jewish people presumed to be able to recognize the Messiah; their teachers considered themselves favored with the knowledge of the law and with the correct interpretation of prophecy; but when the Man of the ages came, they failed in the great task of knowing him, though the great advent movement at the close of the Jewish dispensation indicated that he was in their midst. Just as the Jews looked back to Moses while following the spirits of degeneracy, so the modern Christians look back to Jesus in the attempt to grasp the import of his gospel—and they do not know the Christ, the Messenger of Truth, because they do not desire to know and to do what he teaches and commands!

The Administration concludes—after purchasing millions of dollars' worth of silver at 75 to 80 cents per ounce, and after demonetizing the lunar metal and thus reducing it in value, and wasting the money paid for it originally—that it is good enough for the Filipinos; and the work of producing 45 cent dollars for the barbarians is under way. The special dollars will have a face value of 50 cents; they will be half dollars in fact, but the words on the coins will say 100 cents. The silver of which the "dollar" is to be made, is supposed to be worth actually 45 cents, with a 5 cent margin value. How does the government make the extra 5 cents, value? By fiat—the same as all other money is made. The quality of silver has not changed since by an act of Congress the metal was made by law to be worth 100 cents on the dollar; but since silver was demonetized, there is a difference of 55 cents on the dollar. Destroy silver money entirely, and the intrinsic value of the metal would be but a few cents an ounce—a demonstration of the fact that neither gold nor silver can logically be taken as a standard of values; the facts of the depreciation in silver refute the arguments of the advocates of the gold standard.

The editor of The Life objects to quotations from the Bible and perhaps to scientific facts, in proof of the femininity of Deity. It happens, however, that the Bible agrees with Nature in its story of creation and the history of the Creator. Cause expresses whatever it contains—no more, no less; in the great world of effect, there is manifestation of sex. There is sex in everything: In the atom and the smallest cell; in the flower and in the seed that is formed; in the electric current and solar ray; in man, and in the cosmos. There can be nothing in the effect that is not in the Cause; a sexless God could produce nothing. God is more than a principle; he is the Creator. A formless sun could never shine; a formless man could never live; and a formless Deity does not exist, because there is no existence without form. It is nonsense to suppose that principles and possibilities inhere in Nature, which are deficient in the perfect God!

The recent convention of the American Secular Union, at Cincinnati, is certainly not encouraging to freethinkers. The church falls, but the agnostics do not build—they cannot construct. They undertake a great movement, while its elements are in discord. Movements without leaders amount to nothing. While Ingersoll lived, thousands flocked about the man and followed him; but now that he is gone, a thousand would lead, and sects are formed. The modern mind has many a lesson to learn along the lines of organic unity. No system has ever succeeded without specific lines of determination. The freethinkers would destroy religion—the element of social cohesion; they repudiate poles and pivots of power, upon the principles of which the very existence of the universe depends. Let everything fail which disregards law, and which militates against the principles of life!

It has been said that the majority of "authors who have found the years beyond seventy to be the best of their lives, have been very social in their habits, and have shared their lives largely with others. Nearly all of them have been engaged in beneficent enterprises which have fixed their minds upon purposes which lift life over petty things and selfish frictions." They have lived over and beyond the ties of family, exchanging mental substances with others in their plane. This is the aim of Koreshan Communism and its commerce of life and thought—to attain to the highest degree of perfection through scientific social relations—the merging of minds into one great Family, the life of which is polarized for purposes of world redemption and universal happiness.

A Chicago Record "want ad" cartoon represents the "business universe" by a circle having center and circumference, embracing a map of the earth—and of course, their specialty is the hub from which radii extend to the definite limit. We would suggest to the Record, that this is pretty much the way in which we represent a sectional view of the cellular world or hollow globe, with the sun at the center. But for the convenience of placing the wares of advertisers "in the world," or "in the earth," in picture and description, many effective and appropriate illustrations would never be made. Somehow, even the advertiser feels that the Copernican idea of ON-habiting the world is not just the thing!

Some one, in attempting to point out the color vibrations in words and names, suggests that love and hate are both red. It is true that hate seeks to shed blood; and blood was shed in the manifestation of Love 1900 years ago. Hatred is insipient murder; and we say that the murderer is red-handed. The shedding of blood is the result of conflict; the conflict of the forces of love and hate shed the blood of the Messiah at the beginning of the dispensation. Swedenborg says that red signifies good; also in an antithetical sense, evil. If both love and hate, if both good and evil, may be symbolized by red, the conclusion is logical that hate, evil, is just as real and substantial as love, as good.

In the new century's darkness, the cities of America made a display of light at midnight, December 31, 1900, to represent the dawn. The new century is the century of illumination of the world, the century of light. The real day begins with the rising of the Sun; but hades has its fire, and the symbolic glare may be produced where mental darkness prevails; the pyrotechnic display of the coming revolution—while it portends the day, does not even simulate the sun. The twentieth century opens to admit all the evils and corruptions from the sphere of the old; the great battle of the ages must be fought and won ere the world's Light prevails, its peace comes, its day dawns.

Ideas which float and drift are aimless and useless. Light radiates from a center of influx of energies. Science proceeds from a mental focus; there are millions of stars, but only one great central Sun. Winds of fallacy blow here and there, and spirits whisper—whisper to deceive. There are as many different deceptive voices from the world of inspiration, as there are different deceptive voices in the external world. The law of polarity is eternal; yonder sun demonstrates it. The physical world could not exist without the sun; and humanity must ultimately know and recognize its Seed, its Shepherd, its Savior.

The usual mind considers that the Koreshan conception of the earth as a cell narrows the universe down to uncomfortable proportions. A correct conception of the universe is the only one worth entertaining; it takes the universe as it is, and makes possible a larger world of usefulness. The man who lives only for himself narrows the world to the field of his own selfish limits. A selfish world is the smallest one that can possibly exist, no matter how much the imagination exaggerates the extent of space.

The practical phases of wireless telegraphy are sensational-ly eclipsed by Tesla's incredible and mysterious message from Mars. Before any remarkable success has been achieved in electro-magnetic communication between different points on the earth, it requires a long stretch of the imagination of even the modern scientist to conceive of the possibility of directly communicating with mythical inhabitants of a planet in the sky!

Comets and earthquakes have failed to fulfil the predictions of modern sensational scientific prophets; and an ancient Babylonian tablet has been translated for the purpose of stirring up a little excitement; the tablet is supposed to foretell a flood which will cut a caper in the affairs of humanity when Mercury, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn congregate in the constellation Capricornus, in December, 1901.

The aim of the Administration is to "regulate the trusts," while the trusts purpose regulating the Administration. The trusts have the money, and senators are subject to special influence when the occasion requires!

Koreshans maintain that the natural form of the government of the cosmos is the true form which should prevail in the world of humanity. This is a scientific conclusion, and it will never be refuted.

The Existence of Evil.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Why rail against the evils of mankind if they are a necessary factor in the attainment of the final grand result? If, in order to be the All in All, man must pass through the strata of the hells, why call the things which exist in these planes wrong?—A READER.

Evil is necessary, because it is the inevitable result of the activities of life; it is a factor in the universal economy, but it is never good—it is always wrong, because it is opposed to that which is right and good. It is a fact that evil exists; somehow it must be admitted by all minds that if the undesirable prevails, it is the result of eternal law—law which inheres in Being itself. Hell is made up of the wastes of heaven; mortal entities are but the precipitates of divine activities. Deity must, in the economy of life, utilize the wastes of life and renew himself in the planes into which the precipitates are cast, as the seed renews its life or perpetuates its life through death in the soil. If it is necessary for the seed to enter death, it is also necessary for it to rise out of death through the plant. Death serves its purpose, but it is not life, and evil is not good. That which is perfect, that which is good, is right—up to the standard of divine integrity; that which is imperfect, that which is evil, is of the opposite quality and character.

The mission of Koreshanity is to teach the world to distinguish between the true and the false, between good and evil; to define the laws whereby destiny may be reached in the attainment of immortal life; and to establish the great order of righteousness. THE FLAMING SWORD tells the truth about the present evil world. It does not rail; we hate no one, we entertain no malice—we are not fighting men, but false systems and conditions which stand in the way of the world's welfare and happiness. If we tell the truth about sensualism, about the world's perverted things, we are said to be severe. The surgeon may cauterize a wound, or amputate a limb to save life. Koreshans tell the truth and warn; they tell the truth because they love humanity.

The Heat of the Sun.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—In the morning after sunrise, when the sky is clear, I feel the vital substance or energy, or whatever it is, called heat, on the side of the body toward the point where I see the sun. If the light and heat, which you call the "projected sun," are really up in the sky near the sea of hydrogen, why do we not feel the heat as though it came to us from the direction of the real place of the projected sun, instead of from its apparent position? Or do the rays of heat come to us in curved lines the same as light?—C. B., Salem, O.

We feel the heat of the fire in the stove or grate, as coming from the particular location, because the heat is conducted by processes of radiation and induction. In such cases, the intensity of the heat decreases as to the square of the distance. But heat as heat does not radiate from the sun, as demonstrated by the fact that the higher the altitude the lower the temperature. If heat as heat radiated from the sun, there could be no snow capped mountains, and the heat of the sun would increase in proportion to our altitude.

Light and heat are in unity in the solar ray; the ray is biune. Light is electric, while heat is magnetic; but the magnetism of the ray is produced in the material substance with which the rays come in contact; in other words, heat is created when the rays enter into conjunction with the body or with the earth. Hence, the heat of the sun warms the sides of bodies which intercept the sun's rays; and at sunrise the rays are horizontal because their downward curvature gives the sun its apparent position on the horizon.

Unsolved Problems in Science.

Dr. Mueller Describes the Groping of the Scientists; False Premises which Keep Them in Ignorance.

The remarkable progress in all branches of human knowledge, the wonderful discoveries and inventions made during the nineteenth century, have created the impression in the minds of many people that the coming century will bring us much nearer to the solution of the great secrets of creation, if not the solution itself. So many things, it is argued by those sanguinal people, which a century ago would have been considered utterly impossible have become realized during the century, that it is but fair to assume that we shall continue to unravel one mystery of nature after the other until we shall have discovered the ultimate reason of everything; that is, until we have gained full knowledge of the essence and nature of all things in nature.

Their process of reasoning seems logical at first glance, but it leaves out of consideration the highly important factor of our natural limitations which eventually must put a stop to all further progress beyond the limits of our perceptive and reasoning powers. Philosophy has long ago recognized the existence of those limitations. The basis of all our knowledge consists of the results, direct or indirect, of empirical observations. By a process of reasoning, natural philosophy has deducted from the result of those observations certain laws which were finally accepted as so called "eternal truths." Kant has subjected pure reason to a thorough and exhaustive criticism, and the conclusions of his masterly work may be summed up in the sentence, there are no eternal truths.

All our empirical knowledge, upon which we have built the structure of "eternal truth," has been arrived at through the medium of our perception. But our perceptive power is subject to constant changes and is gradually developing. The natural consequence is that truths which we evolved from the sum total of our empirical observations ten, twenty, or a hundred years ago, do no longer appear to us as truths from the standpoint of our superior knowledge, acquired by more perfect means of observation and perception. These constant changes necessitate a constant reconstruction of the structure of science. All the elements of our knowledge are so closely connected with one another, so completely dependent upon one another, that the slightest shifting of one link is felt in and materially affects the entire chain.

The great stumbling block in the path of science searching for truth, consists of the fact [assumption] that there is no absolute standard of truth, that no one really knows what is the truth. In fact, everything is truth—but not to every one. There is no absolute, only relative, truth. In that fact lies our limitation. It stands in our way to the solution of the highest and most profound problems as to the source of all things that are, as to the nature of mind and matter, and as to the mutual relations existing between them. The battle royal between monism and dualism is still undecided, and neither victory nor a compromise is possible, because both theories can never be more than relative truths, and there is no way of bridging over the irreconcilable contrasts. Matter may move matter, mind act upon mind. But how can matter act upon the mind, something that occupies space, upon something that does not occupy space?

No theory, however ingenious it may be, can explain to us the mutual relations between mind and matter. We do not even know whether matter really exists, or whether it is not merely a creation of our active mind. We perceive that matter constantly undergoes changes, but we do not know whether those changes actually take place, or whether they are merely the reflection of changes in our perception. The attempt to dispose of matter by putting force or energy in its place is merely an acknowledgment of the impossibility of solving the mystery of matter. It means a change of the problem, but not its solution. The theory of causality may explain the transformation of one motion to another, but it does not lead us to the reason of the motion itself. Even in attempting to solve apparently more tangible problems we soon reach the barrier of our limitations.

Chemistry teaches us that matter consists of various chemical and mechanical combinations of certain primary substance called elements. The study of chemical combinations led to the establishment of the atomic theory. The latter is undoubtedly ingenious and apparently perfectly logical, but if we follow it out in its consequences, we soon find ourselves in a dilemma! If the atom is indivisible it cannot occupy any space, for everything that fills space, no matter how small, can be thought divisible, and must be divisible ad infinitum. But, on the other hand, if the atom is really indivisible and does, therefore, occupy no space, it can never be a part, however small, of matter. $0 \div 0 = 0$ to infinity will always be equal to 0. The total is equal to the sum of its components. Inasmuch as the total, in this case matter, occupies space, that quality must essentially pertain to every part, however small, of the whole. The logical deduction would be that matter is composed of parts which are not matter, a theory which is obviously unsound.

Thus we continue to grope through the labyrinth of mysteries surrounding us, always hopeful, notwithstanding the fact that at every turn the gigantic interrogation point of the "unknowable" stares in our face!—DR. WILHELM MUELLER, German Scientist, in Chicago Tribune.

THE DAWNING CENTURY.

The century dawns. Another hundred years

Have done their wondrous work, closed their accounts,

Folded their tents and slipped into the past.

We will not say those passing years are dead.

The true past does not die. The good still lives.

All that was good or true in all these years Will live and act within the coming century.

No Alexander sighs for greater worlds to win;

No Cesar leads the mighty hosts of Rome; Yet what was great or good in Greece or Rome,

Lives in the lives of nations of today.

The present is the total of the past.

We of this age are heirs to every age That yet has been. And thus equipped with power

From out the centuries, we'll make this last

The best of all that yet have ever been, The boast of all the centuries to be.

We will not sigh for ages past and gone And wish them back, as though misspent or lost.

Old coffers would not hold the present wealth;

Old barns contain the harvest of our fields. Nor will the old forms hold the growing truth

That yearns for utterance from the living lips

That are God's trusted Messengers today.

There are yet greater worlds for us to win Than Alexander ever won. There are Still mightier forces to be led to wars More glorious and to victories more grand Than Cesar's conquering legions ever knew.

The century that hastened to its close Has been majestic in accomplishment— More full of all that makes an era great Than any that have led the line before. And yet we hope for better things from thee, Thou swiftly coming twentieth century.

New Century, hail! With loving hearts and hands

We welcome thee, and we believe that thou

Hast larger truths in store for seeking minds

And earnest hearts than yet have been revealed.

God guide us through thy gates, and all the way

Along thy swiftly passing years. And may

We, true to all our duties as they come, Behind us leave a legacy, more rich

For future years than our blest heritage From former ones. Again, New Century, hail!

Consolidating World's Governments.

The Century of Greatness Destined to Change Maps and Make the New Empire.

Graphic evidence of one great change which the nineteenth century has brought, is at hand in the comparison of maps of the world as it was 100 years ago and as it is today. Not alone in the exploration and delineation of the great areas which then were blanks on the map, is this impressive. The extension of geographical knowledge is of consequence as another of the noteworthy contributions to the century of science, but it is not first in the lessons of the atlas. Even more important is the distinct tendency to a consolidation of world-government, quite as apparent as the movement toward commercial combinations, which is the theme of constant discussion.

To a degree that would not have been predicted by the most sanguine prophet after the fall of Napoleon, the dominions of the feeble rulers and races—white, black, and yellow—are being absorbed into the empires of their powerful neighbors, near or far. South America remains untouched, guarded by the country which maintains the Monroe doctrine in the western hemisphere against European encroachments. The republics to the southward, however, undergo a chill of apprehension at intervals in the avowed fear that the United States will claim them some day, while protecting them from others. The rest of the world, however, is falling under the sway of a few powers.

Half a dozen nations are so dominant in world affairs that the others hardly need to be named in international dealings. The latter may be prosperous and even strong at home, but they are overtopped by powers which might easily absorb or crush them in such a readjustment as would follow a general war. The Scandinavian kingdoms are fearing the fate of Finland at the hands of Russia. Turkey and China have seen continual reductions of their territory for the aggrandizement of the same power. The union of Spain and Portugal is named as the possible salvation of two weakling nations. One is stripped of its colonies in both hemispheres, the other has remaining a great African domain which seems to be slipping into the hands of Great Britain. Belgium and Holland, commercial nations with large colonial possessions, are not extending their power, and could not fight against a strong enemy. Italy is losing its African influence; Austria-Hungary is threatened with a division and a war in which both would be the losers; Switzerland is guarded by its weakness and the jealousy of its neighbors.

At the same time, the great powers are becoming greater. Russia, Great Britain, France, Germany, and the United States have increased out of all semblance to their extent as it was 100 years ago, with the habit of increase well established and not yet interrupted. All the independent states of Africa have vanished in the apportionment of the spoils of exploration except Liberia, Morocco, and Abyssinia. Asia is virtually Russia, France, and British, except for China, threatened with partition. Australia is British. The islands of the Pacific are no longer derelict. Within the empires federations are forming. Among the empires are alliances and "agreements." The government "trusts" are organized to reduce competition, and the small competitor in the trade is going out of business. The process offers one of the most picturesque examples of the tendency toward centralization and consolidation of authority "for economy of administration and better regulation of details."—Editorial in Chicago Record.

Twentieth Century Socialism.

Views of a French Socialist Concerning the Coming and Success of the New Society.

The Socialistic movement is co-extensive with the civilized world. It knows no national limits. Where civilization is high, there collectivism is the strongest. The twentieth century will see it in full swing. It will not retrograde. The hands of the economic clock can never be moved back to feudalism. Socialism cannot remain stationary, for it is a vital force. The only possible evolution for it is in an onward and upward course.

Socialism works for concord and peace. It makes generous hearts, and it gives us men of good will. The solidarity of the human race should be the aim of noble minds. Such solidarity enforces the sovereignty of right. Might is not right, and never will be with the people. Solidarity of the race breaks the back of mere brute force. Men should not bend the knee to blind power. Solidarity promotes peace. What can be more noble than a festival of work and peace? Honorable peace is more glorious than the most brilliant war.

The grave and delicate questions of social economy are now all tempered by Socialism. Mechanism and invention are of use only in so far as they improve the position of mankind. We measure the degree of a people's civilization not by mechanical improvements, but by the welfare of the men of toil. This is the highest and noblest standard of measurement.

It is generally laid down that man is the architect of his own fortune. But society must let him have the leisure to work it out. He must not be brutalized by a task beyond his strength. This applies to all nations and races—for sons of different races and citizens of different nationalities belong to the same family. The duty of all is to increase the common patrimony. The legion of unknown toilers must not be forgotten.

In the coming century, the organisms of iron and steel will continue more and more to replace flesh and bone, epidemics will be unknown, distance will still further disappear. Science will keep on multiplying the means she puts at man's disposal.

The greatest service it can render to man is to teach him the material and moral grandeur of union—of solidarity. Where Socialism holds sway, the hatred born of uncultured brains disappears. It vanquishes misery.—M. MILLEBAUD, French Socialist.

The Century's Bloody Sunset.

W. T. Stead Predicts that the World will be Shaken by Convulsions of War!

The nineteenth century sets in blood. In China, the European nations, in Africa, Great Britain, and in the Philippines the Americans are all doing evil that good may come, with astonishing confidence and intrepidity. The evil is obvious enough. The good still lies in the future. What is plain for all men to see is, that the Chinese factor may dominate the whole problem of the new century. It is rash to prophesy when so much uncertainty prevails as to the data. But unless the closest observers are utterly mistaken, the awakening of China—achieved with so much perverse expenditure of effort and such infliction of hideous suffering—threatens civilization of the West with dangers which have hitherto been simply unthinkable.

Whether from a military or from an economic point of view, the breaching of the dam that has hitherto contained the reservoir of yellow-skinned humanity is one of the most hazardous enterprises to which Europe has ever addressed itself. Until we can ascertain something as to what is to happen in China, no one can hazard an estimate as to what will happen elsewhere.

Greatest War Yet to Come.

What I expect is, that there will be early in the century a tremendous slump in militarism, imperialism, and similar inflated stocks. What I fear is, that before this takes place the world may be shaken by a convulsion of war, the like of which no living man has seen. All the elements abound needed to produce such an explosion. Should it come, mankind in the discipline of suffering may relearn many lessons which it has forgotten in the heyday of its prosperity. It is idle constructing our pretty card castles in a region in which before night the stoutest towers may be shattered by a shock of an earthquake. For the war which all men dread will inevitably be followed by a social cataclysm, the ultimate outcome of which no man can foresee.

I see no way of averting either the war or the cataclysm, if the nations persist in their present course of preferring the expansive extension of their frontiers to the intensive cultivation of the territories already in their own possession. Not in the conquest of new dominion to be policed, but in the conquest of the world by the principles of internationalism and federation embodied in the American Constitution, seems to lie the noblest ambition of the New World in the new century.

Redemption of the Body.

Paul looked forward to the redemption of the body. This is the time for that which he looked forward to. What does this mean? It means that this mortal shall put on immortality. That is to say, the bodies of the elect, or those in whom the saints rise, will be transformed from corrupt flesh to absolutely pure flesh, which will be capable of vanishing without the corruptible process called death. This will involve the victory over death. Chronologist John Collom, in his book, shows that this consummation will be within twenty-three years from this time (1923). Others say about nine years earlier. Immortals do not die, nor do they live forever in the earth in the same body. They go out of the world alive, the same as did Elijah, etc. The elect alone may so go out and in and find pasture. Other than the elect will be correspondingly affected and elevated in state, many to a position akin to angelhood.—The Interpreter. Denver, Colo.

We have established four new departments to our work. Orders promptly filled by mail or express. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

The prices are low considering the superior quality of the goods and workmanship. Single, horse-hide, 50c. Double awing shell and canvas, several grades, from 75c to $1.25. Extra fine material and finish, $1.50. Packed in neat box. Also strops at 10c., 25c., and 40c.—send 8c. for postage on orders less than 50c. Mail orders a specialty.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

Celibacy.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

True and False Conceptions of Immortality.

Numerous Theorists Pretend to Have Discovered the Secret of Immortality in the Flesh After Years of Promulgation of Koreshanity; What Immortality is and What it is Not.

IN THE YEAR '86, we were called to Chicago to attend a "Mental Science" convention, where we attempted to announce our views of the immortality of the body through the application of the laws of the higher physiology. Among the delegates to the convention were some who ridiculed the idea of physical immortality as an absurdity and its attainment as an impossibility, but who, since that time, have pretended to have discovered not only the possibility, but the methods of attainment. We did not find one person at the convention, nor one in Chicago, even, who could conceive of such a thought. The doctrine of immortality in the flesh, the only place where immortality can obtain, was enunciated by us in the year 1870; and from that time to the present, through our various publications, we have kept the subject constantly before the public.

The so called mental scientists, who are a slight modification of the christian scientists, are coming quite generally to discuss the question of immortal life in the body. According to the mental scientist, it is to be accomplished through the power of the will, and along the lines of sensual gratification. The doctrine—as it is presented by some of the mental scientists—appeals to the common sensualist, because life can be obtained without sacrifice, and on those easy-going lines which may involve all the pleasures of the flesh. The attainment of immortal life here in this world, if believed in, might be made a very attractive theory to many people, for death is not desirable except to comparatively few; but to make it attractive to many, it must include those things which go to make the common pleasures of a mortal existence.

As the Koreshan idea of immortal life in the flesh involves restraint and the conservation of the sex energies, it has not been, so far, a popular theory—nor do we expect it to be. Immortal life in this age belongs only to those who were baptized with the Holy Spirit nineteen hundred years ago; such only will constitute the fruits of this dispensation. No person can hope for immortality who despises the name and character of the Messiah of the Christian dispensation. The person coming now into the desire for immortal life on the correct lines, will rejoice in the name of the Lord Jesus; not only so, but will easily embrace the fact that the Lord is not only the Son of God, but that he is the fullness of the Godhead bodily. We have noticed in our intercourse with those who are advocating physical immortality on the sensual plane, that they are particularly averse to the idea that the Lord, more than any person born into the world, is the Son of God.

Mortality belongs to the adverse side of existence. It is the result not merely of ignorance, but of the love of those things which belong to and make for death. Ignorance is a part of the law of death; but wilful violation of the principles of morality and righteousness constitutes the greater part: To begin with, the conception that any class of beings will reach immortal life here, and retain that immortality in the flesh, shows the most consummate ignorance of the laws of life and of the meaning of the term. Immortality signifies a transient quality or condition involving, in significance, just what the term itself implies. Immortality means life and death. It does not mean eternal life; it is the means through which eternal life is acquired.

In the alchemico-organic cosmos, there is a succession of cycles determined by the solar, lunar, stellar, and planetary revolutions and precessions. There never was a time when the cosmic laws were inoperative; nor will there ever be a time when they will cease their orders of cyclic revolutions. Related to these cycles of order in the cosmic field of alchemico-organic activity, is the correspondent law of cycles in the progressions and retrogressions of human existence. The universe is eternal; there is a correlation between its physical forms and its functional power. It never had a beginning, and it will never have an ending. It would be impossible for the mind to retrospect the immeasurable distance of the eternal past, or to conceive of a time when this universe will cease to be. Humanity has been the inhabitant of this world—the only physical world in existence—for countless myriads of ages.

If men were to attain to immortal life here as the fruits of evolution, and were to remain in the natural world, there would already have been manifest the fruits of immortal life, as tangible and visible products. Why are there no fruits of immortality here in the world? It is because when the fruits of immortality are ripe, they are gathered into the invisible world, where eternal life exists. Immortality is the preparatory state for eternal being. It is consummated through the severe restraints involved in the ten categories of the law of God, as enunciated through the great lawgiver, Moses. It was through the application of the principles of the law of Moses that the Son of God became one with the Father, and was enabled to sit down in the throne of the consummate glory of the eternal One.

One of the fundamental laws of being, and one upon which the universe depends for its perpetuity, is the law of polarity. The universe has its poles and its axis; the human body is built upon the same plan as that of the physical cosmos. The brain has its positive and negative poles—so has the grand or universal man. The Lord Jesus was the central pole of the universal man, the pivot upon which the dispensation turned. He was the centrally perfected one, the firstfruits of a series of cycles, raised up from humanity and perfected in righteousness through many reëmbodiments, raised up to such a state of perfection as to be able to environ the central and invisible Godhead. As the outward and visible Lord, the Son of God, he clothed the invisible and spiritual center of the universe. The Lord Jesus, as the centrally perfected man, constituted the pole or Head of the Jewish dispensation; nay, more than this; he was the pole or Head of the entire Zodiacal cycle. He ripened as the firstfruits of immortal life. Why is He not in the world today, if the immortal state is the permanent one in the physical world?

The Lord attained to immortality in the body, and to as permanent immortality as it is possible to attain. When He reached the attainment of immortal life, he left the world without the death of the body; he went where the fruits of immortality will forever go; that is, into the invisible world, where eternal life perpetually obtains. Jesus brought life and immortality to light for the world, attaining to that life in his own personality, but not giving it to the world until the fruition of his planting should mature at the end of the dispensation. He did not leave this world with his physical body. The material body was consumed by an electro-magnetic fire which dissolved the material elements of his form, reducing them to the spiritual force of his being. When He went away he left nothing behind to be buried, for he was burned up and absorbed into the central and invisible consciousness; but in his descending life he went down into the church by the operation of the Holy Spirit, which was the substance of his organic life and the animal life of Deity.

As the Jewish dispensation headed up in the pole of its fruition, so every dispensation will head up in the pole of the perfection of its truth and life. The circumference of the work of the Lord at his visible presence with men nineteen hundred years ago, was the influence he exerted with the spiritual life of men in that age. He did not materially affect the bodies of those who received him as the Holy Spirit, for this reason: the Lord, as the Lamb of God, was the promised Seed, the Seed-man, to be sown for regeneration; that is, reproduction. His dissolution created the seminal essence of the Lord God. This seed was planted in the race, that is, in the church which was raised up to receive it then and there. The Lord God was planted in the church. Now, as it was His body that was planted, so when the fruit comes at the end of the age, it will be the bodies of men that are to be redeemed.

The circumference of the Messianic work in this age of the world, will affect the human body to bring it into immortal life. "Behold I will send you Elijah the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." Immortal life in the body will come to thousands of people now at the end of the age. This will be the product of the planting of the Lord by the effusion of the Holy Spirit at the beginning of the era. As the Lord never accomplished one thing that the devil did not try to counterfeit, so we cannot expect, in the promulgation of the principles of immortality, but that the devil will be alert and on hand with his spurious doctrine of immortal life.

Let us emphasize the fact that no immortal beings will ever be produced on this earth to remain here forever. When the general fruition of immortality obtains, the immortals will be absorbed into the eternal entities of the conscious beings of the Gods—the kings of the Order of Melchizedek, who are eternal beings, but invisible to the natural eye. This Order constitutes a perfect number; it cannot be increased nor diminished because such a possibility would mar the perfection of the cubical power and perfection of the number. The materialist, educated in the rank and fallacious systems of so called science, cannot comprehend the spiritual doctrine of the eternal truth.

Immortality will not be consummated by any mere act of the will, nor by any mere desire for life. It will come through a knowledge of the science of the ten principles of life found recorded in the twentieth chapter of Exodus. These are ten principles of the higher law which the world and the church have never understood, and which we are constantly told by the church cannot be observed by men. The Lord Jesus kept this law, and for this reason was made immortal and became the firstfruits of immortal life. There will never be any immortality on any other basis than that of fulfilling these ten principles of life. The first one involves the manifestation of the Messenger of the Covenant, the Messiah of the dispensation, and his recognition by as many as will become the firstfruits of the resurrection; and no matter how much the world may denounce the Scriptures, it is from this source that the confirmation will come of the duly authorized Messianic character for the Aquarian dispensation.

The Scriptures have distinctly defined the line of the Messianic fulfilment. He will come through the posterity of Joseph, and through the divinely declared channel of Ephraim. The Messiah of this age will come of the posterity of Ephraim, absorbed by intermarriage into the nations of Media, Persia, and Assyria. From this infiltration came the Germanic race; from the projection of this race in the Anglo-Saxon, will come the Messiah. He comes in the United States, nor can he possibly come in any other nation or in any other place in the world than in America. He comes as the scientist, and he will unfold the true science of immortality as put forth in the Decalogue—the only law of immortal life committed to the world.

The Coming and the Sowing of the Seed-man.

Processes Through which Jesus Planted Himself in the Race; the Harvest is the Resurrection at the End of the Dispensation; Manifestation of the Messenger of the Covenant.

JESUS CAME AS THE SEED-MAN; all who will come into the life of the new church were seeds or germs in him. They were resurrected in Him from the twelve tribes of Israel, and sealed. "Him hath God the Father sealed," for the purpose of being unfolded or opened as the Book of Life. As many as were sealed in Him as the life germs, the firstfruits of the resurrection, had corresponding receptacles prepared to imbibe those germs in the will. These receptacles were the members of the primitive church, who received those seeds as the result of the translation of Jesus. When He was translated his body—which was the paschal Lamb—was dissipated and received (appropriated) by the church. After the union of these two (the germs from Jesus and the natural life) in the will of the disciples of Christ, the process of disintegration began for the purpose of a new and higher recombination, which would be complete at the resurrection of the dissipated seed, the body of Jesus, united with or conjoined to the church, which is made his body by this conjunction.

Every germ in Jesus had its corresponding body (or angel man) in the celestial heavens; as the Apostle says: "Every seed his own body." The planting of the Seed—Jesus Christ, was to raise up into a higher form of being those who were receptive to the living germs, that at the resurrection, those raised forms might enter into conjunction and become one with the angel man in heaven. For instance; the Apostle John in earth had his special germ in Jesus. That special germ had its own angel man, male and female in one form, in heaven. This germ or seed was planted in John. In the resurrection, John (embodying the Christ germ, now grown to an angel man in him, and which constitutes his soul) reaches a condition fitting him for being united as one to his own soul or life, which is the Lord.

What is true of one disciple is true of all. But how shall those who lived 1900 years ago as the disciples of Christ, and the germs conjoined to them, which were in Christ, come again into the world? Simply by being transmitted through the natural, sensual male will (Babylon), becoming seed in the man, and propagated through the natural process of generation and brought back into natural life by being born into the world. From this it follows that now, as the time has come for the establishment of the new Church, those who lived 1900 years ago, together with the germs that comprised the body of Jesus, are born as natural children, some of them grown to manhood and womanhood. Their resurrection will be the opening of their minds for this illumination, by which they will become one with their own soul or angelhood, which is their interior life. So soon as this conjunction is effected, they will awake into original consciousness and identity, and therefore into immortality, through which they pass to eternal life.

This conjunction will be effected through the Messenger of Conjunction, or the Messenger of the Covenant, which implies the same; he is the Sign. The seven churches are "all the tribes of the earth" (new earth), which will mourn for life now that the Sign, the literal Truth of the Word, is manifest. "Then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds [the literal Word] of heaven with power and great glory" (light); after which the church will come into life. This will be the opening of the Book of Life, sealed on the back side with seven seals—the angels of the seven churches.

On the front side (inside) these seven angels are not seven, but one, and that one is the Lord. The new Church is actually the Lord's body; and when resurrected, the Book of Life is opened, evolved, or unfolded, and constitutes the first-born from the dead, the first-fruits of the resurrection. As this body unfolds its own protective sphere, the powers of earth and hell must give way before it.

Darkening Clouds and the Golden Dawn.

A Review of Unmistakable Signs of the Times; the Vortex of Revolution and the Coming Power of Universal Reformation; the Destiny of America.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

ONE OF THE highly artistic calendars for the year 1901 bears this inscription: "The Golden Age lies not behind us, but before." This statement, which the Koreshan Scientist declares to be absolutely true, is sufficient to inspire the most buoyant optimist with renewed hopes and to heroic efforts. There are, however, the discerning pessimists to meet, who watch the "signs of the times" from their standpoint. For them we ask, What lies between us and the Golden Age? and with divine prescience at command, we answer, revolution!

The iron age is nearing its limit. Its culminating powers forge the rod of iron into every conceivable form of war's destructive weapons. "Without shedding of blood is no remission" of sins, declares the Word of Inspiration; and all written history attests its truth. In the most universal sense, the iron age has been the revelator in its humanity, of the "man of sin," and the reverberator of the thunders of Sinai. Grace alone has saved it from and for destruction. The world's promised great and universal peace is to be had only at the price of universal war, for which the nations are now so skilfully preparing. Armed and equipped for battle, competition will ultimate with the hand of every man lifted against a fellow man. The cause of this hour of darkness and reign of terror has long been located and announced by the Almighty as the "love of money," the "root of all evil" in the mortal heart, which is "deceitful above all things and desperately wicked."

Commerce is the central principle of life; and the falsification of that divine wisdom which should guard its equity, has left it the prey of all the destructive forces of the love of money. Divine wisdom demands the application of that exact justice which inheres in the purpose of Koreshanity: "The equitable exchange of the products of industry, value for value, as determined by quality and amount of applied industry."

The love of money is the supreme passion of the "man of sin;" it is the abomination which makes desolate the humanity which should be the Temple of God. Money of divine creation has but one purpose to serve—that of guard and criterion of all commercial uses.

The Scientific Measure of Values.

The divinely-authorized measure of values is "the staff of life"—the bread products of the human race, represented by wheat. Inspired prescience foretold that in the day of the Lord, "a measure of wheat should be for a denarius"—a penny or day's wage. Since labor, which in the divine order is denominated performance of use, is the only legitimate capital for the production and perpetuity of wealth or weal, it is rational to determine its values in relation to that industry which is preëminent in perpetuating life, and which enables man to perform his various uses. What measure of wheat an average man can produce by a day's labor, with the best resources of the applied science of mechanics, can surely be determined by the applied science of mathematics; and when determined, this measure of wheat should constitute the minimum reward of a man's industry. Science could then determine a scale of remuneration to meet the demand of degrees and qualities of industry. Money as now known is a device of satan; it is the mother of supreme selfishness, and is perpetuated by the children of her greed.

The war of wars which is almost upon us—the great battle of Gog and Magog—originates in greed for commercial power. Its forces will be arrayed in every domain of commerce and under many names; the forces of "capital and labor" will enact scenes of carnage before the very doors of homes, and in every sphere of ruling social orders. What has been called the great reliable middle class, upon which every nation has had to depend as the holder of the balance of power in all differences between necessary rulers and the necessarily ruled, is rapidly diminishing under the monopolistic sway of plutocracy. A few more combinations of aggregated wealth will cause the precipitation, to the strengthening of the masses, of all the power which the middle class has represented. In its best estate, the middle class has represented the uniting power, or divine love principle; and we are warned to beware the wrath of the Lamb—the wrath of outraged love. The forces from the middle class will educate the masses in the principles of equity and in the science of law and order, and will cause an army to arise as one man against the tyranny of the oppressors—the representatives of the power of fictitious money to create and destroy the value of a man's labor.

Naught can avail at this time to prevent the triumph of righteousness, for its Golden Age is at hand, the era of the equitable distribution of the products of industry. The money power will think to depend upon its hireling military; but it must be remembered that Goliath was beheaded with his own sword. The military forces are drafted from the oppressed classes, and the day is coming when the tie of blood will overcome the mortal's love of money; the love of home and kindred will triumph in the soldier's breast, and the breath of God Almighty will fan its flames till they consume the world that now is, and destroy all that outrages God's humanity. One touch of divine sympathy will make the new world akin!

The False Philanthropy of the Modern World.

Another self-deception is common to the representatives of the reigning fallacy of money; they think to stay the approaching day of doom by the charities of a false philanthropy. They delight to pose as Lord and Lady Bountiful to the humanity they rob of God's image and likeness, by making it the prisoner of poverty, the daughter of ignorance. The charities they offer may alleviate the sufferings which the charitable have caused by their ignorance. The whole human family sits in the darkness of ignorance because it has ignored the Godhead of humanity, the fulfilment of the law by whom its science comes to deliver the world from the sin of ignorance. The false charities of false philanthropy are being offered to men who are beginning to think, because Science is here; and by esoteric and exoteric potencies its Lord is operating to enlighten the minds of men. The object of charity is asking, "Why should I, a man, as much of a man as he from whom I receive my dole, be degraded to the acceptance of such sops as he offers?" "I am a creator," says the awakened thinker, "of the wealth he hoards and doles as suits his generous or miserly nature. His discretion prompts him to take care that his hirelings shall remain torpid from the weariness of long hours of labor, and in the spirit of heaviness from gross food."

To have self-respect, a man must make himself respectable and respected. He must arise, take up his bed, and walk in the integrity of a manhood able to maintain his own rights and those of his fellows by the science of the laws of God. Knowledge is the foundation of power. To live righteously, that is, to maintain the rights by which every man may attain the image and likeness of Deity, a man must know himself as a man; he must know the laws of his being, his origin, and destiny, and his legitimate relations to his environments. From whom may such knowledge be derived? Who hath wisdom? Surely, the Almighty will not leave himself without a witness at this culminating crisis of human history—this dread termination of the iron age!

The Coming of the Shepherd and the Sign.

"Man's extremity is God's opportunity" to make his Name, his humanity, holy in the throne—the thought of man. To this end, the Sign of the Son of man appears in the heavens to indicate the Messenger of the Gods in earth, who comes to make a new covenant between God and man, and to be to men a Shepherd King, a High Priest, and a prescient Savior. Ages ago, the prescient spirit of truth foretold through the prophets, the rising of the Man of Destiny at this hour to meet man's need of the knowledge of God; the coming of the great Shepherd to gather the sheep once infolded as lambs in the bosom or church of the Lamb of God. These will he nourish as Israel, with the strength of Deity—divine wisdom from the spirit of truth. The foretold King is to arise like David, from among the people, to become an ensign to the Gentiles—the sign of their fulness or completeness in himself. He comes as a BRANCH made righteous by the life of the true Vine, the doctrine or blood, uniting God and man. David, once a man after God's own heart, is to become to a new world God's own heart in verity, from which will issue life from the source of the Water of Life—the science of the law of commercial equity, written in the heart of God's own Being.

The promised Shepherd, the gatherer of Lo Ammi—the lost sheep of the house of Israel, will bring all Israel into the promised land of the Gentiles, the body of their regeneration in God-likeness; he will bring them to their inheritance of the earth that was promised to Abraham—to the unity of the Jew, the Gentile, and the church of God. The Sign appears in the land of Ephraim, the twin-land, the double portion of Joseph; the Sign is the conservator of the earth's measure of wheat, to be given to man to save his life from destruction, and to crown him with the loving kindness of the Lord. The land of the Lord's storehouse is America. In the United States we find the spread eagle—the spread of divine science by the powers of reason; for God is now reasoning with man in this country, and representatively with all men, for all nations are gathered here.

The Bondage and Freedom of Fair Columbia.

The Supreme Court of this land is in the District of Columbia. The word Columbia is the Latin feminine for dove, the symbol of the holy spirit of commercial equity, which the Supreme Court of the United States should guard as the sacred Mother of all living. Is the Supreme Court of the United States the worthy representative of the divine guardianship of the integrity of commercial equity? or does it represent justice blinded by the sins of ignorance and selfishness, to the outrages practiced upon the whole body of Columbia, the boasted "land of liberty and home of the brave"? Has the District of Columbia become satan's seat? Iniquity is there enthroned, in the seat of the world's commercial power, by Wall street and Lombard street—twin emissaries of the evil power of fictitious money, for the desecration of this land promised to the poor and oppressed of all nations.

It is for the people of this land to declare this sentence of divine equity: that the time of this present evil world shall be no longer; that this land shall be restored to the rightful heir of this world, whose kingdoms belong to our Lord and his anointed King of kings and Lord of lords. The spirit of empire already prevails in America. It has come an unclean spirit from the effete and leprous East; but it has come to stay for the six thousand years of the Golden Age, just beyond the darkness preceding the dawn. It has come as a woman taken in adultery, to be washed and made white in the blood shed for the remission of sins. This blood began to be shed on Calvary, when He who came not to send peace but a sword, poured out his soul unto death, and wrought division between worlds—the world of matter and the world of man, the spirit of the way, the truth, and the life.

Blood has been shed all down the centuries of this world. Its last drop, its final shedding, will create a red sea of blood, which only those who follow the ark of the Lord's covenant can pass over dry shod and escape the great tribulation of its flood, which will destroy the modern Pharaoh and all his hosts who oppose the advancement of divine Commercial Equity. The last shedding of blood will bring the surrendering of this land to the government of that King who is the Lord's Anointed, who must build the city and the temple of God at the meeting-place of the waters which constitute the free-trade highways of the new world's equitable commerce; then shall a renewed humanity sing as the new world's song,

"Hail, Columbia, happy land!
Hail, ye Heroes, heaven-born band,
Who fought and bled in freedom's cause!"

The World's Fallacious Ethics.

PROF. O. F. L'AMOREAUX, A. M., PH. D.

And finally, there is the true or rational self, in which alone we feel that we can rest with satisfaction—the Christ (to adopt the Pauline metaphor) that liveth in us, in whom we hope more and more to abide. And it is said elsewhere, "His service is perfect freedom."—"MANUAL OF ETHICS," a College Text-book.

JESUS SAID: "I am the living bread which came down from heaven. * * He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood dwelleth in me and I in him. * * Even the spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him, but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." And Paul said: "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his. * * But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you, he shall also quicken [make alive] your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you, * * my little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you. To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles: Christ in you, the hope of glory."

From these and many similar passages, several things must be manifest; and among them the fact that Paul was not speaking in metaphor when he made mention of "the Christ that liveth in us, in whom we hope more and more to abide;" but he was dealing in the simple language of fact. If it were metaphor it did not originate with Paul, as Jesus had insisted upon the same thing before him.

One of the plainest teachings of the Bible, and one of the least understood at present, is that Jesus was God's Seed—"Not seeds as of many, but thy seed, which is Christ;" that seeds are so called because of their power of reproduction of their kind, to which fact the divine Seed was no exception. Hence, Jesus was planted in the human hearts that received him, and the harvest will be in the end of the Christian age, when will come the seed multiplied—the 144,000 Sons of God, whom John saw on Mount Zion. The Sons of God are virgins, like Jesus, the Seed from which they spring; they are Sons of God, having the Father's name in their foreheads as Jesus had. This will be the coming of the kingdom of heaven in earth, for which Jesus taught us to pray, and of which he sowed the Seed, which was himself.

The teaching of Jesus and Paul is, that if we received this divine Seed, the Christ, when it was sown by Jesus in the beginning of the Christian age, "the Christ liveth in us, in whom we hope more and more to abide;" but if at the time of that sowing we rejected that Seed, then there is no Christ being formed in us as "the hope of glory." Today, the great mass of men—both in the church and out of it—give no real evidence at all that the divine seed in them is maturing for the harvest, which is the resurrection of the dead, not in some future imaginary world, but here in the earth.

It is perfectly certain that if Jesus were in earth today as he was in the beginning of the age, he would say to professed Christians as he did to the Jews: "I came forth from my Father; ye are of your father the devil." Any system of ethics that teaches that Christ lives, not only in such persons, but in the great mass of Christ-haters, of which the world is full, must be, if not founded in, at least tinctured with fundamental error.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE WORLD'S PROGRESS must reach its climax at some period along the stream of time, in the goal of destiny; the power which moves the world must reach its consummation in a new order of things—a new age, in which human relations will be so different from those which now exist, that nothing of the old can merge into the new without transformation. Progress must ultimate in a new state of society, a new form of government, a new kind of religion, a new system of moral and intellectual culture, and in a new character of man. The growing sentiment in favor of radical reform foreshadows a coming change in the affairs of humanity; and the signs of the times, as well as the science of history and prophecy, point unmistakably to the fact that the hour of transformation is at hand. We are in the lapping of the ages—in the period of transition between the new and the old; we are approaching the dawn; we are in the twilight of the coming era. The best efforts of modern reformers are in the direction of repairing the old structures, of patching up the old garments, of propping up old institutions; it is a waste of energy, for the life of old things is slipping away, and soon there will be nothing remaining but the shell. Men may dress the patient now, and attend its funeral in future years! Every civilization grows from a nucleus which involves a powerful religious impulse, a mighty force of a human pivot upon which the ages turn and upon which progress depends. The new age must begin with a new religion, the ties of affection of which are greater than the love of money, greater than the love of mortality; with a new science to enlighten its people; with a new society of men in harmony; with a new system of industry and commerce to supply the products of the performance of use without waste; with a new government to control the world in righteousness; and with a new system of culture that will manifest itself in the refinement of man and his arts. The great reform power which must ultimately sweep the world, comes with the growing of Koreshanity and its institutions. Today, it is the only system that advocates and applies the principles and laws of genuine world-reformation. While the world asks what the new form of society and government will be, Koreshanity develops an organic society, a unity involving church and state, education and industry, ethics and commerce; and we unhesitatingly declare that the Koreshan System is the only one in existence in the world today, that unites in harmony all the elements of progress in such a way as to become capable of covering the entire field of human relations. The Koreshan Unity is the nucleus of the world's future harmony; it contains the germ of evolution of the new order, and involves the power of the coming Universal Empire. It offers to the thousands a way of escape from the hells of competition, and from the terrors of the coming revolution; it offers social, religious, and scientific salvation in the glories of the future, to all who have sufficient courage and manhood to sever the ties which bind to mortality, and form new ones on the basis of divine equity and love, of immortal life and power!

Prof. Whitehouse, a New York geographer and archeologist, has developed a new theory of light and heat, with which he hopes to solve some of the problems which have puzzled the astronomer and the physicist. The old form of the Copernican solar system is taken as a basis, and between the planets a conductor of ether space is supposed to exist, for the purposes of electric intercommunication of the energies of the system of planets. Each planet is supposed to be a power-house which sends out just as much energy at it receives, but which somehow utilizes much of what it receives in processes of locomotion. According to this theory, electricity is the primal source of light and heat; and there is no light and heat except in the planetary atmospheres. He says: "Investigation has led me to believe that the so called ether is not an exquisitely tenuous and pellucid gas through which a feeble twinkle from a star billions of miles away becomes visible to the eye, but that each star as seen by us, as well as the greatest of planets, the sun, is only to our eye, the point at which the vibrations come into our atmospheric sphere." This idea, however, is not new; a number of physicists are advocating that light is possible only in the atmosphere; and this makes inevitable the conclusion that the visible heavenly bodies must be at the upper stratum of our air. But neither the physicist nor Prof. Whitehouse is logical enough to perceive that if the sun, planets, and stars are but refocalizations at the upper limit of the earth's atmosphere, the basis of all modern astronomical triangulation is destroyed, because it would be impossible, in such case to locate a single heavenly body in space outside of the sea of atmosphere which we breathe. Koreshanity maintains that the sun, planets, and stars are all within our atmosphere, at the distance of about 900 miles, not above a convex earth, but a concave surface, from which astronomical triangulation determines their distance and relative emplacement in the atmospheric strata. The idea of clinging to the old Copernican conception of the solar system after conceiving that the points of light which we see are not outside of our air, is a palpable absurdity. The conclusions of the modern physicists and the conclusions of Copernicus and Newton cannot be consistently entertained in the same mind!

Sometimes the artist paints, as the poet often writes, better than he knows; he expresses more than he intends. Christmas and New Year displays in Hearst's publications contained some good conceptions and some truth, of which only the Koreshan can perceive their striking application. The new century display of the great historic characters passing in a parade down the centuries, even to the door of the twentieth, brings them in picture as they are in reality, to embodiment in the modern world. The life and mind of humanity are transmitted from generation to generation, and necessarily, entities and egos pass from century to century amid the scenes of activity in the external world. Destiny is not reached by living once, but thousands of times in the earth; for in no other way could the same humanity exist from dispensation to dispensation. Hearst's pictures illustrating Rev. MacArthur's "Christ the Contemporary of all Ages," are in the same line, containing great conceptions of re-embodiment, of reincarnation. Picturing the Christ among men and women in modern dress, borders on the unique, the strange, and the startling, and withal, appropriate from the standpoint of Koreshanity, which declares the actual presence of the Messiah in the modern world! It could not be truly said that the Christ is contemporary with all peoples of all ages unless he is inseparably connected with the great world of humanity, moving in it and through it, and manifesting himself periodically as the supreme Genius suited to the common genius of the times. The conception that the Christ is the contemporary of all ages is in accordance with human desire, notwithstanding the fact that the conception has no place in modern theology; the conception is in accordance with the laws of propagation of divine life, by virtue of which the Almighty manifests himself in chosen personalities successively through the ages—he manifests as poles of human involution and progress, and moves through specific channels as the power which determines the direction of the goal of destiny. Deity exists contemporaneously with humanity, because he is in the human world.

Armour, the great multi-millionaire of Chicago, is dead; and the clergymen eulogize him as a great philanthropist. Dr. Gunsaulus, until lately at the head of the Armour Institute, said in praise of the man: "It is not ours to unite words of lament nor to pronounce words of eulogy. The oak that has fallen was too massive, too grand, too simple. I see of him a picture as the beginner of a new era of business life in America; but the picture I wish to paint is that of a cheerful, good-natured, uplifting man." Another said: "Armour was a religious man. He made friends of Christian men, and he loved the church. * * If Chicago grew more such men, we could laugh at our critics;" while still another asserted: "It required 100,000 men to carry out Mr. Armour's vast enterprises, and it required 100,000,000 stomachs to dispose of the vast products of the industry which he directed." We have nothing to say against the character of the man, but much against the system which enabled him, in the satisfaction of his ambitions, to amass wealth by taking it from the 100,000 men whose life-long labors piled up Armour's $100,000,000. If he built up a great industry, he did it at the expense of those who produced and consumed his goods. Out of this vast store of wealth he gave a small per cent to charitable institutions, which are made necessary by virtue of the fact that such enterprises, controlled by the few, impoverish the masses. For giving back, in such shape that would stand as a monument to the donor, a little of what he misappropriated, Armour became famous as a philanthropist. The clergymen liked him while he was living because he had money, and because the church loves the present order of things; and now that he is gone, the millionaire is eulogized as a Christian and lover of humanity; but it is apparent that his Christianity and the Christianity of the church do not resemble the kind which characterized the progressive movement of the Founder of the primitive Christian system.

When the Founder of Koreshanity published his great plan for the construction of the New Jerusalem—the world's great cosmopolitan Center, containing 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 inhabitants, the people looked upon it as an impossible thing, and smiled incredulously. Even in this age of waste we know that the aggregate population of the world's four greatest cities—London, New York, Paris, and Chicago—amounts to over 12,000,000 people. These cities are great commercial centers of the three most advanced nations of the civilized world. The commercial advantages of the coming CITY OF KORESH will be greater than the advantages of the four greatest cities of the present combined. It will be situated at the crossing of the great water-ways of commerce; it will be at the center of the world's population; and when the entire world centers its interests in the capital of the future Universal Empire, the resources of the new city will be inexhaustible! If it is possible to aggregate people numbering millions under the prevailing competitive system, it will be comparatively easy to construct a city of magnificence under the order of Koreshan communism and social economy. In contrast with the popular prejudice, which blinds people to great possibilities, a recent writer asserts that with improved social organization, with the possibility of transmitting power to great distances, and with rapid transit perfected, cities of the future may be 400 to 500 miles in diameter! The liberal mind grants without grudge, that the construction of the New Jerusalem, the world's greatest city and capital, is within the range of possibility; and if Christians really believed the Bible they read, they would be expecting its materialization from the realm of divine conception!

The facts of church dissolution must be unmistakably apparent in order to force a Chicago clergyman to express his opinion that "the hod carriers of Chicago are better organized than the preachers, who are attempting to carry on a crusade against vice in high and low places. * * In this struggle we see hundreds of ministers in Chicago trying to help along the work, but as yet they are absolutely incoherent, and have no common life." Perhaps it may be interesting to note that the democratic idea of the church must be failing utterly, if a preacher finds it necessary to assert that the clergyman "must show leadership, and command his followers." The whole world is in the same condition as the people of a single denomination; and we maintain that if the world is saved from its present chaos, and a gigantic crusade be instituted against crime and corruption, vice and vassalage, despotism and death, it must be done by a Man, a leader, able to command his followers. The world can never become a brotherhood without an actual Paternal Head.

The startling progress of America is the great theme in European commercial circles; and the decadence of England is alarming the London press. The fact that Great Britain is falling to the rear is apparent; and her population is forced to realize that through accumulated reverses—military, diplomatic, and industrial—England's greatness is on the decline. The United States is wealthier by far; the resources of the American nation are greater, and it is rapidly reaching the position of dominancy in the world of commerce. There have been too many agencies at work in the great West for the past four hundred years, for America to fail to become the land of destiny. It contains the most powerful elements of progress, which are rapidly involving in the nucleus of the new Kingdom, the world's communistic center, the seat of the ruling power of Universal Empire!

Over $1,000,000,000 are expended annually in the maintenance of the Christian churches throughout the world; vastly greater is the cost of the world's governments, and still greater is the loss by waste, to the people, in the conduct of commerce and industry. Add to the immense aggregate that which is wasted by the people themselves, and some idea can be had of the stupendous resources of wealth which must be drawn upon in order to maintain the existing order of things, in which the poverty of the masses is a notable fact! The purpose of Koreshanity is to reduce the world to order, to lessen the waste, to lessen the cost, and to allow the world to live in luxury. This will be accomplished when the competitive system no longer prevails, and when the different departments of human activity are all controlled in one great system of society and government.

There is no greater delusion than the idea that money is capital. There is no wealth in money; the value of a dollar is not in itself, not in the metal from which it is made, but in the amount of energy expended in producing that which the dollar, by virtue of law, will purchase. Wealth is in property and the products of industry. Modern money is but a device which enables men to rob the people and sap the resources of nations. "Capital and labor" are divided today; they are as far apart as master and slave. The unity of true capital and labor will be effected through the restoration of property and the products of industry to the producers.

Chicago city authorities rejoice that the rate of mortality of infants is decreasing, and point to the fact as an indication of progress; but the fact is overlooked that there is an alarming increase of suicides and murders. The elements of unhappiness are too much for many grown-up babies, who seek means of hasty exit from the stage of the world's theater; and the theological and scientific comedians are endeavoring to account for the numerous cases of stage fright which causes many to refuse to play their part.

The way to disintegrate society, paralyze commerce and industry, and destroy governments, is to persuade the people to accept the fallacy that there is no such thing as organic unity; that leaders and heroes are useless; that the religious nature of man may be abolished by common consent; and that there should be no laws, no order, and no cohesion of the body politic. Chaos is the anarchists' ideal; individualism will ultimate in the great reign of terror, the world-wide revolution. The old world is hastening on to the vortex; it is verging on disintegration.

The world is cursed with a trinity of gigantic evils: The modern Christian system of religion; the Copernican system of astronomy; and the competitive system of commerce and industry; they are the forms of modern religion, science, and economy. They have gone hand in hand down the centuries, wrecking human hopes and hearts; and there can be no genuine reform until they are wiped from the mind of man and the sphere of his relations.

Time and space are both limited. If they were infinite, there could be no definite division of either. It is said that space is infinite; but we may divide all the space there is into feet and inches. It is said that time is infinite, but we divide time into seconds and into cycles. Time is always in the present; the past is no more, and the future is not yet. Time is measured as it passes; there can be but one second at a time.

The man who creates the new world of humanity must know how the universe is formed, else the society and government he constructs will be out of harmony with the great pattern of the physical cosmos.

It would be better if modern scientists would venture on a voyage of discovery of mistakes, than to continue to add ludicrous blunders to already overgrown fallacies.

Learning a trade under the competitive system, is learning how to best serve the men who steal the wealth which the workman produces.

There can be but one complete system of absolute science, because there is but one universe, but one God, and but one humanity.

The processes of squaring the circle or incubating the sphere, are as simple and as easy as the processes of incubation of the egg.

Koreshanity and the Competitive System.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I notice that in spite of your vehement declarations against the evils of money and your arguments to abolish the same, you are engaged in chasing it to some extent—through the channels of competition. Can you not, with all the wisdom and power you claim to possess, find no better weapon with which to fight the devil than his own? If you need money (that is, gold and silver) to help along the cause, why not make it yourself?—you claim to be able to do so.—
A READER.

If the world would adopt Koreshan Socialism there would be no competition; because it does not, we must begin to build the new order from the basis of a nucleus, the members of which do not compete with one another. The producers in the Koreshan Unity are communistic and co-operative; but the fact that the people of the world will not deal with us on the basis of our principles, compels us for the time being to deal with them on the only basis on which they will do business; and if, in the exchange of products of energy and skill for that which we need from other producers, we are compelled to employ a fictitious medium, we are adopting the only method which the world will at present tolerate. We, as a nucleus of individuals, who do not compete with one another, are forced to sustain as equitable relations to other peoples as the conditions of society will admit.

We are not fighting the devil with the weapon of competition. We produce goods through the expenditure of energy, and in our business with others we must put up with as much or little in return as the present system of waste will admit. We do this in order to maintain ourselves and our institutions while we are fighting the devil with another and more effective weapon, which the Founder of Koreshanity in his wisdom, has discovered and is now teaching his people to apply. There is a great difference between loving money and "chasing it" from motives of selfishness, and using money as it comes to us through industry and our propaganda for the unselfish purpose of promulgating the Scientific Gospel for the blessing of humanity. We declare the competitive system to be wrong; but while it prevails, we must adjust ourselves to the conditions which it makes inevitable.

To say the least, it is more legitimate to "make money" on the basis of active industry, than to be engaged in the manufacture of gold for the purpose of making fictitious money. We need people whose industry constitutes the only true capital, more than we need money; and more may be accomplished in the end by spending time and energy in the work of transforming men and minds than in changing baser metals into gold. It is better that there should be opportunities for sacrifice and self-denial on the part of those who accept the truth of Koreshanity—better to await developments along the line of the course of events until the great door of opportunity opens, than to create conditions of opulence and luxury by artificial processes. The time will come naturally when this great System will develop rapidly enough; we are not impatient, for everything will come to us at the proper time in accordance with the laws of the inevitable.

The Location of the Spiritual World.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—(1) I cannot understand just where our departed friends are. I am told that spirits can only exist in human bodies; and yet there must be a heaven or place where spirits dwell. Can our friends who are gone have any care over us or guide us in our actions? Are there any true mediums who converse with spirits? (2) What is the secret of health? Do Koreshans need medicines?—Mrs. E. L. P., Des Moines, Ia.

The world of humanity contains its own heavens, just as the physical world contains the physical heavens; the spiritual world is in the brain of man. Spirits which pass out at dissolution enter the spiritual world through mental attraction, which determines the plane to which they go. The spiritual world is the interior mind of humanity; it is above the external consciousness. Entities of the mind of the dying man enter the interior mind of others, pass their career in the spiritual world, and reappear, in the course of time, in the external world through desire, in the channels of mortal propagative functions. Departed spirits can influence the external mind only by reflex influence or precipitation; they do not know what is going on in the external world, except through mediums.

There are a few mediums who communicate with spirits on the interior; but the majority of mediums are frauds, and the majority of "guides" are deceptive spirits, which impress minds that have developed a phase of mediumship. Koreshanity discourages the cultivation of the intuitive faculties, which make the will negative to all kinds of harmful influences. The age of true inspiration is passed; the time has come for illumination of the intellect through rational processes. The perverted will must be overcome and controlled by intellectual forces, because the age of science is here.

Spiritualism is a perversion of the truth of divine mediumship; modern mediums communicate with the spirits of the hells of mortal humanity, because the divine heavens are open only to the divine Messenger, authorized to declare the absolute truth.

(2) The secret of health is in the conservation of human vitality—in the husbanding and appropriation or proper use of the sex forces. Disease originates in the abuse of functions, in the wanton dissipation of life itself. When the mind is purified, the man needs no medicines nor stimulants. The disciples of Koreshanity are being educated in the science of the conservation of life; and until they reach more advanced stages of overcoming, simple and harmless remedies are sometimes necessary.

The Sign Aries in Aquarius.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—(1) What is considered to be the first constellation in the Zodiac in the Koreshan System? or, what is the name of the first sign in the Zodiac? Is the name of the first constellation and the first sign the same? And is the first sign in the first constellation at the climax of the Golden Age, which we are now entering? (2) What is your opinion of osteopathy and osteopaths?—H. J. J.

(1) The first sign, the head of the Zodiac, is always Aries; and when the signs and constellations agree in latitude and longitude, as they did nineteen hundred years ago, the sign Aries is in the constellation Aries—that is, at the beginning of right ascension, or the zero point of celestial longitude. The signs are in the earth, while the constellations are in the physical heavens. The twelve signs and the twelve constellations have the same names.

When Jesus was born, the sign Aries (indicated in the physical heavens by the equinoctial colure at the vernal equinox) just reached the limit of the constellation Aries; thus the sign, extending from the meridian Greenwich 30° to the east, was "in" the constellation Aries; but during the Christian dispensation, the sign has passed through the constellation Pisces and is now entering Aquarius. The Aquarian dispensation of 2,000 years is one third part of the Golden Age of 6,000 years.

In both the physical and anthropotic worlds there are two movements of the signs and constellations to be considered: the precessional, the backward or westward movement of the external sign; and the processional, the forward or eastward movement of the esoteric sign. Thus in humanity, while the descending life of Jesus has been passing through the people of the Piscatorial dispensation, in the reverse order of the Zodiac, his ascending life has developed from Aries, which represents the begetting principle, to Taurus, which signifies the power of begetting; and the Son of God reaches the amplification of his Fatherhood at the close of this dispensation. Pisces signifies plification; and this has been the age of proliferation in the mortal generation as well as in the divine regeneration; hence, the Golden Age of life begins when the fruit of the age of regeneration appears—when Aries is in the constellation Aquarius, which represents truth in the scientific degree.

(2) Osteopathic manipulation cures some diseases, because it removes obstructions to the circulation of fluids of the body and relieves pressure on the nerves and blood vessels; but osteopathy does not and cannot reach the cause of disease, which is primarily in the mind—in abnormal desire, which causes abuse of organs and functions of the body, and hence waste of vitality.

Koreshanity in the East.

Rev. E. M. Castle Begins a Series of Lectures at Springfield, Mass.

Rev. E. M. Castle, of Chicago, who is an ordained minister of the Koreshan Unity, is in town and, beginning January 13, will deliver a series of Sunday evening lectures in Memorial hall, on the tenets and principles of Koreshan Science. The lectures will be free and the public invited. There are already about 75 people here interested in the doctrines and beliefs inculcated by the Founder of Koreshanity. Rev. Castle was formerly a school-teacher; she became dissatisfied with the theory of religion of the present day. She was led to investigate the Copernican theory of astronomy, and, considering it faulty, to study and believe in the Koreshan Cosmogony. There is quite a settlement of Koreshans in Chicago, which is their stronghold. They possess a church and University, with about 75 active students, though the total is nearer 125, when all those who take courses are included. At Washington Heights, a suburb of the city, is situated the University plant, consisting of a large house, four cottages, and a lecture building. There is a printing plant connected with the University, worth $30,000. This is situated at Englewood, as is also a home. A colony of the Koreshans is located in Florida, where there is also a branch of the University. The Koreshans believe in concentrating the mind upon one subject at a time, and putting the knowledge gained by study to immediate use in practice as it is acquired. The children's hours of instruction average about two a day. Rev. Castle has taught a number of children of tender years to read in six or eight weeks. Education and study are intended to be rendered attractive and never irksome by the Koreshan method. She says that it was punishment enough for a misdemeanor to tell the children that if the offense were repeated they could not come to school. Rev. Castle is an interesting and fluent talker, and her lectures should be well worth listening to.—Springfield Daily Republican.

A Lesson in Sociology.

A Clergyman's Conclusions Concerning the Present System of Competition.

The other day as I was walking along Wabash avenue near Adams street, a little bit of a boy, ragged, dirty and shivering, pushed one of the city dailies up against me with a most mournful plea that I buy it of him. I was just about to accept the little fellow's proposition when another boy, a trifle larger and every bit as forlorn in appearance, rushed up and shoved his rival well aside, beseeching me as he did the shoving act to take my paper of him.

The smaller of the twain seemed to feel that he had a sort of prior right in the deal, but the other chap was not disposed to recognize the right, and the argument waxed warm. From argument the matter was rapidly approaching something worse, when I suggested that they compromise the difficulty by allowing me to buy a paper from each of them.

I got my papers, but I did not read them. My mind was on the terrible lesson which the boys had all unconsciously taught me. The lesson would not down, and I kept on thinking: "It is a practical illustration of the spirit of the age—heartless competition." The chances are that the bellicose lads whom I encountered had never read "David Harnum," but it was evident that they knew all about David's motto, which motto they were acting out to the letter—"Do unto the other fellow the way he would like to do unto you—and do it fust."

I said to myself: "Boys, you are not alone. With you is a mighty army that is working, as you are working, along the line laid down by the horsetrading banker of Homeville." It may be good business—unquestionably it is, else it would not be so intensely popular—but it is damnable bad ethics. It is the ethics, not of humanity, but of the pigsty and the jungle—the ethics of greedy swine and blood-thirsty tigers. Much finer is the rule of Confucius and Jesus of Galilee—"Whatsoever ye would," etc. That word "would" stands for sentiment, the sentiment of right, the sentiment of fraternity versus the greed and savagery of porker and feline.

Greed and savagery! Hog and tiger! They were all present in the pair of little newsboys that I met on the avenue. And the boys were merely playing the game that we are all playing seven days in the week. The programme, and the whole programme, is throatcutting, and the best man is he who can cut the greatest number of throats, and cut them the quickest.

Slash away! then, for do we not live under a competitive system? And when you go out to compete with your fellow man, do you not go prepared to take his very life, if such step is necessary to the accomplishment of your purpose?

I have somewhere heard of a bad place called "hell;" a place where fiends and devils are supposed to dwell, and I have often wondered if it was not in "hell" that the present industrial order was born. It is an infamous order! and as false as it is infamous. Put to the test, it will not stand.

Try it and see. Each of the newsboys that are so heartlessly aggressive on the street, and each one of the army of men doing business within the wonderful "loop" has, somewhere in the great city or its suburbs, a home, and when, after the day's doings, that dear spot is reached the claws are sheathed, the fangs slip back into their sockets, the greed becomes good-will, and the belligerent spirit softens down into that of the most beautiful benevolence. For "home" is the place where the dominating impulse must be generosity instead of greed, and cordial co-operation in place of cut-throat competition.

In the home, the ethics of business will not work. In a very brief time it would destroy the home and leave us wanderers upon the earth, unloving and unloved. Home is the place where we must be considerate, gentle, just, thoughtful of others' rights, forgetful of the "inhumanity" which out in the world makes "countless thousands mourn."

But is not the WORLD one great HOME? And are we not all one great FAMILY? And if LOVE is the only rule that will work in the little home, is it not true that it is the only rule that will successfully work in the larger one? Truth goes all around the circle, and, as Epictetus long ago observed, that which is good for one bee or a few bees is equally good for the whole hive. Certainly that which is bad for the whole hive cannot, in the long run, be other than bad for the individual bee. If I were going to pray, my prayer would be something like this; "O, Power of powers! during this new century, inspire us all to try the virtue of the golden rule." Rev. T. B. Gregory, in Chicago American.

To Lecture on Cosmogony.

The study of Koreshanity is to be given a new impetus in this city through a series of lectures to be given in Memorial hall on Sunday evenings, beginning with the second Sunday in January. Rev. E. M. Castle, of the University System and the departments of industry connected with Koreshanity, at Chicago, will inaugurate the series and is in this city for that purpose. Her first lecture will probably have for a title: "The Koreshan Cosmogony versus the Copernican System," and in it she will try to explain the advantages of the former and the defects of the latter so that all her hearers may understand.

Rev. Castle is an enthusiast on the subject. Born in California, she was attracted to Koreshanity while a teacher in the high school at Alameda. In studying Darwin, Huxley, etc., she learned that they were not only agnostics in religion, but in science, and the new science appealed to her. As a result she began the active study of the subject seven and a half years ago. Since then she has traveled extensively, installing societies in various sections of the country, but this is her first visit to New England. She is a very interesting speaker and thoroughly interested in her work. Whether you believe her teaching or not you will enjoy her lecture.—Springfield Daily News.

THREE NEW CENTURY SONNETS

I

Hush! for the watching stars grow blind
o'erhead,
Where red auroras flame up higher and higher,
And, wrapt in its magnificent attire,
On breast of midnight lies the century,
dead;
Look ye your last on it, nor shrink, nor dread,
For past it, in a breathing cloud of fire,
Comes the new century like a Messiah,
On wings of "what shall be" prophetic sped.
What shall be? Lo, when unborn men define
Love as sublimest of discoveries.
They will outleap the human boundary line,
And, heaven allured, to higher levels rise,
Nor less content them than to be divine;
Nor less than to be Godlike shall suffice

II

Count not the centuries as centuries;
Count them as evolution of a plan
That was conceived before the world began;
Count them as years of heaven in earth's disguise,
Eternity that still in embryo lies,
Jehovah held. Lo! He alone can span
The everlasting years, and yet, O man,
Thou shalt to the great consummation rise!
O people of this dawning century, hail!
Ye can make jubilant the hearts ye know:
Ye can uplift the truth, and faith unveil;
Ye can walk steadfast in the light below
Till ye approach that Sun nor death can pale,
And from the eternal to the eternal go.

III.

On the white page of this new century
write,
O bright evangel, write that wars shall cease;
That there shall come a universal peace,
And, ere the century dies, that greater light
Will stream through human souls, until the right
All wrongs shall overcome, all bonds release;
That songs shall flow from thought's divine increase,
And music shadow forth the infinite.
Write, for thou know'st the ages are not

And that already we can, listening, hear of assumption. As for the Copernican theory of astronomy, it is as much a work of the imagination as "Through the Looking-glass," and about as reasonable.

Koreshan Science calls attention to the fact that we know things only through contrast; that we may know one kind of matter as distinguished from other kinds, but that to know matter itself we must at the same time know some substance that is not material, with which to contrast material substance. It advances the proposition that the modern agnostic has not attained the final altitude of the human intellect; and further, that the universe we inhabit is definite and determinable in configuration, and composed of two antithetical substances, one material and the other spiritual, which are correlative and interconvertible. The activities of their reciprocal relations generating the energies of the universe, which propositions are capable of ample development.—Springfield Daily Republican, Jan. 14, 1901.

The Literature of Koreshanity

Uncovers the Mystery of Ages.

THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A glimpse of Koreshan Universology, in its application to human thought and life, preparatory to the establishment of the Social Theocratic System, called the Kingdom of God, may be obtained by a careful study of fundamental principles.

The Cellular Cosmogony or Koreshan Astronomy.

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DR. CYRUS R. TEED, OF CHICAGO.

The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, Theocracy, and Social Economy.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Divine Truth and its Counterfeits.

Modern Mental Scientists Imitating the Works and Claims of the Messiah; Messianism the Central Doctrine of Life; Growing Influence of Antichristian Fallacies.

THERE IS A CLASS of people that may be distinguished by the significant title "I AM GOD." The doctrines promulgated are at variance with every principle of life as disseminated by the Savior of men, and so absolutely antichristian as to be most consistently designated the spirit of antichrist as defined by the Revelator. Underlying and constituting the impulse to this new phase of deception, is the desire to speculate and make money on the credulity of religious fanatics. It is not surprising, in fact, it is reasonable to suppose that the devil should announce himself God at a time when the fruit of the real Christ is about to mature.

God and Lord, as applied to Deity, are titles involving very different concepts and principles. God (Eloah) implies all that is true of the universe, in the mind where the truth is revealed, where it obtains as an omniscient consciousness. The Lord is the personality in whom God is thus made manifest. As in the case and personality of Jesus the Lord, God (the Eloah) was invisible in Christ the Lord. Jesus had attained to an immortal state. In such attainment He was distinctively the Son of God; he was distinct in his character from all other men, in that he was immortal while they were mortal, and did not possess—in any sense—the Spirit of God, but rather the spirit of the devil. This was made conspicuously clear in the Lord's own differentiation of his origin as compared with the origin of those whom he declared to be of their father the devil; and he further iterated, that the works of their father they would do.

Lord, in English, and Jehovah, in Hebrew, are the same. The Lord Jesus in his personal manifestation was the veritable Jehovah, and in him was the invisible God; that is, Eloah. After the church was baptized by the Holy Spirit, the Christ had entered the church and the church was actuated by the Spirit of the Almighty—the Spirit being the Almighty. In the declension of the church, the Spirit declined with the church and became the spirit of the devil. If the human mind were capable of reasoning a little on the basis of correspondences, it could easily perceive the possibility of the declension of the Spirit of Deity in the human race.

As there is a purely physical sun, that which we have denominated the alchemico-organic, so there is a purely anthropotic Sun. As there is a solar center to the world of physics, so there is a solar center to the world of humanity. The center to the world of physics, which is in space, has no mental consciousness as there is in the anthropotic Sun. The physical sun radiates its energies through space, reaching its limitations at the environing circumferences of the shell which determine its limitations. At the surface of the earth the pure radiations of the sun's light, heat, electricity, and magnetism are made to change their character. Energy becomes matter, and the encumberments of the earth are the products of the precipitation of the sun. The filth upon the earth, by which the vegetable life upon it is fertilized, was once in the sun and constituted the spirit of all the radiations of the solar energy. The Spirit which was in the Christ, who was the bright and morning Star, constituted the Light of the world when manifest in the disciples. They constituted the anthropotic Sun. Corresponding to the radiations of the physical sun, the radiations of the anthropotic (human) Sun descend through the race, and at the limitations of the cycle the truth has become fallacy, and the good has become evil.

Man is now in a state of mortality, and it will require something more than thinking to awaken him out of his mortality and corruption. The man who says "I AM GOD," and who holds to the fallacies of modern science, is a liar and is teaching other men to lie. According to the Messianic law, there will come one man in whom and through whom God, as the Spirit of Truth, will operate to give to the world the true science of life. This man will be born in sin and shapen in iniquity, but will overcome his iniquities and become the baptizer of that portion of the world which has ripened sufficiently to become receptive to his baptism. This spirit which declares "I AM GOD," lies about the personal Messiah; it ignores and denounces the Messianic law; it belittles the character of Jesus the Lord, and denies his personal Messiahship.

The power of restoring to ordinary physiological health those who were afflicted, constituted but a small part of the mission of the Christ 1900 years ago. The practice of turning it into the business of financial speculation did not enter into even that phase of His work. We hope the readers of THE FLAMING SWORD will be able to distinguish between this doctrine of antichrist and the Koreshan doctrine of life and death. Humanity—spirit, soul, and body—is in the mortal state. God does not constitute the spirit or soul of the common mortal man. The spirit which actuates man is the spirit of the devil, and not the Spirit of God. Man cannot think himself into immortality, for the simple reason that the spirit which attempts to do this is nothing but the spirit of mortality. The first thing of importance for men to do, is to become conscious of the fact that humanity is mortal; that men are in hell; that this is the material hell, and that it is just as much a reality as heaven. Get out of the hallucination that men are going to hell, and become conscious of the fact that mankind merely changes from the natural to the spiritual hell of his progress, until he learns the fact that he is in hell, and knowing this, desires to take the proper measures for getting out. Instead of thinking that you are immortal, learn the fact that you are mortal, that you are in the state of sin, but that this mortal shall put on immortality, and this corruptible shall put on incorruptibility—not by thinking, but by doing.

The central law of life is Messianic. The recognition of the Messianic center is the first step to be taken in the fulfilment of the law of life, and in the application of the science of the Decalogue. It is the purpose of Koreshanity to heal the body; not merely to restore it to a physiologically healthy state, but to transform it from the mortal to the immortal state. This cannot be done while the mind is unconscious of its mortality. The culmination of the Christian era will consummate in the fruits of immortal life. The devil in the race of humanity is conscious of this fact, and takes the opportunity to utilize it to a false purpose. God never brings a truth into the world which the devil does not counterfeit; and thousands appropriate the counterfeit as the truth. God will not be manifest in the human race until after the great baptism about to be shed upon the world. Elijah the prophet first appears in his personal character, after which the world will be baptized with the great outpouring of the Spirit.

"I AM GOD," as now bandied by the blasphemers, stands for asininity; I AM A GREAT BIG ASS, rendered again into literal English, means, I AM THE DEVIL. "But we heal the sick!" So does the devil heal the sick. He is an expert counterfeiter, and makes a point to attempt a reproduction of whatsoever the Lord accomplishes. When Moses and Aaron stood before the Egyptians, and Aaron held his rod over the waters and they became blood, the Egyptians held out their rods and they turned the waters to blood also. Thus, through the list of all the plagues, the Egyptian magicians were equal to the Almighty except in the instance of the lice, the serpents, and the destruction of the first-born. But after Moses' rod became a serpent and the magicians turned their rods into serpents also, they were neatly swallowed alive by the serpent of Moses.

Let us say a word about this devil; who or what is the devil? This is a common question, and stands by the side of the other important one, who is God? The devil is that all-pervasive spirit of the human race which machinates and projects evil, operative in, through, and by the brain of man, and existing by virtue of the fact that human personality makes it possible for such conditions to obtain. Satan is the power of fallacy through and by corresponding processes. The devil heals the sick, ordinarily, for cash. The Lord did not do this. It does not follow, however, that because a man pretends to heal the sick gratuitously, that he is following in the Lord's footsteps. Dr. Wood started out many years ago to make himself a reputation, and began by advertising to heal the poor free of charge. He made a great success of it; he also made a great reputation and amassed great wealth.

Healing the sick is no part of the manifestation of the Lord in this age. The Lord's coming will consum.

mate in the change of this mortal to immortality. It will not be accomplished by any of the processes aped by the various forms of antichrist, now so extensively in vogue. Koreshanity alone holds the key to the situation. It is the God-ordained process and power. Koreshanity is Universology. It has come to stay; it has come to inaugurate the Kingdom, and must ultimately prevail throughout the earth.

Conception and Birth of Jesus the Messiah.

An Analysis of the Laws and Principles of Parthenogenesis; the Book of Divine Generation; the Immaculate Conception not a Miracle, but a Natural Consequence.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

JESUS, THE LORD CHRIST—the philosophic Center and Archetype of the divine humanity, the crowning life of the universe—was, according to the inspired records of his apostleship, parthenogenetically conceived. Virginal conception was in fulfilment of the prophetic declaration of Isaiah: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." The Apostle Matthew makes this statement: "Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost."

The question arises, from whence came the Holy Ghost? Koreshanity makes the scientific answer: From the spiritual or inner man of Joseph, the husband of Mary. Universology has vindicated the Bible as a scientific book—a book written by men in possession of the mind of the Almighty—the scientific Mind, which knows man and his environing universe, of which he, in the divine perfection, is a self-perpetuating vitellus. The Apostle Matthew, in recording the book of the generation or production of Jesus, ends the line of embodiments which transmitted the Word of God with "Joseph, the husband of Mary." One account gives the line of its transmission from Abraham, who received its celestial degree from Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of the Most High, who, being in the order of Melchizedek, could enter into conjunction with Abraham, who was called "the friend of God," and who represented the natural man prepared by upbuilding in holy—that is, rational or scientific—faith, to receive Melchizedek into his earthly tabernacle; for God tabernacles with men until he builds from their transformed resources his own holy Temple.

The tabernacle and the temple ultimately become one by the uniting power of inherent Deity, who enforces obedience—in the median line of racial progress—to the law of circumcision and the conservation and polarization of its heaped-up energies. These energies are conserved for the reproduction of the divine image and likeness in temple and tabernacle. The Apostle Luke traces the lineage of Joseph, who transmitted the Word which was made flesh, back to Adam, "who was the Son of God." Every Son of God possesses not only the mind of God, but the flesh also, "the image and likeness," the Jehovah, the regenerator of the Holy Ghost. The biune Deity perpetuates His life, which is eternal in the heavens, and timic in earthly manifestations, by the absorption of energies generated and transmitted from the planting and resurrection of Jehovah, the Seed of Deity.

The man Joseph, though a carpenter, was also a priest in the temple, "because of his knowledge of the law and fame for holiness." The science of the law is the Almighty power of Deity. It was in the order of law that this priest should transmit these impregnative forces of the biune Spirit of Deity illumined with a knowledge of the law, to the mind of Mary at the end of a cycle of development. They came from above, from the highest order of being, the Son of God, and from the highest order of its priesthood—that of Melchizedek, and constituted the overshadowing with the potencies of a living soul, the chaste embodiment of the spirit of earthly motherhood, the prepared matrix of God's animal life. Mary was prepared in the order of law to become the focal point of the holiest aspirations of all the mothers of Israel, for the bringing forth of the Lamb of God in the Lion of the tribe of Judah—the Messianic manifestation which should become the Redeemer of all Israel. The evidence of this preparation may be found in the exhibition of her faith which responded to the message of the angel, in that song of joy called the "Magnificat" (Luke i: 46-55):

My soul doth magnify the Lord,
And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior;
For He hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden:
For, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

For He that is mighty hath done to me great things;
And holy is his Name;
And His mercy is unto generations and generations
Of them that fear Him.
He hath showed strength with his arm;
He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts;
He hath put down the princes from their thrones,
And hath exalted them of low degree.
The hungry He hath filled with good things,
And the rich hath he sent empty away.
He hath holpen Israel his servant,
That he might remember mercy
(As he spake unto our fathers)
Toward Abraham and his seed forever.

This is a breathing out of holy inspiration from those progressive entities of ascending Israel, which Mary represented. This is indicated in the exclamation: "And hath exalted them of low degree." This wonderful conjunction of Deity with the mind of Mary, to beget the Lord of the whole earth, and to produce from her womb the firstfruit of universal life, which should reproduce the seminal essence of Deity for life's perpetuity, could not fail to exalt all the femininity in her into conjunction with the divine soul or Motherhood of Deity.

Records of respected traditions tell us that Anna, the mother of Mary, strong in the passion of maternity, as are all true women, had been denied motherhood for twenty years of married life, and wept sore and prayed much to God. Her maid rebuked her and said it became her not to mourn, in that "the great day of the Lord had come." Therefore, she put away sadness, rose up, exercised her faith, arrayed herself in bridal robes, and entered her garden to pray with hope. There the angel of the Lord communed with her, telling her that a child would be given her. Then Anna said, "As the Lord liveth, be it male or female that I bear, I vow it to the Lord, it shall serve Him all the days of its life." When her child was born, it being a daughter, she called it Mary, as the angel had commanded. At the end of her first year Joachim, her father, made a great feast and called many friends together—scribes, priests, and elders—and he brought the maiden to the priests, who blessed her and said: "God of our fathers, bless this child, and give her a name which shall be known throughout all generations;" and all the people said, "Amen!"

There are people who, when the question of the immaculate conception is brought up for consideration, content themselves with quoting this text: "With God nothing is impossible." The Almighty is a lawgiver; and the "fulness of the Godhead bodily" is attained by obedience to law. All things exist by virtue of the operation of the laws of their being. Facts are the demonstrations of operating laws. The impossible is not possible with God, man, nor the devil. Virginal conception is a well-attested, recorded fact, and was the demonstration of an operative law. Koreshanity declares the demonstration, and gives the law of the fact of the transmutability of matter to spirit and spirit to matter. The fact is observable everywhere, and takes place through the mediumship of correlated energies polarized in matter.

"God is in the generation of the righteous." God is a union of the highest spiritual potencies operating in the brain of man, to perpetuate for himself, the divine unity of love and wisdom, a perfect expression (which implies a Deific science of perfection) or embodiment of its potencies which it can control for its divinest uses. For the service of scientific distinction, God implies the intellectual principle derived from life, as the spirit of the nerve, and Lord, the affectional principle, the spirit of the blood in its divinest use or service. The two constitute the throne and altar of Being, which make man a living soul. In perfect accord or unity, they produce the "fulness of the Godhead bodily," the recurrent manifestation of immortality to mortality. This is accomplished through polarization of divinespiritual potencies in a suitable medium for their precipitation in conjunction with the germ of their reproduction.

Knowing these laws of energy and mediumship, Koreshanity declares Joseph to have been a man in whose interior mind the highest impregnative spiritual potencies were united, while Mary was a womb-man of most celestial aspirations for the highest, and attracted to their most vital germ—without external carnal contact—the psychic potencies of Deity from Joseph's interior—he being unconscious, in his external mind, of their possession; for the natural mind discerns not the spiritual things of God. Let us here note that it was reserved for John the Baptist, the greatest of Jewish prophets, to transmit to the Lord that degree of pneumatic potencies, the Spirit of Deific Fatherhood, which should make the Son of God—God's living soul, to ultimate in the world's greatest prophet and spiritual quickener to newness of life.

The highest degree of intellectual power is the scientific, the all-knowing, which is indissoluble in celestial unity with the highest degree of the affectional, the all-loving. Therefore, Deity knows and loves the universe to perpetuate it from the only thing which can perpetuate it—his holy Seed. The mind of God in Joseph knew the mind of Mary and she, the gestative of earth, conceived and precipitated to the sphere of reconstruction the animal life of Deity, the holy, vital Seed; and the birth resulted in the most holy name of Deity known to mortals—Jehovah, the Lord our Righteousness, in whom was infolded the Bride of God, the highest principle of Israel's Motherhood. This was represented in type by such as Mary, and by Rachel—the Ewe of God. It is the psychic control of love according to the knowledge of God. This power represented the ascending forces of circumcision—the holy aspirations of those who persisted in the performance of the rite, that a king should come from God, representing the union of the highest intellectual and affectional potencies, and embodying in himself the spirits of the just made perfect—the prophets and priests of the people who had exalted the standard of the law in Israel.

There is no space in the spiritual world; it is the thought-world of humanity. Thoughts are entities which, when correspondent in quality (quality corresponds to space in the natural), can unite in divine harmony and precipitate their energies through the mediumship of matter into living forms. God's thoughts are not as man's thoughts, nor his ways as our ways. God works in man to will and to do his own good pleasure, which is to produce from and in him his own image and likeness, which He mentally transmits to his ordained medium of gestation or materialization, to be functionally organized and brought forth.

There will come a time when virginal conception will be possible to an order of holy women who will, after a given cycle of scientifically applied circumcision, represent as embodiments its ascending and polarized forces. There is a time for everything, and everything its time. The time for virginal conceptions is not now; but the exhibition of the law operative is extant, manifest in the animal and vegetable kingdoms. It is an axiom in Koreshanity, that a law operative in one domain has in time a correspondential operation in all domains.

No one can scientifically refute the fact that the Virgin Mary was overshadowed by the Spirit of God from the mind of the priestly Joseph, through whom the inspired Apostles traced the lineage of the "Word made flesh;" but there is One whose science of the law is so universal that he can produce adequate testimonies of the most scientific character, to prove that a virgin conceived and brought forth a child, who became a man of whom Napoleon, the greatest emperor of the world of carnage, could say:

From first to last Jesus is the same, always the same—majestic and simple, infinitely severe and infinitely gentle. Throughout a life passed in the public eye, he never gave occasion to find fault. The prudence of his conduct compels our admiration by its union of force and gentleness. Alike in speech and action, He is enlightened, consistent, and calm. Sublimity is said to be an attribute of Divinity. What name, then, shall we give to Him in whose character were united every element of the sublime? I know men, and I tell you Jesus is not a man. Everything in him amazes me. His Spirit outreaches mine, and his will confounds me. Comparison is impossible between Him and any other being in the world. He is truly a being by himself. His ideas and his sentiments; the truth that he announces; his manner of convincing—are all beyond humanity and the [common] natural order of things. His birth and the story of his life; the profoundness of his doctrine, which overturns all difficulties, and is their most complete solution; the singularity of his mysterious being—his appearance; his empire; his progress through all centuries and kingdoms; all this is to me a prodigy, an unfathomable mystery. I see nothing here of man. Near as I may approach, closely as I may examine, all remains above my comprehension—great with the greatness that crushes me. It is in vain that I reflect—all remains unaccountable! I defy you to cite another life like that of Christ.

PROF. O. F. L'AMOREAUX, A. M., PH. D.

Why not explain to the people and to our children that Christmas is a survival, an adoption, of the centuries' old pagan festival of the winter solstice, celebrated during the week preceding December 25? That it was a season of present giving and good cheer, and that good will to man was made practical;—for quarrels were discontinued, debts remitted, prisoners liberated, and absolute equality prevailed among the people? Why not admit frankly that this festival was adopted by Christendom, and modes of celebrating the day varied as it spread into other climes and as the tastes of the different people dictated? If Christians wish to attach a sacred significance to the day, it is their privilege to do so, but they should, in justice to themselves and to their pagan ancestors, explain that in making the circuit of the seasons the sun reaches his lowest point on December 21, and for three days is apparently stationary; on the 25th he begins to rise—is born again—and from this fact originates the birth of Jesus, who is simply a personification of the sun, who brings new light and life and hope to the world.—HARRIET M. GAZE, in Chicago Record.

AMONG THE EARLY CHRISTIANS, before the apostasy of which Paul speaks as rising even in his time, and which still continues in its advanced stages, there was no mass, much less a Christ's mass—Christmas. The convincing proof of this is that there is no corresponding word in the Greek language, the language of the New Testament and of the early Christians. The early Christians rejected the Jewish festival and sacred days, except so far as they yielded a qualified assent to the Sabbath day, the violation of which was one of the principal accusations of the Jews against Jesus. Paul says, "Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days." By a similar revulsion from the errors and traditions of the papacy, the Puritan fathers rejected the multiplied sacred days of Catholicism, and with them, Christmas. The Latin derivation of the word mass, clearly shows that its origin must have been after the establishment of the order of the clergy, which authentic history informs us was in the beginning of the third century, A. D. The Latin was the language of the clergy.

The historian, Coleman, gives the date A. D. 210 as that of the "Introduction of the Old Testament ideas of a particular priesthood into the Christian church," and says of the effect of this baleful change from the equal brotherhood of the early churches: "No change, perhaps, in the whole history of the changing forms of church government, can be specified more destructive to the primitive constitution of the church, or more disastrous to its spiritual interests. 'The entire perversion of the original view of the Christian church,' says Neander, 'was itself the origin of the whole system of Roman Catholic religion—the germ from whence sprang the popery of the dark ages.'" As mass is an essential part of Catholicism, Christ's mass or Christmas must have originated in that institution which was the result of apostasy from the early and only true Christianity. Coleman says that Christmas originated in the Roman church in the fourth century.

When this apostate Christianity—having lost the gentle, loving spirit of the Christ and received in its place an unholy ambition for temporal and spiritual sovereignty—mounted the throne of the Cæsars, it naturally followed the traditional policy of that all-conquering power, which was to allow conquered peoples to keep their former religion and customs so far as was consistent with Roman sovereignty. It would be easier to baptize and give a new Christian name to a pagan festival like that of the winter solstice, than to induce a conquered people to abandon it; and that may be the origin of Christmas. Whatever may be its origin, it is certain that Christmas was not in its beginning and is not now, a true Christian institution.

While, then, we do not see good cause for denying the statement of the above writer concerning Christmas, we emphatically deny the accuracy of that about the birth of the Christ. It is characteristic of some men to refuse to believe in the existence of men in their own or any time, who possess powers or capabilities much beyond their own. In their own self-esteem, they are about as good, or great, or powerful as anybody.

Where a very remarkable personality lives, the great mass of people are too ignorant or prejudiced, and, under the pressure of this terrible competitive system, too busy trying to live or to amass money, to pay attention to his merits or claims. If he lived in some remote period, they count him a myth and not a real personage. If any claims to divine power are made for him, they—not recognizing any such power in themselves—are confirmed in their view of his unreal character. The people of whom Cicero speaks, who revolt at the idea of a superior Being having the power to look into their affairs, are always numerous.

Naturally, the idea of God entertained by the infidel world is that distorted one taught by modern orthodoxy. It is not wonderful that thinking men refuse to believe it. It makes God a monster, damning men eternally for what they could not possibly avoid. They have no idea of the Bible teaching that the perfect man is the perfect God—the God-man, as Jesus was; that he was the divine Seed which, when sown in humanity—as Jesus was—would, in the time of the harvest or end of the Christian dispensation, produce a crop just like the seed sown—the kingdom of God in earth. There are several classes of these people who are anxious to have us believe that no such person as Jesus lived in the earth; and some of them are spiritualists. Some years ago a friend, who was of this class, exultingly put into our hands a thick volume which claimed to contain the revelation of the spirit of a noted man, of whom it gave the name, who had lived in Judea in the time claimed to be that of the Christ. Since the time of Christ, that spirit claimed to have been in the spirit world, and to have long sought a medium through whom it could reveal the facts in the case. It had at last found one, and hence the revelation. This spirit affirmed that no such being as Christ lived there then, nor were there any such beings as the early Christians; but that all light that then came to the world came through him—the spirit.

We said to our friend, that, taking the spiritualists on their own ground, we—with many other witnesses—had sat at the feet of the great Teacher—now present in the world—with two persons who, judging by what they do now, if they should die and their spirits go into the spiritual world, and in after ages should find a medium through whom to make revelations to those in earth, would swear by everything sacred, that all the light that came to the world at this date, came through them! With spirits in the flesh, at present, the experiences of men would not differ much from those of the wise man, except that what he said in haste, they would say deliberately; namely, that “All men are liars.” If such is the difficulty of getting the truth out of spirits when they are in the flesh and may be approached and cross-questioned, what ought we to expect when they are more inaccessible, speaking to us, as it were, out of the vasty deep—the spirits that “peep and mutter”?

The man whose memory reaches back over two score years, takes in the rise of modern spiritualism, and recalls the proud boasts which were then made in its behalf. It was claimed that the gates were at last ajar, and that the spiritual world would not long contain any secret kept back from mortals. The science of today is not richer by one important thought derived from that source. No marvel, then, that spiritualists know nothing of the real Christ! “What think ye of Christ? whose Son is he?” is the touchstone by which to test spirits now, as in the beginning of the age. If “David in spirit called him Lord,” it is not strange if the great body of materialists who are so “of the earth, earthy” that they do not believe at all in spirit, should not see Him, neither know him.

Add to these two great classes—who are by their very surroundings, if not by nature, incapacitated to see the Christ, both when he came before and when he comes again according to his promise—other great bodies of men who, in the struggle for life or for money-getting, have no time to see or think, but who, because they have hired others to do their seeing and thinking, are not themselves able to see or recognize the Christ. What wonder, then, that the world is full of people who have not seen the Messiah, and will not when he comes again, as the Jews did not see him, although they had been eagerly looking for him for an age! Whoever does not see him as he claimed to be—the Life and Light of this world, its Savior from the lost condition—not in some future imaginary spiritual world, but in this present natural world, does not see him at all.

Nineteen hundred years ago the salvation which the Christ wrought was that of the spirit; but that was simply the sowing of the seed which, when matured in the time of the harvest, should result in the salvation from death, of the natural body, when “this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.” This is that of which He spake before his departure from among men: “And if I go away and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also.” To receive them unto Himself is to receive them into his own undying condition and quality of life, not in some imaginary world, but in the natural world in which he then was.

To the unbiased intelligent mind, there is more proof that the Man Jesus lived in the earth in the beginning of the Christian age, than there is of any other man who lived nineteen hundred years ago. No great movement ever existed among men which did not have its origin in a man for whom it was generally named. Can any rational mind think that the whole civilized world would determine its dates by the birth of a man who never had any birth? Of the positive historical evidence, we will give but a single one of many, which ought to suffice. The great Roman historian, Tacitus, says: “The founder of the sect, Christ, was executed in the reign of Tiberius, by the procurator Pontius Pilate.” Tacitus was born about A. D. 53, and lived almost in the very time of the transaction he referred to. Shall we believe him, or the objectors who seldom attempt to offer any reason for their statements?

THE CHICAGO UNIVERSITY is laboring under the unavoidable and inevitable difficulty of endeavoring to teach from the text-books of the modern scientists and the text-books of the prophets. It has a divinity school, where students are educated in "liberal theology;" and it has its chairs of astronomy, physics, geology, and kindred branches of so called science. The divinity branch is in conflict with the other departments; or rather the spirit of "higher criticism" is playing havoc with the school of theology; and it is reported that, "Actuated by skeptical promptings, these students have raised questions as to whether the Bible is an indisputable moral guide," in view of the fact that it is in conflict with the accepted scientific theories of creation. A threatened revolt of the students against the teachings of the doctors and professors of theology, necessitated a general conference of the faculty and students for the purpose of ascertaining what kind of theology the students desire! When put to the test, the faculty manifest the very palpable weakness of modern science. The faculty did not take a bold stand; they sought to compromise the situation, first, by admitting that science has not attained to that degree of certainly which would render their decisions absolute; and second, by claiming that the Bible is a text book of morals, and not of science. But the assertion was made in the speeches of the august members of the faculty of the greatest University in the world, that the Bible is absolutely unreliable on the subjects of astronomy, ethnology, geology, and history, and that reconciliation of modern science and the Bible can be made only on the basis of the conclusion that the writers of the Bible knew absolutely nothing about the science of cosmogony. This, it is supposed, leaves only a slender moral thread running through a mass of ignorant references to the symbols of Nature—symbols which the writers of the Bible did not understand! Remove from the Bible its account of creation; its testimony concerning the nature and character of Deity; its natural symbols; its records of numerous miracles; its prophecies of the future; its claim concerning the Divinity of Jesus the Messiah; the teachings of Jesus and his Apostles concerning the ultimate redemption of the world,—and there is nothing even of moral integrity left in the Scriptures. On the other hand, let modern science retain its fallacious conclusions of world-formation; its absurd astronomical hypotheses; its preposterous theories of geology; its vagaries concerning chemistry; its false ethnology; its perverted interpretation of history, and its ignorance of God Almighty—and there is no room in it for moral integrity nor intellectual illumination! Koreshanity maintains the harmony of the language of the Bible and the language of Nature. The Bible and Nature are two great expressions of the divine mind, and both must be scientifically interpreted—by the Mind that expressed itself in Nature, by the mind that inspired the Bible. This excludes the modern scientist, and relegates him to the position which he admits he occupies—that of the agnostic!

Prof. Herron's idea of the mission of Jesus is summed up in the following quotation from his lecture on the "Kingdom of God:" "The religion of Jesus was an effort to initiate a free and masterful life of love as the common order of the world—an effort to translate what is highest in consciousness into the detailed facts of life and labor. It was the religion of the kingdom of heaven; the central idea of all that Jesus said or did. It was a bold and simple faith with a bold and unapologetic program for turning earth into heaven. It proposed to make heaven out of the common man and facts of life, or rather to uncover heaven within them. It sought to liberate the divine energy of man for building his heavenly home with the tools in his hands, out of the stones and materials at his feet." If this was the central purpose of Jesus, in view of the fact that the socialistic features of his work disappeared from the church during the second century, we should say that his mission was a failure. Did Jesus expect that the order he established would continue in form throughout the age? He did not. He did not come to liberate divine energy in the men who were mortal, and who were of their father the devil; he came to put divine energy into them, as the divine Seed sown—the Seed of divine perpetuity, the Seed of regeneration, the Seed of communism. That Seed died in the soil into which it went, in order that the harvest of that sowing might come; that that which was in primates in the divine philosophy might become the ultimates in science, involving the minutest details of life and human activity and relations. Jesus sowed himself, and will reap the 144,000; he sowed the seeds of communism, and will reap the divine order of society; he sowed the germs of the kingdom of heaven, and will reap the fruits of Universal Empire. The present socialistic movements are but reflexed indications of the Order which is in process of establishment through the application of the science of construction. Jesus was a leader; he embodied the principles and powers of a kingdom; he was an imperialist, not a democrat; and the form of the New Order which ultimates from the planting of the Seed of Empire, will mature under the leadership of a mind capable of applying in every domain and relation of human life, the known laws of cosmic form and function.

The great shadow that hangs like a pall over England is the unjust South African war; it is a cloud that remains and threatens a terrific storm; and much depends upon the attitude and action of the new British sovereign. If King Edward VII does not use his influence to end the war, he will lose a golden opportunity to become popular with the majority of the English subjects who oppose the present war party in power. It is felt in England, as it is apparent to the world at large, that the South African situation is today as critical as it was one year ago—if reports are to be believed. There has been no practical progress made by the British, it is said, since Buller relieved Ladysmith, since Lord Roberts captured Cronje. It is asserted by prominent Englishmen, that the British soldiery is being employed and subjected to the deadly aim of the Boers and to the terrible ravages of disease, "merely to add to the wealth of that class which, in the largest measure, escape both the taxation and the sacrifice of life imposed by the war." England is being humiliated in the eyes of the nations; the British casualties have been nearly 100,000—over five times that of the Boers; and today 250,000 British soldiers are unequal to the task of conquering the Boers, who number, in the field, less than one tenth the numerical strength of the British. The liberal press is crying out against the Salisbury administration, and asserts that "this is the pass to which the most incompetent government of modern times has brought the country." If King Edward VII makes the demand that the war must end, in accordance with the desire of the majority of his people, and the hope of nations, he may redeem himself from the charge of weakness of character and surprise the world with a display of manly courage.

The Literary Digest (Funk & Wagnalls Co., 37 Lafayette Place, New York City), the standard American literary, scientific, and religious review, with a weekly circulation of nearly 500,000 copies, and over 1,000,000 readers, under date of January 26, 1901, and under the heading of "Koreshanity, or the Universe as a Hollow Globe," published a summary of the Koreshan System—a portion of that which appears on page 2 of THE FLAMING SWORD—and editorially remarks: "One of the most remarkable religious products of the fecund West is the system which has attracted attention for several years under the name of Koreshanity, founded by KORESH, or in temporal nomenclature, DR. CYRUS R. TEED. 'Koreshan Universology' is, in the words of its Founder, 'a complete system of Science of the great universe of life,' and the new religion 'must supplant Christianity as Christianity supplanted Judaism.' Koreshanity, he explains, 'has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.' The following summary is taken from THE FLAMING SWORD (Chicago, December 28, 1900.), the official organ of Society, and published under the auspices of KORESH and VICTORIA GRATIA, the latter called the 'Pre-Eminent of the Koreshan Unity.'" This is a respectful and creditable notice of the great Koreshan System; and we extend to the Literary Digest our thanks and best wishes.

An army of 100,000 men with arms, marches continually over the American soil; the army is composed of tramps, and the arms they carry belong to the human anatomy. They beg and steal and destroy property; and the total annual expense of maintaining 100,000 tramps has been estimated to be at least $25,000,000. Tramps are examples of the effect of the great moral influence of the competitive system and the present order of society. The millionaire is the money-maker and the tramp-maker; the number of tramps increases in proportion to the rate of accumulation of wealth by misappropriation. The tramp and the millionaire are extremes; neither class produces anything substantial. The tramp bill of expense is annually very large; for that reason municipal authorities endeavor to devise means for abolishing the tramp. The millionaires constitute a vastly greater burden on the people—a burden with a crushing power; and we advocate the abolition of the millionaire, for when the John Millions are no more, the Weary Williams will have an opportunity to rest and become industrious.

A few scientists are considering the feasibility of adopting the Chinese written language for intercommunication in the world of commerce. They have discovered the fact that the Chinese language, though thousand of years old, is exceedingly simple, exact, and unvariable; the written language is the same now as it was over thirty centuries ago. Notwithstanding the boast of the modern world, men go back to the ancients for ideas. Our life, as well as language, came from the ancients; and today, in naming new inventions and in coining new words with which to express new conceptions, roots of ancient languages must be used. This is not in keeping with the usual conception that the peoples of the past were extremely ignorant; the ease with which ancient languages fit the things of modern progress evinces the great fact that extraordinary intellectual power is manifest in that which the modern world borrows from the peoples of past ages! This cannot be said of the nineteenth century attempts of philologists and linguists to formulate universal artificial languages.

Over-zealous scientists are now appealing to the visions of Swedenborg to prove that the planets are inhabited. The field of Swedenborg's research, when exercising his visionary faculties, was not outside of the human race; he saw what was in the spiritual world of man. He saw the spirits of Mars people, the spirits of Jupiterians, the Saturnians, etc., who dwell in the earth; he saw the spirits which inhabited or lived in the different planetary divisions of humanity. If the modern scientists wish to take Swedenborg at his best, let them consider what he saw in states of illumination—when he viewed the Cellular Cosmogony: the sun with its surrounding three atmospheres, below and environing which is the earth, the physical body of the universe. The scientists have yet to learn that the earth is INhabited!

It has been said that man is a mere machine; and there are some evidences which go a long way in corroborating the conclusion. The machines are divided into classes: The clergymen, who are mere mouthpieces of barrels of sermons; the scientists, whose conclusions are guesses; the popular phonographs, who repeat what is recorded on their cylinders from the pulpit and observatory; editors who are subsidized by the money power; and the large following of the faddists, who learn special vocabularies from Oriental lore. An Englishman has invented a machine, the "monsterphone," capable of preaching sermons to audiences of tens of thousands. Perhaps it is better than the sentimental machine; at any rate, let the monsterphone have a fair trial in the pulpit!

The usual conception of redemption is that it is an improvised scheme to repair the damage done to the world by the devil. Koreshanity reveals the fact that the fall and redemption of man are co ordinate factors of world perpetuity. The Koreshan idea of the atonement is rational; it involves the law of the resurrection of the Seed from the soil into which it has fallen—the at-one-ment, conjunction, or union of the substances of the soil and Seed, the mortal man and the divine mind in manifestation. The work of redemption is the work of restoration of the fifth natural kingdom, the resurrection of life from the hells, the reincarnation of the life of Deity in his own humanity. This alone is the true religion: the tying back of man to God.

Anatomists are busy constructing the forms of extinct species or races of animals; through application of the principles of comparative anatomy, gigantic animals of ages ago are made to live again in natural history, as it were. This is but a reflex of the great work of restoring the extinct kingdom of man, the higher race which constitutes the fifth natural kingdom; it is the work of resurrection. The field of Koreshan comparative anatomy and correspondential analogy extends beyond that of the modern scientific world, and embraces the mineral kingdom, the physical cosmos, as well as the anthropostic world, with its coming society of order, its universal empire, and the immortal structure of the perfect man.

A great wave of delusive mental science, hypnotism, and "healing" is sweeping the American continent; the making of money is back of modern miracle working, and scores of little journals are published for the purpose of booming the "healing" business. The United States postal authorities are after a considerable number of sheets which take advantage of the second class mail to increase the number of victims to "absent treatments." There is as much quackery today in mental science so called, as there is in the medical profession; the lottery of therapies has become as great a nuisance, as palpable a fraud, as the noted New Orleans lottery which flourished some years ago.

Baron Wilhelm Rothschild, the head of the great banking firm which has for a century and a half wielded the greatest power of Europe, is dead. The wealth of the Rothschild family is estimated to be nearly $3,000,000,000; and the firm has negotiated loans for Great Britain aggregating $1,000,000,000; for France, $400,000,000; and for other European nations, nearly $800,000,000. The house of the Rothschilds constitutes the greatest money trust of the East; and the power of its money kings is greater than the power of European sovereigns who bow to the supreme financial dictators, in both war and peace!

Neither the faculty of the great Chicago University nor the press reporters knew that two of the most puzzling questions which were submitted for answer at the University conference at Cobb hall, and which caused considerable discussion and newspaper comment, were asked by a Koreshan; nor that much of the agitation among the University students which finally caused the faculty to call a conference, was induced by the Koreshan street propaganda during the past two years.

THE FLAMING SWORD has maintained that the political primaries generally begin with the saloon element, and that local politics is flavored with whiskey. A striking proof of this appeared in an edition of the Chicago Record this week, which heads a radical expose, as follows: "Organized in a saloon; New Harrison Club is Born; Mayor's supporters in the 14th Ward meet in a Gambling Resort and pledge their Faith." The graduates of the gambling schools are boodlers!

The students of the great Chicago University have begun the work of hazing the professors; the instruments of torture are the puzzling, harassing questions concerning modern science and the Bible, which the members of the faculty are wholly unable to answer. They are now feeling the effect of the students' higher criticism!

The numerous conflicting opinions extant in the world evince the fact that reason is one of the lost arts. Koreshanity is the restoration of rational thinking; the structured System is the logical building of the substances of all truth, in the discrete degree of divine architecture.

Prof. Harper asserts that he would not advise teaching higher criticism to children, because confusion might result; and adds that "there is danger in accepting some truths too quickly." We think, however, that the danger lies in not accepting truth at all!

If the world were not hollow we could not live in it; the earth is inhabitable because it is a cell. No sane mind for a moment believes that humanity exists outside of the universe; we are within the spheres which produce the rhythmic harmony of Nature.

Koreshanity is as much opposed to modern interpretations of the Bible by the clergymen, as it is opposed to the interpretations of Nature by the scientists.

The will is the altar of love; its mental expression is philosophy. The intellect is the throne of wisdom, which ultimates in the truths of science.

Mental laziness dwarfs the intellect; but nothing is gained by being intellectually active in following modern mental will-o'-the-wisps.

The figure which the modern man desires to cut in the world is the figure that stands next to the dollar mark.

The common desire of the modern mind to be original, has produced a multitude of original absurdities!

Twelve jurors and one judge constitute the unlucky thirteen which often grind the grist of injustice.

Evil and the devil are always in conjunction; no good ever exists without God.

The structure of the mortal man is haunted by all kinds of spirits and ghosts.

The world is lost until the time of the discovery of the goal of destiny.

Truth is of no use to the man who will not obey it.

Editorial Discussions and Miscellany.

THE EDITOR.

The Sower and the Seed.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—(1) One great difficulty I have in harmonizing Koreshanity with the Bible, is in the fact that the Scriptures (Matt. xiii: 37, 38) say that the Son of man is the sower; also that "the good seed are the children of the kingdom." You make the Son of man the seed. Kindly explain. (2) The Apostle Paul says that "our vile bodies" are to be changed "like unto His glorious body." What is His glorious body like?—A READER.

(1) There should not be the slightest difficulty in perceiving that the Koreshan Science of the character and purpose of the manifestation of Jesus the Messiah is not only absolutely true, but also in strictest harmony with the testimony of the Bible concerning him and his mission. But for the current fallacious theology of modern Christendom, the mind should reach correct conclusions naturally without argument or difficulty. One of the first things that the mind should comprehend concerning the divine manifestation of nineteen hundred years ago, is that he was the Seed-man. The Scriptures are emphatic in the declaration that He was the "promised seed." As Creator, He could be naught else than the involution of the world of man, the pole of its impression, the Seed of its perpetuity.

In view of the fact that He was the Seed, he said of himself: "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." Jesus came to be planted in humanity, that the harvest might come with its manifestation of 144,000 personalities just like himself—the Saviors who will stand on Mount Zion and sing the song of the redeemed. Did Jesus plant himself in the early church, or did he not? He demonstrated to his disciples where he was going; they ate the bread and drank the wine which symbolized his body and blood—indicative of the fact that they should appropriate him; and indeed, he promised that if he went away he would come into them and abide with them until the consummation of the age. Did He go into his disciples, or did he not? He declared himself to be the Truth; he was truth in concrete form; he was their life. Did they receive the truth—did they receive Him? Were they imbued with His power? Were they impelled by His energies? Were they vitalized by the germs of His life? If so, then Jesus went into them, as spirit into matter, as seed into the soil. If He did not, then he did not perform the work nor exercise the functions foretold by the prophets and declared by himself.

It is emphatically declared that Jesus was the Word of God; and that Word was God; that Word was the Seed, and that Seed was sown by himself, because the "Sower sows the Word" (Mark iv: 14, 15); and the Word was sown in different kinds of soil—in poor, thorny, and stony, as well as in good ground. The ground was the wills of the people; His own true followers constituted the "good ground." The seed was sown in His disciples; he did not sow the disciples, but he sowed himself in his disciples.

Then who were the "children of the kingdom"? They were the entities which the Lord involved; he was the door through which they passed from the Jewish to the Christian church, from the old age to the new. He contained the spirits of all who had died during the Jewish age looking for the coming of the Messiah; he sowed the "spirits of just men made perfect" through their attainment to immortality in himself—he was their resurrection; he sowed the "innumerable company of angels" which were involved in him; he sowed the entities of the church of the first-born which he Shepherded from the spiritual world—he sowed himself and all he contained and involved. He was the Shepherd who "gathered the lambs with his arm and carried them in his bosom"—not symbolically, but actually. Jesus sowed his own life; he sowed himself. He was the seminal essence of Deity; he was the Father's Seed, not the seed of the woman; for Jesus was the Serpent, upon whose head the heel of the woman was lifted in the betrayal of Jesus by Judas.

Jesus was the great Word, composed of many words or entities which make up the divine language. These words, the children of the kingdom which had progressed through the Jewish dispensation, were contained in the book of His generation, and were involved in him. When Jesus sowed himself, he sowed the entities which he involved; and "the children of the kingdom, were cast out into outer darkness" (Matt. viii: 12) as the cells of the seed are cast into the darkness and corruption of the soil. The way in which Jesus sowed himself was through the burning of his body and the dissemination of the energies resulting therefrom—the energies of his glorious body which impelled the church; these energies constituted the Holy Spirit, which went into the matrix of regeneration, the church. The sowing was at the beginning of the age; the development has been during the age; and the harvest is at the end of the age, which is at hand.

(2) The glorious body was the body which Jesus possessed nineteen hundred years ago; it was the immortal flesh of Deity; he was "God manifest in the flesh;" he was "the fulness of the Godhead bodily." That body was broken up as the Bread of Life, and disseminated to his following; and then his body became the church which received him. The product of His sowing will be the 144,000 personalities who, through processes of translation, will have their mortal, corrupt, and vile bodies changed "like unto his glorious body" of the original Seed, on exactly the same principle that the seed which enters the soil and there dies, multiplies itself in the harvest, and produces other seeds just like itself.

Modern Astronomy Refuted.

Synopsis of Rev. E. M. Castle's Second Lecture on Koreshanity at Springfield, Mass.

The primary assumption of the Copernican system of astronomy as of the Ptolemaic and the Tychonic, is that the earth's surface is convex, because it appears so. We maintain that an assumption predicated upon an optical illusion is not sufficient for the establishment of a rational conviction. The secondary assumption of the Copernican system is that the earth rotates upon its axis and revolves about the sun. There is no direct evidence whatever, either from appearance or otherwise, to support this second assumption. Upon these two assumptions rests the entire theory. The distance and size of the sun are estimated from these assumptions; the distances and magnitudes of the planets, and of the stars also. It is well known to those familiar with the history of the subject, that the present popular theory was not developed from demonstrated premises.

These assumptions have determined the course of scientific investigation, but have not themselves been supported by any specific demonstration. From them have originated fallacious theories of light and heat, and false conceptions of physical laws; and they have provided a false foundation for modern geodetic operations. Scientific apparatus are constructed and used in conformity to the earth's assumed convexity, and to the added assumption that a ray of light is rectilinear and vision virtually illimitable; and then these instruments are used in a vain effort to support the premises which determined their very construction and method of employment.

The premises of the Koreshan System of Cosmogony cannot be judged from any conceptions founded upon the unproven premises of modern astronomy. The conclusions of the Koreshan System regarding the sizes and distances and motions of the sun, moon, planets and stars, cannot be judged from either premise or conclusions of modern science. The logical soundness of a conclusion is tested by reference to its own premise. The certainty of a conclusion, however, must be determined by test of the premise itself—upon which the conclusion finally rests. If the premise be an assumption, the probability of the conclusion is merely the probability of the original assumption. If the premise be certain, the conclusion, if logical, is equally certain. If our premise, that the earth's surface is concave, is true, every logical mind must admit that the distances and magnitudes and motions of sun, moon, and stars must be calculated from the basis of concavity.

The major premise of the Koreshan System of Cosmogony is that the earth's surface is concave, determined by the relation of chord, radius, and arc, not in theoretical geometry, but in actual application to earth measurement. Its corollary is: A straight line extended at right angles from a perpendicular post will meet the surface of the earth at a distance proportionate to the height of the perpendicular. In determining the distances, magnitudes, and motions of sun, moon, and stars, the minor premise is from a knowledge of the operation of the true law of optics, not assumed from illusion, but established by proper demonstration. In determining function, the secondary premise is that the substances of matter and spirit are persistently interchangeable. This is established not from such a partial consideration of fact as led to the acceptance of the modern theory of the indestructible atom, but by a full consideration of all facts involved in the so called chemical change, which Koreshan Science claims to be not chemical, but alchemical. From the demonstration of both the major premise and the minor premises, the System proceeds to its logical conclusions, and maintains its proposition that the universe we inhabit is persistent in perpetuity as to form and function, and that both are determined by the ripe human intellect.

A knowledge of the form and function of the physical cosmos, is the key to our knowledge of the laws of universal form and relative function; therefore, to our knowledge of the principles which must govern the organization of society into a righteous order.

The lecturer dealt in detail with the experiment of extending a straight line at right angles to a perpendicular, to determine the contour of the earth's surface, illustrating with charts and apparatus. The subject for the next lecture is "The Scientific Religion of Koreshanity." —Springfield Daily Union, Jan. 21, 1901.

The Shape of the Earth.

Editor of Baltimore Daily American Dreams Over a Soup Plate and Ridicules Koreshanity.

It has been many a day since Baltimore's amateur and professional astronomers have been so stirred up as they were by the publication in The American of a letter from a Chicago physician, who argues that this earth on which we live is not shaped like an orange, an apple, or a pumpkin, but like a saucer, a soup plate, or a chafing dish without the lid. [The earth is a hollow globe, 8,000 miles in diameter. The conclusion that Koreshanity teaches a soup-plate earth is perhaps as near the truth as the average editor of the daily press ever comes! [EDITOR FLAMING SWORD.] Right or wrong in his conclusion, the Western doctor declares that he can prove all he claims, and that his opinions are not the result of any guesswork, but established by a survey made three or four years ago on the West coast of Florida.

Now that coast of Florida is a very pleasant place to visit at some seasons of the year, but it is not easy to see how observations taken down there, even with the rectilineator, which the doctor declares was used, should have results just the opposite of observations taken in other parts of the world. But observers very often differ in their conclusions, and if the doctor and his followers choose to believe that the earth is the whole universe, and that the sun, moon, and stars are like pieces of ox-tail in the soup, he cannot be arrested for it nor tried before the court on the charge of attempting to overthrow the government. He will never be thrown into prison, as was Galileo, for intimating that the earth moved, nor will the thumbscrew be tried upon him to compel him to retract his novel doctrine.

Nevertheless, the Western promoter of a concave earth must not expect to be allowed to rest in peace or to have his theory remain unanswered. Already the astronomers are after him with very sharp sticks and very heavy clubs, and some of them have, through The American's Forum column, told the doctor exactly what they think of him. They pull all sorts of arguments upon him to show that he has guessed wrong, and that it is now high time for him to guess again. Though the majority of civilized people in this world have now reached the conclusion that this earth is pretty nearly round, and that it chases around the sun and forms but a mighty small part of this vast universe, yet the question is always open for discussion, and if the man in Chicago can prove to the world that it is wrong and he is right, the earth will have to be the whole universe, shaped like a soup plate and with the sun, moon, and planets all in the soup.

Respectful Reply to the Editorial by a Reformer and Reader of the Flaming Sword.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE American:—In your issue of January 21, you call attention to the Chicago physician—Dr. O. J. Ruth, a disciple of Dr. TEED, who maintains that we are living on the inside of a hollow globe, (not a soup plate,) rather than the outside of the earth. You also state that a large number of amateur and professional astronomers of this vicinity are disposed to dispose of the physician's theories in very short order. It would certainly form a great attraction if they were allowed to attempt to do so through the columns of The American; but, as this is perhaps impossible, can The American not kindly introduce them to the doctor and his paper?

The name of the Founder of Koreshanity is DR. CYRUS R. TEED. He calls himself the founder of the Koreshan System of Astronomy, as distinguished from the Copernican; and he is generally known among his followers as KORESH. In Chicago there is published every Friday a first-class paper called THE FLAMING SWORD, devoted to an exposition and defense of the Koreshan theories. It is ably edited by Prof. U. G. Morrow, assisted by a number of able contributors. I have been a reader of this paper for many years, and have seen both amateurs and professionals politely and scientifically replied to by the score.

DR. TEED commands the thoughtful and respectful attention of all who approach him. If he were more of an amusing crank, whole columns of leading papers would be devoted to him, as they are to Rev. John Alexander Dowie and others. DR. TEED aspires to be the greatest all-round reformer in the world, for, in addition to his astronomical controversies, he deems the political, the religious, and the educational status of the civilized nations utterly wrong, and his paper fearlessly points out the many indications of revolution that are looming up as a result. Truly, such men as he should be heard by the press, until they are either shamed into silence or advanced to a recognition of their merits.—FRANCIS B. LIVESSEY, Sykesville, Md.

Financial Intoxication.

Re-election of McKinley Causes Unprecedented Boom in Wall Street.

Since election day we have had a rich man's market in Wall street. There is no fiction about the statement that two or three great financial leaders, backed by a couple of great financial institutions, have had things pretty much their own way. It has been in their power to raise prices because they have been able to make far-reaching combinations among trans-continental and coal roads. I hear that they propose to continue this work in another direction by the practical combination of all the traction, electric, and gas companies in New York and vicinity. These great operators are not utterly unselfish; they labor because there is money in it, and, realizing that secrecy is essential to success, they give no hint to the public of what they intend to do until the work has been accomplished, and meanwhile they have taken every advantage that their special knowledge affords in operating in Wall street.

This week we have seen, under the stimulus of these gigantic operations, an unparalleled record on the stock exchange; 2,000,000 shares of stocks were sold in a single day, 650,000 shares in an hour, or at the rate of over 10,000 shares a minute. This one day's transactions would more than absorb all the January disbursements, aggregating over $150,000,000, regarding which so much was said at the close of last year, and upon the investment of which in Wall street so many hopes were hung.

There must be an end to all things, and when the great financial interests have worked the market in one direction they will be equally powerful if they choose to work it in the other. They can turn around at any day when they have closed out their lines of stocks, and, by calling in loans and raising the rates of interest, bring prices again to a level where there will be money in them for manipulators. We have had other eras of exploitation. This is not the first time that Reading has been advanced on the expectation of a combination. All remember the disastrous McLeod experiment of a few years ago. Nor is it the first time that Jersey Central and that shuttlecock of Wall street in the days of Jim Fisk, Erie, have been manipulated for an advance.

While such powerful manipulators are in control of the market, I do not advise the selling of stock short, and I certainly do not, at the present range of prices, advise purchases for investment. It may be a good market for a quick turn, but it is a dangerous market nevertheless. Many experienced investors are absolutely out of Wall street, and more than one has disposed of all his holdings of stocks and bonds, has put his cash in a bank or trust company, and is patiently waiting to make a profit of from ten to twenty five per cent, by buying on the decline, which must inevitably come before the close of the current year. Mr. Morosini, a Wall street veteran, says, "We are having a financial drunk."—JASPER, in Leslie's Weekly.

Demand for a Leader.

A Denver Editor Points to Prophecy and Concludes that a Messenger Must Reveal all Truth.

A lady of our acquaintance said some time ago: "We need a leader." Thinking that matter over, we find it in our way to agree with her. It is certain that the time is ripe for a general Messenger of truth to appear among men.

Another thing is certain, that has been commonly overlooked. It is the fact that each person follows some standard of thought, either conceived by and to suit the state of the person, or some proposition somebody else has made. Hence the people now in the flesh are each, separately, following some one else, or are under the influence of notions that have prevailed before. The human does not live that has an idea that did not exist in human minds ages ago.

All of the great discoveries so called, are concerning things that were known in past ages. Wireless telegraphy, alchemy, re-embodiment or transmigration, the unitive system (as opposed to the competitive), reincarnation, immortality in the flesh, celibacy, psychology, and so on, are things now just recurring to the minds of the moderns. These things have been forgotten by the mass of men.

Personally, we claim that the Bible is true—that it only needs scientific interpretation. It is a sealed book to the great mass, and is almost universally misjudged. We know the time is ripe for another Messenger of truth—one who knows the whole meaning of the Scriptures—a later one than Swedenborg, who we claim was a quasi Messiah—a Messiah in nearly perfect measure to the spiritual world (the spiritual world being in the human brain). The great Seer named gave the Scriptures interpretation in the spiritual sense, and suggested the celestial sense. But he did not compass the matter in the literal sense. That was left for one who should appear about 150 years later. To bring down the Bible in the literal sense, is to make it known and applicable in the third degree, which of course is the scientific degree.

According to Scriptures, there is to come a Messenger (Malachi 3: 1-3). This Messenger is Elijah the prophet (Malachi 4: 5). We claim that this prophet and the next (seventh) Messiah are identical, and that the name of the Messenger of truth for this age will be or is CYRUS (Isaiah 44: 28 and 45: 1-4); and when he comes, whoever he is, he will necessarily be in possession of the fundamentals of all truth, strange as it may seem to the average man.—The Interpreter, Denver, Colo.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.—The cover on February number is illumined by a beautiful color reproduction of Trumbull's "Surrender of Burgoyne." This Midwinter number is unusually fine, opening with a splendid description and illustrations of the Pan-American Exposition. Two interesting articles are concerning caison sinking and Lake fishing—both illustrated; an American Artist Abroad is embellished with beautiful reproductions of Ridgway Knight's paintings near Paris. Grandsir's Charge is a story of the American Revolution; while Martena's Cu'yus Ways is a story of the Negro South. The serial, Hazard of Hearts, ends with this number; and a new serial, The Road to Frontenac, begins in the March number. 10 cents per copy. 141-147 Fifth ave., New York City.

Leslie's Weekly.—The current issue of this popular weekly is of special interest because it is a revelation of the possibilities of illustrated journalism, and deserves to be chronicled because of the fact that two days after the death of Queen Victoria, Leslie's Weekly appeared with a special "Victorian Number," filled with beautiful full-page, double-page, and smaller illustrations of the leading incidents in the career of the late Queen and her son, the new King Edward. The letter press is full of beautiful tributes to the Queen, and a review of the Victorian era and its wonderful accomplishments. The whole number is a very creditable piece of work. 10 cents per copy. At news-stands, or from The Judge Company, 110 Fifth ave., New York City.

Mind.—This is a leading publication of the new thought school of mental science. The February issue opens with a discussion of the question, Did Christ teach a new Religion? by a Hindu apostle of the Vedanta. Twentieth Century Wraps.

These novel Wraps are becoming very popular, and the demand for them still continues. They are made of Shetland flax, hand-crocheted by our own people, and are light, airy, and beautiful.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

Prices:—Plain Wraps, $2.50; silk-edged, $3.00.

Liberal Discount to Agents.

We are prepared to fill all mail orders promptly. The receipts are applied to assist in the maintenance of the Koreshan Home. Address Secretary Home Industry, 99th st. and Oak ave., Chicago, Ill.

New Departments

Bureau of Equitable Commerce, of the Koreshan Unity.

Under the Koreshan System of Co-operation, the cost of production is reduced to the minimum; and we offer to our friends more goods and more work for a given sum of money than can be obtained in the competitive world. We have established four new departments to our work. Orders promptly filled by mail or express. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

Our High-Grade, Hand-Finished Razor Strops.

A good strop is indispensable to one that uses a razor. A good razor is of little use unless it has a fine edge, and that cannot be obtained in any other way than with a good strop and a knowledge of how to use the same and keep it in condition. A strop in poor shape means a razor in poor condition. Full directions with every strop.

We manufacture our celebrated High-Grade Razor Strops, the best strops manufactured. If you shave, you need one; you would be delighted with one of these. The prices are low considering the superior quality of the goods and workmanship.

Single, horse-hide, 50c. Double swine shell and canvas, several grades, from 75c to $1.25. Extra fine material and finish, $1.50. Packed in neat box. Also strops at 10c., 25c., and 40c.—send 8c. for postage on orders less than 50c. Mail orders a specialty.

The Literature of Koreshanity

Uncovers the Mystery of Ages.

THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A glimpse of Koreshan Universology, in its application to human thought and life, preparatory to the establishment of the Social Theocratic System, called the Kingdom of God, may be obtained by a careful study of fundamental principles.

The Cellular Cosmogony or Koreshan Astronomy.

* SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DR. CYRUS R. TEED, OF CHICAGO. *
 The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, Theocracy, and Social Economy.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Incomparable Literature of the Bible.

The Hebrew and Christian Scriptures in Contrast with all other Literature of the World; Revelation of the Marvels of Existence and Mysteries of Ethnology.

THE BIBLE IS A COLUMN erected to the memory of transcendental literary genius. It is a marble shaft penetrating the heavens, resting on a pedestal of adamantine granite, carved in the eternal Rock, and grounded in the foundations of the everlasting hills. It has withstood the ravages of a hundred generations, and the storms of conflicting religions have beaten against this monumental tower of endurance, only to increase the luster of its exposures. Once, during the medieval ages, the inundation of the waters of religious bigotry and the fallacies which swept over the Christian world buried it beyond the ken of human vision; but as the waters of papal obscurity and supremacy were assuaged from off the earth, it arose, in all the majesty of ornate grandeur, effulgent in its glory. Before it infidelity, atheism, agnosticism, and the "higher criticism" stand appalled. Compared to all the best literature of the world, it is as illustrious as the noonday sun—shining in the zenith of his splendor and ruling the day—to the stars which twinkle in the gloom and radiant in the night.

Well has it been said, that if there had been no Bible there could have been no Milton! We might add, if there had been no Brobdingnagian effort to destroy its influence in the world, there would never have been the Liliputian Punch and Judy, fickle curiosity show like Robert Ingersoll. If once the human mind will penetrate the wondrous depths of prophetic and historic profundity and illimitable continuity of the Bible, contemplating the genius of the mentality which authorized and indited it, it could but exclaim: "It is the product of the Word of God; the Word of God is its genius; the Word of God is its Author.

If we ransack the pages of secular or profane history for the discovery of the origin and rise of ancient peoples, we find ourselves groping in the mazes of bewilderment, and floundering in the perplexing contradictions of historical uncertainties. After vain research, we are left to conjecture as to the sources of the great Eastern and Western civilizations. The historical records of the East or the West may drop us at the Indus or in the great basin of Mesopotamia, there to wander in the doubts of historical contradiction, but we may not lose ourselves in the wilderness of material and doubtful secular authority. The traditions of any people originating in the early bond of religious unity, where God and man constitute a fellowship, and where men are united in the continuity of that covenant, are a thousand-fold more reliable than the vagaries of the materialistic mind, whose ignorance of spiritual powers constitutes it but the merest figment of that mentality which finally fathoms the length, breadth, and depth of the wisdom of the universe.

Let us search and research, until we are left in despair for some satisfactory solution of the perplexing subject of the source of Babel's wondrous glory, the source of that profound civilization which, before her fall, exalted her to the heavens, in the altitude of her gorgeous magnificence. Whence, we may inquire, the splendor of the Accadians, the Erechians, the Calneans, who peopled that fertile vale of historic renown? We turn to that acme of oracular demonstration which, speaking in the tones of authority, declares unambiguously: "Cush [Ethiopia] begat Nimrod; he began to be a mighty hunter before Jehovah; and the beginning of his kingdom was Babel, and Erech, and Accad, and Calneh, in the land of Shinar." Nimrod was the son of Cush, the eldest son of Ham. He developed those peoples as Abraham propagated the Jewish race.

If we desire to inquire still further into the ancestry of this mighty Nimrod, who was the son of Ham, who was the son of Noah, we follow the same authority to Lamech, "which was the son of Methusaleh, which was the son of Enoch, which was the son of Jared, which was the son of Maleleel, which was the son of Cainan, which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." Wondrous conception,—that God, mighty Ruler of the universe, is the Man; overwhelming impulse to the human soul,—that the central star of Royalty, God of Gods, who hides himself within the environ of visible and sensual humanity, should arise at the set times of his perpetual cycles, in his own visible and tangible garb, in the personality of his visible Sonship; that in this Sonship he should reappear as the Jehovah, the veritable and only begotten; that he should incorporate in this only Begotten, all the attributes of the Godhead! The central Star of eternal glory, sitting on the throne of the universal humanity, deeply hidden beneath the obscurities of the natural and sensual race, perpetuates that throne and luminous consciousness by raising unto itself, from out the human race, the central and perfected Manhood. This is accomplished through successive incarnations, that through manifold experiences one personality, centrally developed, should embody all the attributes of Deity, and should be raised up the one heir to the central inheritance—the eternal Throne.

God Almighty extends the perpetuity of his throne by raising up a Son to sit down in the throne of his glory; the visible Son is absorbed into the invisible Godhood. The visible Son becomes the eternal and invisible God because the Jehovah, the express image of God's person, who is Jesus, the Son of God, is entered into the conjunctive unity of God and is one with him. Modern spiritualism, modern Buddhism, and that modern and veritable humbug—so called christian science, with all the other bubbles of opposition to the right of the Lord to the title of Logos, the Word of God, who in the beginning was the Word, the Word that was with God, the Word that was God, will be made to hang their heads in shame and obscurity; for when the whole world shall come to understand the Messianic law, the spiritual hells will be surcharged with christian scientists who deny the Lord Jesus, and with theosophists who do the same, and with spiritualists who, though they profess to be spiritually minded, constitute still another form of the rankest kind of materialism. These will all bring up, unless repentance intervenes, where Ingersoll is still proclaiming: "I do not know;" and where he still is willing to be taught that there is a spiritual world, if any one can be found able to prove it to him. Poor Ingersoll! he is now haranguing a throng of imbeciles with his agnosticism, in the spirit world, unconscious of the fact that he has left the world of matter.

If we touch upon any thread of this marvelous unity of intellectual consecution, we can unmistakably trace the individuality of its authorship. The Testaments, Old and New, are linked with the concatenation of Deific prescience. In Paul's letter to the Galatians, he took occasion to say: "It is written, that Abraham had two sons; the one by a bondmaid, the other by a free woman. But he who was of the bond woman was born after the flesh; but he of the free woman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the Mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children."

In this statement, Paul—under the illuminating influence of the Spirit of Truth—expressly iterates: Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia. Who, then, is Hagar? What is Mount Sinai? Abraham's first son was the offspring of the handmaid of Sarai; that she was a black descendant of Ham, there can be no doubt. This fact is apparent from a consideration of the character of the people who descended from this product of the flesh of sensuality; they were called Kedar, signifying black-skinned. As they were the direct descendants of Abraham, the Chaldean, if in union with a white woman, they would not have been a black people. They are called Arabs, from oreb, black; and this is the name for raven. The raven was their sacred bird. It was from this source, that is, from the Arabs or Orebs, the ravens, that Elijah was supplied with food on one occasion.

It will be remembered that Moses lived with this people forty years, after he slew the Egyptian; that he married the daughter of their high priest, and that for this breach of ethnological ethics Miriam, his sister, took him to special task for marrying a black woman. This people, it is declared, constitutes Mount Sinai in Arabia. Then what constitutes the relation of this mountain to the geographical elevation usually called the mountain? Which is the real mountain, the people, or the country to which the people gave its name? The descendants of Abraham through Hagar and Keturah, an Egyptian woman, coalesced in the production of the Midianites, the central tribe of the Arabians; and these people, the descendants of the sin of Abraham, were the apex of the Arabians—hence the mountain of Arabia. The Hebrew word sin signifies mire; the mire is the sensual flesh. It is for this reason that they were called Mount Sinai. They gave the name of Sinai to the country—the country did not give its name to them. Therefore, when we speak advisedly of Mount Sinai, whence came the law of God, we speak of this black people of whom it is said: "And Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was." This thick darkness was the people of Midian; this was the product of Hagar. This people unfolded that which, through Abraham's relation, Hagar had infolded. And thus Paul had the right to declare: "This Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia."

Whence came Arabia? Directly from Abraham through Hagar. Whence came Mahommedism? Directly from Abraham through this black channel, and from Jesus the Lord; for Mahommed derived his instructions, in the early history of his religious career, from the Christians in Syria, on the confines of Arabia, where they had been driven by their persecutors in Rome. This, then, is where Moses found the law. Did these ten principles, the fundamentals of the ten categories of the Jewish system, come through Shemitic or Hamitic lines? What shall we conclude? The Arabs were a Shemitic people, as having their inception in Abraham, but Hamitic, as having their inception in the black servant of Sarai. Through such an ethnic conjunction as this, came that force of character which developed that law of God upon which alone there is hope of immortal life. But what did Paul imply when he said: "This Agar * * answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children"? Here we must also inquire, what became of Mount Sinai?

We have said that this central tribe of the Arabians was the offspring of Abraham through Hagar, the black woman and handmaid of Sarai. A little further insight into Biblical history reveals the fact that this people was absorbed, at a very early date, into the Jewish race; that is, Israel swallowed the mountain.

"The Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou be gathered unto thy people. And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the Lord of Midian. Of every tribe a thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war. So there were delivered out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war. And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas, the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand. And they warred against the Midianites, as the Lord commanded Moses; and they slew all the males. And they slew the kings of Midian, besides the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian; Balaam also, the son of Beor, they slew with the sword.

And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle and all their flocks, and all their goods. And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles with fire. And they took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts. And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho. And Moses and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, went forth to meet them without the camp. And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the battle. And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved all the women alive? Behold, these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the Lord in the matter of Peor [female self prostitution], and there was a plague among the congregation of the Lord. Now therefore, kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man. But all the women children that have not known man, keep alive for yourselves. And do ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day."

Thus Midian, Mount Sinai, (utterly destroyed, excepting the thirty-two thousand female children preserved for the cohabitation of the children of Israel,) was transposed to Israel by the ethnic infiltration of this remnant of the central line of Hagar's posterity, which Paul declares to be Mount Sinai in Arabia; not Arabia the geographical location, but Arabia, the black descendants of Abraham. Mount Sinai is absorbed into Israel; therefore, wheresoever Israel is found, there will be found also Mount Sinai and the law of God.

While we have thus extolled the literary, historical, and prophetic character of the Bible, the greatest Book in the earth, we maintain that, supremely speaking it is not the Word of God. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life, and the life was the Light of men. And the Light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not. * * And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only Begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth." This is the Word of whom the Bible expressly declares.

We have but touched upon a mere trace of a simple line of the categories of this wondrous Book, but enough to show the continuity of thought pervading its marvelous intricacies, its historical perfection, and its chronological accuracy. It will remain a monument to the unity of that consciousness which actuated the instruments by which it was written and given to the world. When infidelity, atheism, agnosticism, and that ludicrous farce, the "higher criticism," shall have been relegated to the oblivion which they richly deserve, this monument to the glory of the Almighty and the excellency of his power, will remain to taunt these imbeciles when they lift their eyes in torment. When we hear a man defame the Bible or traduce its character, we say: "There stands the framework of what might have been a man; those are the outlines, there is the form, but the devil has scooped his brains. He can no longer penetrate the depths of the wondrous arcana of this great work. There remains the shell of a man. May God roast and pickle him for a thousand reincarnations, until he shall have learned again the rudiments of his own being, and may God finally bless and receive him."

God is supernatural; the Jehovah, the Lord through whom he operates supremely, is natural. God operates through natural and supernatural laws. The pneumatic and psychic phenomena of Deity are supremely above that spurious black and white magic which so extensively prevails, and by which the world is being deceived. That class of minds, God forgive them, that would place the Bible on the common footing, are dispossessed of any spiritual acumen; they belong to those who have fallen from the grace of God into the materialistic rubbish-box of recidivation. God Almighty preserved us from infidelity to his only begotten Son, from atheism, from Ingersollism, from the antichristian tendencies of modern spiritism, from theosophy, and from that crankiest of all the farces—antichristian christian science. For such preservation we thank the Most High. May God be praised!

Religious Bond of Organic Unity.

The World in Retrospect and Prospect; the British Empire and its Gracious Sovereign Queen; Channel of Transmission of the Leonie Power.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

THE UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE is a most unpopular theme. Any prediction in regard to the possibility of such a union is most unwelcome. Nor is it strange that these sentiments should prevail when the course of history is considered. The exactions and encroachments of a corrupt church and priesthood have been the most fruitful cause of war and trouble. It is in view of hard experience that the whole civilized world with few exceptions protests as the Filipinos now protest, that they have had enough of the friars and want a complete separation of church and state in the conduct of the public schools. Their complaint springs from the action of the Taft Philippine Commission in inaugurating a school system in which a part of the school day is turned over to the Roman Catholic orders.

The teachings of experience are important and cannot be disregarded; but the subject must be considered in its timic aspect. Experience must be supplemented by reason. The body of human experience as we know it from familiar records, covers but a short space in proportion to the length of the cycle defined by the precession of the equinoxes. The character of the epoch during which examples of the unity of church and state have proved so disastrous, must be taken into account. Does this period belong to the happiest age of man's development, when government and religion have reached their greatest perfection, or is it by general consent esteemed a decadent era?

All literature from the Hebrew to the mythologies of Greece and Rome, from the majestic words of Moses to the rhythmic lines of Shelley, contain both record and prophecy of a theocracy which once denoted and will again define the acme of progress. The delights and the blessedness of that far off period are set forth in the richest types and images of the Hebrew bards. Is it more reasonable to found judgment upon experience as limited to the past two thousand years, or upon records covering twelve times those years? The character of the age just closing must be decadent, because the pure spirit of the Lord Christ began to disintegrate as soon as it was planted as good seed in the church. The Catholic power as its subsequent receptacle held church and state together until the corruption was too far advanced to keep a semblance of organic unity.

The opportunity for historical retrospect afforded by the death of Queen Victoria, whose position among modern rulers has been unparalleled and who was in a peculiar manner the unifying power of the British empire, brings out some interesting points. Before her marriage, Victoria, stripped of all her titles, including that of heiress to the English throne, would have figured as plain Miss Guelph. But that name, simple as it appears, involves the history of a thousand years; it is one of the greatest import. Guelph, first a baptismal name, may be traced back to a line of Italian princes who flourished in the ninth century. Branches of the family emigrated to Germany two hundred years later. Wherever the name appears, it is the signal for conflict. The Guelphs or Welfen as it is in German, became the dukes of Bavaria and took up arms against the German emperors. It was in one of these contests between the Crown and Count Guelph, uncle and guardian of a certain prince called Henry the Lion, that the famous battle cry of the middle ages was first heard: "Strike for the Welfen! Strike for the Waibling!" Waiblingen being the name of an old estate belonging to the Hohenstaufens, the imperial line.

The feud was carried over into Italy, where the people were tired of the German yoke. The Pope took up the quarrel in favor of the Guelphs, and for four hundred years all Italy, nay, all central Europe was vexed by the wars of the Guelphs and the Ghibellines. The Papacy joined with the national party against the Imperial faction; so it came to be democracy represented by the church combined with the people, pitted against the aristocrats, the feudal rulers.

The Guelphs had to leave their German estates, and the grandson of Henry the Lion humbled himself before the crown. In return for this act of submission, Frederic II made him duke of Brunswick. How the house of Brunswick-Hanover came to be the reigning house of England after the flight of the Stuarts and the "Act of Accession" in 1689, is matter of history.

God speaks to the world in symbols. The physical cosmos, the Hebrew Bible, and the pages of history are all replete with symbolism. The world has been waiting till the mind that wrote should reappear to interpret the higher language. England is termed the British Lion; there are nine lions in her royal standard. Her ruling house is descended from Henry the Lion, of the line of Guelph. The lion transmits its life through its young, and Guelph or Welfen means a whelp. Is not the concurrence of terms more than accidental? Queen Victoria, who for over sixty years has occupied the throne of England, brought to a focus the spirit of the Germanic nations. She was a Guelph, the transmitter of one phase of the Leonic power which has come down by ethnic blending through the whole cycle from the house of Judah—a power which in another phase culminated in Jesus the heart of the Jewish nation. During Victoria's long and prosperous reign, England has come to be the greatest commercial power in the world, and the best representative of organic unity. According to Koreshan interpretation, the heart of the body being the center of collection and distribution, is the symbol of commercial power, hence the British Lion has constituted the heart of the race.

Inasmuch as the unity of church and state is to be accomplished in the United States, and commerce in the highest sense as pertaining to spiritual things, signifies the principle of vital exchange by which God and man are rebound, it is reasonable to conclude that the commercial force transmitted through Victoria Guelph, of England, our mother country, will at her death be transposed to America the "Lion's Whelp." There can be no conflict between a true religion and a righteous government. They are the constituents of organic unity, wherein mercy and truth will meet together and righteousness and peace will kiss each other. Thus the genuine Holy Alliance will be consummated.

By the famous compact signed at Paris in 1815, Russia, Germany, and Austria, subsequently joined by all the sovereigns of Europe, except the Pope and the English ruler, formed a hypocritical league ostensibly designed to promote peace and righteousness, but really intended to repress civil liberty and curtail the growing power of England. The culmination of commercial power during the reign of Victoria has been accomplished through greed, oppression, and tyranny. A study of historical factors during the past two centuries is a study of disruption and corruption incident to the church militant.

The natural mind is enmity against God. While Victoria, descendant of the Guelphs, conveyed an interior potency, Leonic in character, essential to the divine union to come, she transmitted through the outer mind those antithetical forces which have rendered the British empire the most powerful instrument of oppression throughout the political world.

In 1815, the same year in which the "Holy Alliance" was signed, the Prince Regent, afterward George IV of England, instituted an order of Knighthood known as the Guelphic order of Hanover, in honor of the Leonic founders of the house of Brunswick-Hanover. The insignia are a cross of gold, bearing a medallion whose red field carries a silver horse upon a green mound. The motto is "nec aspera terrent."

Here are the Koreshan colors, the red, green, and gold, with the cross—the great symbol of transmutation, and the emblem of the Christian dispensation as referring specifically to Jesus the Lion of the tribe of Judah, through whom God crossed himself with the human race, all associated with the white horse of purity, chastity, and restraint, the emblem of Koresh, the Messenger of the Covenant, the Shepherd from Joseph. It is a mystical emblem, sign, and token of the Holy Alliance between God and man—portent, moreover, of the union of England and America in the United States. Richard the Lion-hearted, who stood in the thick of the fight, appears in these last days in Sir Galahad the White Knight, whose courage no adversities daunt (nec aspera terrent) for he saith:

"My strength is as the strength of ten,
Because my heart is pure."

Through the office of chastity, mortality is swallowed up in Victory.

During the cycle of Mazzaroth and at the end of each division of the grand cycle, there is effected a reunity of God and man—God and man sup together. There are twelve of these suppers during the entire period. The final one of the twelve is now about to occur. This is indicated by the sign Aquarius, or water-carrier, the man with the pitcher in his hand. This can only be comprehended by a knowledge of symbolic language. Water is the symbol of scientifics. A pitcher implies the same, for it is the container of water. John the Revelator saw this sign when, in his vision on Patmos, he defined the angel standing in the sun [in illumination], who "cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God." The Lord's supper with his disciples was a portrayal of this coming and greatest event. As we now approach the grand consummation, we issue the call for the great gathering to the final supper; for it is the province of Koreshanity to feed the multitude. This can best be done by the inauguration of a gathering together of the elect from the four winds of heaven, upon the basis of a great industrial and economical system, involving the common ownership of all possessions; the equitable adjustment of labor; a regulated and judicious distribution of all the necessities of life, and adaptation of the benefits accruing from the invention of labor-saving machines and devices to the relief of the performer of uses, and in general a righteous administration of all the concerns of the Koreshan Commonwealth. To such an end we are devoting our lives. Our industrial system exists not in theory merely, but in actual application. It is yet in its infancy, but it stands upon its feet in the heart of Western activity, in the very midst of the turmoil of competition, and stemming the tide of active opposition and the intolerant persecutions of modern Christianity and "civilized" paganism.

The World's Excessive Waste and Want.

The Burdens of Luxury and Economy Imposed by the Competitive System; the Selfishness of the Vidual Man; the Germ of the New Order.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

ZENITH AND NADIR are as unlike as the two principles impulsing human activity. One is that which led the Savior to root his church primacy in community of interests; to nurture his incipient kingdom from the relinquished vidual hoarding, the common purse. The other has its parent in the tare-sowing in the church declining with the age; and if the modern Christian holds that his methods are agreeable to the Master he affects to follow, it is because the root of all evil has choked out the wholesome growths, and left the "children of God" behaving just like the devil!

Little considered is the waste of energy entailed by the system evoked and ordained in the darkness. In the domain of agriculture alone, the world comprising its boundary, there is an incalculable squandering of the energy of brain and of muscle through partitioning millions of fractions that should compose a unit. Fraction signifies to break; and the world of acres disjointed into separate holdings, is a bad break for humanity whether occupant or onlooker, for each fraction reflects upon the other.

One writer estimates that in the state of Indiana alone, these breaks in that which should be an intact domain, cultivated in the interest of all, entail an output of two hundred million dollars in erection of division fences. Fences would be a necessity under the communistic regime, but their extent would be a triflescarce worth consideration when set against the mileage of the Hoosier fences, which this writer says would span the earth at the equator fourteen times!

Consider the monstrous waste in one state alone, involved in producing fourteen times twenty-four thousand miles of needless structure;—needless from the example given by the Almighty. Multiply its cost, $200,000,000, the financial outlay made in the interest of the devil, by forty-five—the number of states in the Union, and the product is the snug little amount of $9,000,000,000, which would be much increased by taking into account our home territories and foreign accessions. And this leaves uncanvassed the drawbacks to human interests hatched by the competitive system, enclosed and punctuated by these fifteen million one hundred and twenty miles of tangible separation, the index to an intangible condition which only God can remove.

Nature expresses its aptitudes and inaptitudes in frank and practical fashion. From first to last it neither adds to nor withdraws from its initial statement. Not so fallen man: His lips pronounce love to the neighbor, his heart makes denial, and his hand as faithful witness, performs the mandates of his heart. Nature is a unit in action; man is one billion five hundred million times at cross purposes with himself. Warring with himself, warring with his kind, and warring with Nature, he tangles the skein of existence and drops it into the grave.

Vidually, man is sundered in twain: Masculoid and feminoid is he, pending the conjunction of his dismembered self: Then will he be male and female, created in the image and likeness of God. Societally broken and disorganized, the bountiful provisions of Nature pass unhusbanded, while the man grows less and less. He would submerge and suffocate himself in evil did God not stoop to his rescue; and thank God, we are come to the time of his stooping. Existing man, the half-structure falsely denominated the microcosm, will put on integrality—will become the infolded universe, harmonious in all relations, self-recreative, undying.

America was wont to express irritation at foreign sneers. It remained for that class of Americans best known abroad, to heap the essence of obloquy upon their nation, in reasoning upon the amount and price of the actual necessities to the wage slave's life. He who evolves the good things must involve them least. To the burden of excessive labor, he must add the burden of economy. Resolving the plutocratic mass into one man, and the laboring mass into another, the first virtually commands the second to rigid self-sacrifice, that he may reap of him more abundantly. Did we insinuate that foreign people take note of these things? God takes note, and to such estate he is sufficiently foreign. He declares that the laborer is worthy of his hire—higher estate.

Who dares say that divine government obtains in the earth today? Who dares assert that the hellish system springing from and nurtured by the cesspools of corruption is God-operative? The Christ disclaimed the divinity of the presiding powers in the words: "Thy kingdom come!" He relegated the reigning will to hades when he pronounced: "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

The kingdom has not progressed to evolution. It remains involved. Where? The Lord Jesus, who was in heaven while in the tangible form, said that the kingdom of heaven was within. "Know not ye [to the disciples] that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" The kingdom is still involved. The kernel of corn is involved in the blade and the stalk until its evolvment in the harvest, when it comes multiplied, the full corn in the ear. So will arise the Christ, the Seed-Man, the Kingdom of God sown in the race.

The physical world is not to be destroyed at the Lord's coming, but new heavens and a new earth are to be established. A new church is to be formed, wherein is not only acknowledged the truth that the Lord is God, but that as the Son in Jesus was conjoined to and made one with the invisible Father, so the Son in the resurrection—the new earth, the grand body, comprised of seven genera, the seven golden candlesticks, in coöperation as one man—will be conjoined to the visible Father, the Lord Christ. As Jesus is in the Father and the Father in him, so the church will be in Christ and he in it. God will be in man, not out of him. This conjunction will take place through the translation of the Lord's prophet.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE ROYAL PAGEANT of the funeral of Queen Victoria of England was one of the most magnificent and imposing in the history of the British empire or of the world; in many of its features it surpassed anything ever witnessed in modern times. The impressive splendor of the royal cortege which followed the body of Her Majesty to Windsor Castle, was viewed by 3,000,000 people; English cities and towns were draped in mourning; and flags were half mast on land and sea. Neptune and Mars contributed to the stupendous display; the naval and military forces of Britain were arrayed to do honor to the ruler of the world's greatest and most powerful civilized nation; and over fifty royalties—kings, emperors, and princes—followed the bier in the line of march to the Queen's chapel and castle. This great display was voluntary on the part of the nation; the people of England magnificently manifest their love for their royal head; they paid tribute to a royal mother, queen, and empress, whose long reign, from the world's point of view, was great and grand and good. Every candid mind, taking a broad view of the factors of world development and progress, must admit that personalities which exert such powerful influence as to sway the minds of millions and finally call forth such a magnificent display as witnessed in London, possess characters, the greatness of which is not artificial. The influence of Queen Victoria so thoroughly entered the minds of her millions of subjects that there should be no doubt in the thinking mind as to where the soul and spirit of the Queen are today. Where else should or could she be received than in the minds to which she gravitated by mental attraction? She has not departed from the world of human activity; her reception into the spiritual world of the English people was reflected in the pomp and display which did her honor in the external world. The charm of royalty is real; it is natural. The links of royal love unite peoples, make nations, and expand empires. The greatness of the Golden Age of the past was filled with the spirit of imperialism in the genuine love of genuine royalty—the spirit which Koreshanity today encourages and inculcates. The magnificent display in honor of the Queen should teach the world a lesson. What is there to honor outside of humanity? Reflect upon the fact that the world's greatest display of love is for man, and ask if modern royalty is not a reflex of the royalty of the Gods. The English people have manifest greater love for their imperial heads than the English church ever displayed for the mythical god it worships. Indicative of the profound love and respect of the English people for their Queen, we quote the significant words of Dr. A. Conan Doyle regarding the personality "to which 400,000,000 of us who dwell under the red crossed flag looked as the center of all things—the heart of our lives, our inspiration, our standard of duty, the dear mother of us all." The name of Victoria will be perpetuated through the centuries; the name will be contemporaneous with the coming peoples, because a new royal line must spring from the establishment of the divine Kingdom in the earth; and under the Name of the Imperial Head of the New Order the hearts of the world's millions will be united in the love of the Royalty of the Gods!

The question of changing human nature was discussed by Prof. Herron in his recent lecture at Chicago, under the head of "The World making Motive." He would change human nature by teaching ideals; by faith in human life; and by leading the people to believe that man contains already, latent forces of divinity which, when liberated by individual faith in present divine reality in men of all classes—"free and comrade sons of God" (but somehow, children of the devil in bondage!)—will bring the great day of the establishment of the divine kingdom. He acknowledges the fact that "the life of the world pivots itself upon tragedy;" and that "along the lines of tragedy do the great religions move, and in the tragedy of the cross historic Christianity centers itself." Yet Prof. Herron inconsistently declares his expectation that the religion of the new age may come without tragedy; that light, without the human Sun, may illumine darkness; and that peace and happiness may come without a storm to purify the atmosphere. He declares that "it may be that we are actually coming upon the time when the fraternization of the nations, with universal co-operation in production and distribution, and with free individuality for all men and all peoples, will be the only way out of the world-crisis. So full of heaven is our dust, so charged with Messianic forces is our social atmosphere, that it would seem as if the world-making motive of Jesus were about to liberate itself in combinations of faith for economic association and daring social adventure. And who dare say that the next great shock of civilization may not precipitate the revolution that is to disclose the kingdom of heaven and God? Who knows but what the hidden force of life and labor and history of the ages may suddenly come to its royal reign in human life?" Who, indeed, does know? Is it a man who would establish new Christianity without the Christ, and who sees Messianic forces while disregarding the laws of polarity? Prof. Herron would play Hamlet and leave Hamlet out; he would found a kingdom on the principles of democracy. He should at least be logical enough to conclude that when the force of life reveals itself in its "royal reign," man will see his Imperial Head as the Sun, Seed, and Savior of life involved in a central personality. Prof. Herron should seek to find the Pole of progress, the germ of the evolution of the New Order.

Rev. Hicks, the St. Louis astronomer and weather prophet, in enumerating, in his 1901 almanac, several things which have annoyed him in the past, observes that "representatives of the 'flat earth' and 'hollow earth' theories, to our satisfaction, if not disappeared from the world, have ceased to come this way." And again: "To our personal knowledge, a fairly large per cent of sensible people are ready to be convinced that the earth, after all, is not a ball 'swinging in the air', but a flat plane, with the Hindus turtle for a foundation. No one knows better than we, that all this will provoke a smile from the professional astronomers; the idea that we should descend into the depths of such simplicity out of consideration for the ignorance of the 'flat earth' and 'hollow earth' cranks, is of itself a mark of intellectual weakness and paucity of scientific dignity and knowledge, in the minds of the astronomical high priests, who care little for and do little to correct the ignorance and misconceptions of the masses on these subjects. But our face is set to popularize, in so far as may be possible, the handiwork of the great God, and nothing that can be said or done is too common or insignificant for our use, if it will only assist the minds of men, women, and children in their efforts to grasp the truth. While we are engaged in writing these very pages, we are receiving importunate letters asking us for facts and arguments, plainly stated, with which the writers may refute the contentions and correct the misconceptions of those who insist that 'the earth does stand still, while the sun, moon, and stars move around it.'" This is but a sample of the people's discontent and dissatisfaction with the old mass of scientific rubbish; and leaders of the astronomical world are helpless in the face of these difficulties, by virtue of the very fact that the premise of modern astronomy remains admittedly undemonstrated! We suggest to the St. Louis astronomer, that so far from the advocates of the Cellular Cosmogony waning in their influence, they are constantly increasing in numbers, because we are interested in the welfare and education of humanity in lines of the absolute truth of the Science of Being and Existence. The warfare has only begun; the astronomer will not be left in peace until his wisdom is turned backward and his knowledge made foolishness!

The present year promises to be a prosperous and successful year for Koreshanity; it has begun auspiciously, with greater activity in lines of Koreshan industries and propaganda. There is today a greater demand for literature and lectures on the great subjects of Koreshan Universology than ever before. Our literature is being scattered broadcast over the world; THE FLAMING SWORD increases in circulation continually, and openings for oral presentation of the System become more numerous. KORESH, the Founder of Koreshanity, is at present in Washington City, delivering a series of lectures, and interest at the national capital is marked; great success may be expected—no doubt the organization of a group of intellectual minds into a Campus of the Society Arch-Triumphant. Rev. E. M. Castle is in Springfield, Mass., lecturing to interested audiences, under the auspices of the Koreshan Investigating Society of that place. We congratulate our friends in the East—at Springfield, Lynn, and Boston—upon being so fortunate as to secure the services of so able a representative of Koreshanity. We are pleased to note that the attitude of the Springfield daily press is extremely favorable, publishing as it does weekly synopses of the lectures delivered. The progress of our work in New England is largely due to the untiring efforts of the President of the Branch Society, Mrs. Pluma Russell, and the Secretary, Mrs. M. L. Nutting, and other active members. Other Branch Societies continue to interest the people of their respective towns and cities. In Chicago, the Koreshans are actively engaged in promulgating Koreshan Science. Lectures are delivered at several different points in the city, aggregating eight meetings per week, conducted by Rev. Berthaldine, the Editor of THE FLAMING SWORD, and other speakers. Interest in Koreshanity is increasing everywhere. We are breaking down popular prejudice, modifying the tone of the daily press, and changing the attitude of the people; the ultimate sweeping success of Koreshanity is assured.

Modern science offers to the world an answer to the question, What is God?—a question which Christendom long ago gave up as one involving an impenetrable mystery. Fallacious conceptions that God is infinite, everywhere present—filling all space, have grown out of the ever expanding universe of modern astronomy; and now, throughout the civilized world, in all modern schools of theology, theosophical speculations, and mental science vagaries, God is conceived to be a finely diffused substance—mind without brains, occupying space. It is but a step from this conception to the latest "scientific" conclusion that ether is the only substance that possesses all the attributes of the popular incomprehensible God; indeed, it is expected that the conception of the ether god furnishes a basis of ultimate agreement and union of modern science and religion. But the "scientific" answer admittedly leaves the question as great a mystery as does theology, for the scientists are as ignorant of ether as the clergymen are ignorant of God; it is easy to suppose that the two great incomprehensibles are one and the same! The luminiferous ether which pervades all the space of the universe is purely physical energy, and belongs exclusively to the mineral kingdom. It is not a mental substance, but the most refined substance in the plane of the physical cosmos; it is neither infinite nor omniscient. While the religious and scientific world gropes in the worship of a purely physical energy, Koreshanity reveals the great fact that God Almighty exists in the world of humanity; and this conception is as far above the popular one, as the perfect man is above the mineral kingdom!

Bishop Thoburn announces his belief that the world will soon be swept by a great wave of imperialism, and tries his hand at prophesying concerning the destiny of nations. He considers that many significant things will result from the friendship of Emperor William and King Edward VII; that Austria will become a part of the German empire; that Germany will acquire possession of a portion of central Asia; that Russia has nearly reached the limit of its territorial expansion; and that the United States is the growing power of the twentieth century. He observes that the time of great empires is coming: The United States of North America; the United States of South America; the United States of Europe, which will not include England; The Russian empire; the empire of China; the empire of the Indies; the German empire; and last of all, a mighty empire in the islands of Australasia. The world's leading minds are expecting great things to develop during the present century; and there is a growing belief that the tendency of democracy is to division rather than to unity. The world during the next quarter of a century will witness many marvelous transformations in society and government. Koreshanity holds not only the prophetic keys to the future, but also the keys to the processes which will make nations and mold the destiny of empires!

There has been considerable discussion regarding the liquor traffic at Manila; many conflicting reports have been published, and opponents of the Administration have painted the picture as dark as Western credulity would admit. However, if current news concerning the official report of the Philippine commission is to be believed, considerable work has been done in the way of reducing the Philippine liquor traffic to some kind of order. At the time of American occupation, it is said that there were 214 licensed saloons in Manila, but the number has been reduced—there being only 108 licensed saloons on November 30, 1900. When the Americans captured Manila there were 4,000 shops selling native liquors, but this number has been reduced to 408 in two years, and measures put into operation to still further reduce the native traffic. After April 1, it is said that no liquors of any kind will be permitted to be sold on any of the principal streets and plazas. The effort of authorities to restrain the sale of intoxicants at Manila is commendable; but the same power that is able to reduce the number of saloons and shops, is able to abolish the traffic entirely. Why stop the effort because there are fewer saloons and shops now at Manila than under the Spanish rule?

"Better no college, better by far no institution of learning at all, than one subsidized by political influence or ruled by the selfish dominating hand of vested interests," is an utterance of Rev. Dr. White, of Chicago, in his radical address at the annual mid-continent congress of religion, on "The Social Obligations of Educational Institutions." He points out the dangers of liberal endowments of colleges and universities by the wealthy classes, and affirms that subsidized institutions necessarily mean coercion of the professors and the monopoly of the college in the interests of the millionaire—for his personal fame and satisfaction of insincere motives, if not for wealth. THE FLAMING SWORD has for years pointed out the evils which prevail in all the institutions of modern government, church, society, and education; and we are glad to hear Koreshan declarations echoed even by a few outspoken clergymen and reformers. Educational institutions today not only pervert and violate the principles of economy in the conduct of their affairs, but they also employ false methods of mental development and teach fallacious conceptions of human life and relations.

Democracy points to the fall of Rome, the fate of empire, as an example of the dangers of imperialism. It is true that the greatest nations that ever fell were empires; but it is also a striking fact that through imperialism, nations have reached the zenith of their glory. Rome was not greatest when it was a republic; the unity of that great power depended upon an imperial head, and the time came when Roman republicanism was abandoned, and the sweeping power of Roman civilization ultimated in the empire. The tendency of America today is toward imperialism; if not now openly in the political affairs of the nation, imperialism obtains in the planes of industry and commerce. The greatness of American greed obtains through consolidation of private interests and possessions of the money kings; while the coming greatness and glory of American liberty will obtain through the consolidation of the interests of the people in the maintenance of the orders of Social Theocracy or Divine Imperialism.

Another gigantic railway corporation is under way; the Southern Pacific is now under the control of the Vanderbilt-Gould trust, and it is reported that all lines are to be forced into the combine, in which six men own the controlling stock. These six men are now in position to rule in the industrial and commercial affairs of 70,000,000 people, and to demand whatever prices for transportation they desire; and the people, and even the laws of the government, are powerless against the force of acquired millions. A warning note is raised by Russell Sage against the combine—not from principle, but from fear of arousing the people—from fear that the nation is facing a crisis. THE FLAMING SWORD has uttered this warning for years; and the prophetic Finger of Koreshanity points to inevitable revolution.

The high church party in the church of England and the Episcopal church in America, enthusiastically advocates return to the doctrines and ritual taught and observed in the Catholic church previous to the ecclesiastical crisis in the time of Henry VIII. Such an effort to rehabilitate the doctrines of medievalism is the result of the observed startling fact that the church is at the very verge of the precipice, and safety is sought in retreat; but the church is hemmed in by forces which it cannot overcome. The fall is unavoidable—it is inevitable and rapid!

The celebration of the anniversary of great events, in which exceptional characters have figured conspicuously—the keeping of holidays in memory of Washington, Lincoln, and others honored because of their ability, fidelity, courage, and statesmanship—points to the great fact that not the people alone, but leaders and heroes face crises and make their powers felt in the settlement of great issues.

Higher critics wrote two sub heads for general division of Bible texts: Fact and fiction; when they erased the word fact, they supposed the entire Bible to be nothing but fiction. The scales employed by the higher critics in weighing the Bible are the theories of modern science; but Koreshanity proves that the scales are out of balance!

Messages and commands from Mars, the war god, will be received by the nations before Tesla reaches the planet Mars with electrical vibrations. When the Martian war god signals, the nations will enter the great conflict of world-wide revolution.

Both God and the devil wear human masks. This is the secret of the manifestation of good and evil in personality; the word person is from the Latin persona, which means mask.

Eloah is the Ego, while Jehovah is the Seed of the universal man; the one is the central spirit of consciousness, and the other is the central personality of the human world.

Absent treatments for success in business is a growing mental science fad; but the success of the faddists lies in catching suckers!

THE EDITOR.

The Creation of the Cosmos.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—(1) Has this world we live in always existed, or was it created? If not created, what was the need of a Creator? (2) Please give a solution of the following texts: "In my Father's house are many mansions." (3) "There are some eunuchs, which are so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which are made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake." The last part of this text seems to pervert natural law in order to obtain the heavenly kingdom.—S. E., Bangor, Me.

(1) The church is responsible for the misconception that at some time in the past the universe did not exist; and the modern mind is so thoroughly imbued with this idea that it cannot conceive of the necessity of a Creator if the universe is eternal. The ancients taught that the universe has always existed; and there are a few schools of thought today that hold to this conclusion, because it seems useful as an argument against the idea of the existence of the Creator. Strange as it may seem to some minds, Koreshanity teaches that the world we live in has always existed; that it was created; and that there is absolute necessity for the existence of the Creator.

This should be no more strange than the actual facts observable in Nature as we find it. No man can remember when wheat did not exist; but every rational mind knows that wheat perpetuates its life through specific functions of creation. Every sown seed is a creator; its kind of life could not be propagated without the seed. The same is true of all other planes and kingdoms of life. Creation in each domain is continuous and eternal; and the universe is eternal by virtue of the fact that it is continually being created.

The form and function of the physical cosmos are eternal. The shell of the earth has always been, and it has always contained what it contains today; but in order that it may exist, the processes of its creation must be continuous. Every kind of life produces its seed, and perpetuates itself through its seed; but the climax of all universal activity is in the production of the highest Seed—the involution of the whole, the Creator in humanity—from which all other kingdoms are impelled and renewed in the descent of life. The highest Seed is the perfect man; he is the highest Creator. He renews the life of the whole every 24,000 years; and the universe is eternal by virtue of the very fact that the propagation of the highest forces of creative impulse never ends.

(2) The Father's house is in humanity, for it is said: "God is in the generation of the righteous." Through the ages of mortality God dwells in human tents and tabernacles, while developing a portion of the race for construction into the magnificent Temple of immortal flesh. Jesus was the Tabernacle of the Temple; he was the archetype of the great completed Temple, or house of God, in which are many mansions. The many mansions are the 144,000 immortal personalities which are to appear in the world. In the bodies of their immortal flesh, the divine Egos and the hosts of angels will dwell. The Temple is the resurrected humanity; and each personality in that Temple is a mansion.

(3) Jesus belonged to the first of the three classes of eunuchs he mentioned; he was born above the plane of mortal propagation; he retained the elements of vitality in himself, and mentally appropriated the "hidden manna." The third class make themselves eunuchs in order to attain to immortal life. The process of overcoming sensuality is the process of making one's self a eunuch; it is the process by which the pineal gland is removed—the gland of copulation in the brain, through which the germs of reproduction are produced and descend into the body through sensual desire. This is no more a perversion of natural law, than the appropriation of wheat from the plane of the vegetable kingdom. Instead of sowing wheat, we may appropriate its substance into the domain of human life. Conservation of the substances of life, the retention of vitality in the mind for a higher purpose than that of begetting offspring, is not a perversion of law, but strictly in keeping with the laws of life, which demand that the life which is to be appropriated into a higher domain shall cease to propagate on its own plane.

Extinct Animal Species.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—In looking through Pearson's Magazine for December, I noted an article on prehistoric monsters, which suggested some questions I should like to have answered: (1) Have modern scientists read the geologic signs correctly? (2) If so, in what age did these monsters live, and what functions did they perform? (3) Were they contemporaneous with man? (4) Why do they not exist now? (5) Will the world ever be inhabited by such monsters again? (6) Have the wars now going on any direct connection with the flashes of light from Mars, which astronomers claim to have seen?—A. H. C., Staples, Minn.

(I) There is no more absurd fallacy promulgated today than that of modern geology. Geologists have neither read the evidences which exist in the formations they discover, nor correctly interpreted the processes of creation of the physical cosmos. Their division of the world into ages, extending from molten granite to the earth's present habitable condition, is absolutely false and unscientific. The earth was never more on fire at any period of its existence than it is today; it is continually burning. Geologic formations are going on now in the conglomerate mass of geologic earths beneath the surface.

(2) Various species of animals which are now extinct existed in ages preceding the present iron age—at a time when life was prolific, and when the descent of life from the human kingdom to the animal world was rapid. The evolution of the so called monsters was natural. The purpose they served in relation to the animal kingdom, corresponds in a measure to the purpose of the existence of the Sons of God in relation to the human world. It is noticeable that the genus of the perfect man and the "prehistoric animal" species are extinct. Reconstruction of the forms of these extinct animals by anatomists, is a reflex of the work of reconstruction of scientific doctrines, the bones of life, through the application of the perfect Science of Koreschan comparative anatomy.

(3) There never was a time when man did not exist; consequently, the extinct animals existed contemporaneously with man in past ages.

(4) The various species of animals that are now extinct, do not exist today because the heaped-up animal life gradually descended to other planes of the animal kingdom. They deteriorated, as even human races deteriorate and disappear.

(5) The appearance of these animals is periodic; their return is as inevitable in the future as was their existence ages ago. They will continue to appear in all great cycles of the future, as they have appeared in all great cycles of the past.

(6) We do not consider reports of observations of flashes of light on Mars sufficiently reliable to be credited as true. But there can be no direct relation between Martian phenomena and phenomena in the human world; whatever relation exists, is remote. However, it is reasonable that there may be phenomena observable on Mars, which corresponds to the phenomena of the Martian division of humanity, during the great and final crisis of war and revolution.

A Lesson in Economics.

A Writer in Frank Leslie's Aptly Illustrates the Basis of Modern Property Rights.

A British vessel was once cast away and totally wrecked upon a beautiful and fertile island in the Pacific, and all on board were lost save one man. The survivor, finding himself the sole inhabitant, did what Englishmen have always been in the habit of doing with islands they have discovered—took possession.

Having saved from the wreck a number of small arms with plenty of ammunition, a hammer and an axe, together with various other implements, he was provided with means for killing wild animals, catching fish, clearing land, and constructing for himself a comfortable habitation. Like Robinson Crusoe, he captured and domesticated a few wild goats.

Shortly after he had well established himself on the island, an American schooner foundered upon the same shore, with the loss of all except one man. As the schooner went down, the American swam for the shore. When he got his feet on the bottom and began wading toward land, the Englishman, seeing him, ran down to the shore with a gun, calling out, "Hold on there, you can't come ashore here. This island is my property."

Being unarmed, nearly exhausted, and with the water to his neck, the American was at the mercy of the Englishman; but he demanded: "By what right do you hold possession?"

The Englishman Declares His Rights.

"Oh," said the Englishman, "I was the first here, and that is a valid title to property throughout the world."

"Yes," said the American, "quite correct—that's true."

"Then you acknowledge the island to be mine?" said John Bull.

"Yes, I acknowledge the island to be yours."

John: "Very well, then. You can come ashore only on the condition that you will be my slave."

American: "No, indeed. I will not submit to any such thing. I am a free-born American citizen and—"

"Ne'er shall the sons of Columbia be slaves While the earth bears a plant or the sea rolls its waves."

The Englishman, taking in the situation and realizing that the acknowledgment of his title to the island was equivalent to an acceptance of the relation of master and slave, replied as follows:

"Oh, very well, very well, Samuel. I was not aware that you were a free-born American citizen. That makes a difference. You can come ashore with the understanding that you shall work for me to pay land rent, and to earn your board and keep." To this the American consented.

The next morning the Englishman called the American to him, saying, "Here, Samuel, clean and cook for my breakfast this fowl I have shot, and you can have the gizzard." The American was very indignant, and protested.

"Very well," said the Englishman, "the island is mine, the birds are mine, the gun is mine, and you have no rights here. You must either work for the price I am willing to pay, or go without eating and get off my land."

There was no alternative. The free-born American was obliged to submit and serve the Englishman for the compensation offered. Thereafter, he was allowed to have the giblets of every fowl he cooked, and the table refuse, to earn which he was constantly occupied from sunrise to sunset, tilling the soil, milking the goats, catching fish, and preparing the food.

He could not strike for higher wages, because the Englishman owned the land and held the guns. He had free choice to either put up with his treatment, or go back into the sea. According to the laws of title throughout the world, no one can deny the soundness of the Englishman's right to the island and everything on it. He was certainly under no more obligations to do anything in charity for the American than we all are in duty bound to provide for any unfortunate.

The American Wins by Conquest.

One day there was a revolution on the island. The American, finding the Englishman sitting under a tree, sound asleep, stole upon him, seized his gun and covered him with it. Awaking, Johnny Bull found himself looking into the muzzle of a gun. There was no alternative but unconditional surrender. The American had won the island by conquest. No one can deny the validity of his title. He had weighty grievances and good and sufficient reasons for rebellion, and was entitled to all the rights of a victor.

John, being a free-born Briton, protested against being enslaved. Samuel told him that he could call it anything he pleased. He said he would give John just enough to keep soul and body together, but he had no objection to his terming it either "Hard times and honest labor for small wages," or "Slavery." It amounted to the same thing, as he had learned by experience.

It should be stated that the American allowed the Englishman the right to vote, but it was distinctly understood that he should vote his way.

Commercial Ascendancy of the Three Jews.

A little later, three Jews were cast away upon the same island. They were unobserved until after they had made good their landing. They were fortunate enough to get ashore guns and ammunition for their own protection, with a considerable quantity of merchandise, before their vessel went down.

The American was now obliged to take the Englishman into equal partnership with him for mutual protection against the Jews. But the Jews, being by nature the most law-abiding and peace-loving of people, were much more inclined to barter than to fight, while Samuel and John were only too glad to sell a good portion of the island to the Jews in exchange for some clothes which they sorely needed.

It was then discovered that the only point where fresh water could be obtained was within the Jewish territory. With ever an eye to business, the Jews charged for the water. John and Samuel argued that it was absurd to place a price on water—that like the air, water should be free. But the Jews were able to show that rights to water must go with land rights, and that even the air is not free, except to him who has a right to stand upon the land under it. There could be no doubt that the Jews owned the water. They did not ask the Gentiles to take the water, but for what they chose to consume they must pay a fair price. The Gentiles, being forced to submit, offered to purchase the water with the fruits of their labor, or the produce of their land, but these the Hebrews did not need. They did need more land, and for this alone would they sell water. The Jews soon became the sole owners of the island. The Gentiles were then forced to pawn all their personal belongings for water, until the Jews became possessed of all the property upon the island.

Finally, Whose Was the Land?

It is undeniable that the Jews had a valid right to all they had acquired. There is no question about it. They had not even used force. They had not compelled the American or the Englishman to do anything except what they wished to do, and to obey laws common to all civilized society. They had furthermore been much more civil than either the American or Englishman had been before their arrival. The Jews were simply more prudent and better at a bargain—they were better business men than the Gentiles.

At this stage, we find the Englishman and the American existing on the property of the Jews without means of continuing their existence except through charity from the owners of the island. The Jews did not believe in slavery, and the American and Englishman were naturally opposed to it, both being free-born men. There was certain work which the Jews could give them, providing they could afford to do it for the wages offered. They would give the Gentiles a simple but sufficient diet, all the water they could drink, and the privilege of voting, but as there were three Jews and only two Gentiles, the enfranchisement of the latter was not a serious sacrifice to the property owners.

Under the same laws of justice, and according to the same reasoning upon which are based all rights to property in every civilized country in the world, we find upon this island the Jews in absolute but rightful possession, the American and Englishman naked and practically in slavery.

What is the moral? Whose was the land? —HUDSON MAXIM, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Religion of Koreshanity.

Subject of Third Lecture by Rev. R. M. Castle, at Springfield, Mass.

The third lecture of the Koreshan series, delivered last night in Memorial hall, dealt with the religion of the System. Rev. Castle, the speaker, said in part:

"Koreshanity includes both the science of life and its application. It calls itself universology because it deals with every department and phase of universal form and activity. In defining the primary cause of universal life, or motion, it links together religion and science. Within the physical, more accurately termed alchemico-organic, world, there resides the human world, or cosmos. These spheres, while distinct, are co-ordinately and interdependently one. The proximate cause of the motion of the alchemico-organic universe is the reciprocal interchange of energies antithetically generated at center and circumference of the great cosmic egg, which is a great electro-magnetic battery.

"The alchemico-organic half of the cosmos centers in the astral nucleus, from which the visible sun is a projection, as the positive pole of its energy, while the organo-vital half centers in the divine man, the bright and morning Star, whence originates voluntary redemptive and creative power.

"Koreshanity emphatically declares the doctrine of the unity of the personal God-head, as taught by Nature and Scripture, in opposition to the doctrine of tri-personality as held by both Catholic and Protestant churches. It further teaches that the law of the resurrection is the law of seed-sowing and harvest. As we look for the resurrection of the wheat where the seed is sown, so must we look for the resurrection of humanity where the seed is sown." —Springfield Daily Union, Jan. 28, 1901.

The Root of Modern Evil.

Men sacrifice Truth, deceive, rob, murder, and torture each other and the animals, all for material profit. The "Mark of the Beast" is upon all, whether they be connected with church, state or society.

Material profit sustains the errors of the church, the venality of the state, and the corruption of society. For material profit, the vivisector tortures animals, cuts up human beings, and injects deadly virus into their bodies; for material profit, the fur is torn off of living seals, feathers and wings are wrenched from living birds, and harmless animals are murdered in cold blood; for material profit, human beings are shut up in foul smelling tenements, without fresh air, and are goaded to work for a mere pittance until health and strength fail, and their neglected children, by the thousands, become the criminals that prey upon society; for material profit, food and drink are adulterated with things deleterious to health; for material profit, the "respectable" business man will condone any vice, any error, if it will but increase his gains; for material profit, innocent girlhood is not safe from the schemes of the purveyors for a lust-bound society; for material profit, the "holy state of matrimony" is made a sham and a farce, and undesired children are brought into the world to add to the number of its devils and fill its hells of crime and infamy; for material profit, men and women are ready to give up every spiritual attribute and descend to the hells of infamy in their own beings, rather than exalt Truth, Love, Justice, and Righteousness, if in doing so they must give up any of the hollow mockeries and hypocritical shams of a money-mad world.—World's Advance-Thought, Portland, Ore.

Uncovers the Mystery of Ages.

THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A glimpse of Koreshan Universology, in its application to human thought and life, preparatory to the establishment of the Social Theocratic System, called the Kingdom of God, may be obtained by a careful study of fundamental principles.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of universal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is enmeshed at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Word of God the Personality of Deity.

The Word Was Made Flesh and Dwelt Among Men; Absurd Doctrines of Christendom; Absolute Unity of the Godhead; the Greatest Character of the Ages.

IN A LATE NUMBER OF THE SWORD, we took occasion to express some of our views regarding what the Christian world calls the Word of God. We will supplement those comments in a further statement enunciating our views of the Word as derived from the Bible itself, and shall take occasion to exploit some of the misapprehensions of the theologians of modern Christianity, and to correct some of the errors into which the fallacious interpretations of the Bible have led the Christian world. Our own hopes of immortality are predicated upon our belief in, and obedience to the commands of the Lord, which contain the fundamental elements of use to God and the neighbor. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

The Lord Jesus is the Son of God, in a sense in which no other man is or can be the only Begotten. He came into the world when the sign Aries was just culminating its own constellation. This was an event which could not repeat itself in less than twenty-four thousand years, depending on the movement of the sign Aries on the ecliptic. His manifestation had been predicted by the prophets, and discovered by the wise men of the East on astrological data, the chronological accuracy of which proved to be absolutely without mistake or deviation. When the sign Aries fulfilled its transit across the constellation Aries, in the physical heavens, the sign Aries in the corresponding anthropotic domain had completed its fruition with the sons of men. Aries, the Ram of God, reached the point of the consummation of his function in the impregnation of the church of God, for that process of regeneration which shall terminate in the fruition of the Sons of God at the culmination of the Christian era, now at hand.

The Lord Jesus, the Christ of God, is the Word. Because he is the Word, the veritable Logos, language, the speech of Deity, we say that the Bible is not, per se, the Word of God. Of the Christ it is said: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. * * * And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." There are two specific points of doctrine to be derived from these enunciations. First, as God (as distinct from Lord), the Spirit, was made flesh; that is, as spirit was transformed to flesh, we must conclude that the Bible declares the law of transmutation—so far as the mutability of the spirit is concerned. God is Spirit; this Spirit was made flesh and dwelt among us. If language means anything, this doctrine is conspicuously clear. The only thing standing in the way of its comprehension, by the theologians, is the creedal pig-headedness of those who will not hear and see the truth. Now as God the Spirit was made flesh and dwelt among us, it is said of him: "All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made;" and also, that "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." "No man hath seen God [Spirit] at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him." This Son, which is the visible person, was declared to be in the bosom of the Father, who is invisible, in him, and in whom he, the visible Son, is.

Doctrine of Tri-Personality an Absurd Fallacy.

The first point of doctrine, then, is that spirit is convertible to matter; the second point of doctrine is, that the same God, who is invisible, is made visible in the Lord, who is the same in matter as he was previously in Spirit. We most emphatically declare on the authority of the Scriptures, that there are not three persons in the Godhead; and we challenge all the Doctors of Divinity and all theologians, to find one passage in the Bible that even suggests such an interpretation. The doctrine of the tri-personality of the Godhead is the doctrine of devils—unmitigated, unadorned, unmixed with truth. It is calculated to deceive the very elect, because given with the authority of the Roman Catholic church, and reiterated by the daughters of the old harlot, the so called Evangelical churches. Isaiah, the great prophet, whose authority ought to be worth as much as the modern theologian, has expressly declared the Lord Jesus to be, not only the Son of God, but the Father as well.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." If, as generally maintained by the church, this refers to Jesus, the Son of God, why does it not settle the question of the fulness of the Godhead in Jesus, the Son of God? Why does it not open the eyes of the world, blinded by that church of the medieval pago-Christian declension, to the comprehension of this much of the truth of God? The Lord was the visible and central point of the visible human race. The invisible God who was in him, was the invisible central point of the invisible human race; that is, the Christ, visible, was the nucleus or focal point of humanity, in its external manifestation; the Father in him, the Christ's own spirit, was the nucleus of the invisible human race. It is because of these facts, that we declare the Son of God to be the Son in the supreme sense—a sense in which no other can be such a Son until the Mazzarothic cycle fulfils itself again. This is why it is declared of Him, he is the "only begotten Son of God." We are glad to be able to place these statements before the world, in the face of the subtle and insinuating efforts to belittle the character of the God-Man by trying to lower him to an equality with the spurious mahatmas, swamis, and magicians of this degenerate age.

Absolute Unity of the Godhead.

The Lord Jesus is declared to be both Christ and Lord. This word Lord, in the Hebrew, is Jehovah, or Yaweh. Jehovah means the personal and visible manifestation, in contradistinction to Eloah, God the invisible. Jesus, meaning Saviour, was Jehovah; that is, Lord. To believe in Him is to confess him as the Lord God. Every man who denies that Jesus is God and the Creator of the universe, denies the Christ, and is therefore antichrist. The Old Testament declares that there is no Saviour but Jehovah. The New Testament declares that the Lord Jesus the Christ is the Saviour of the world. Christian science, so called, says there is no sin, no sickness, no death, therefore there is no need of a Saviour, and that the man Jesus is no more than any other man; therefore we say that "christian science" is one of the most unmistakable phases of antichrist that the devil has thus far projected into the world.

The very construction of the universe provides that there should be a central and polar point of perfection and fulness. The Bible declares such a point to exist in the heart of the human race, and that this point is the Son of God. We declare this Son of God to be the image of the invisible God; the Father whom Jesus declared to be in him, "the first-born of every creature; for by him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him and for him; and he is before all things, and by him all things consist, and he is the head of the body, the church." We quoted these passages once to a Baptist clergyman, and he responded: "You have a queer way of interpreting the Bible."

"No," we replied, "you have such a queer way of interpreting it, that when we read it you think that we are interpreting it."

A theoretical belief in Jesus is no belief at all. "If ye believe in me ye will keep my commandments." If a man says he believes, and is not struggling to obey the law of God, he has no assurance that he is in the way of salvation. There has been no keeping of the commandments in full, during the Christian dispensation; therefore, there has been no salvation. The law of reëmbodiment, culminating in the final reincarnation, is the law of the resurrection. This is the anastasis, the resurgam, the resurrection of the dead. The salvation of the race is in the resurrection of the dead at the end of the Christian era. "The good seed are the children of the kingdom; the field is the world [cosmos, church], and the harvest is the end of the [cosmos] world;" that is, the end of the age or dispensation. There is no fruit until the harvest at the end of the Christian age. We are now at that end.

It is for the reasons above stated, that we have had an age of mercy or grace, an age in which the world did not know the science of the law, nor had it the power to keep it. Men have been preserved (saved) in mortality, until the end. It is for this reason that Paul said: "Ye are saved by faith without the works of the law." The world did not know the law, and was saved by faith until the time of the end, when the law being known, man must work out his own salvation, God working in him. Blessed are they that do his commandments—not they who have faith.

Altitude and Magnitude of the God-Man.

Let us examine some of the ethical, sociological, and militant aspects of the greatness of the Son of God from a prophetic point of view. The morality of the Christian church was to decline to the end of the Christian dispensation. "That day shall not come, except there come a falling away first." What was to fall away—something not exalted? Or was the seed sown to fall into the ground and die? The Lord was the promised Seed; he was the Seed-man; he was planted in the church to fall, to take upon himself the sins of the world. "He was made to be sin." The Head of the church, with the church, fell as it was declared it should. But the church says He declared, "I will be with you, even to the end of the world." This is true; when the church fell, He fell with it just as he declared he would. He is with the church militant, he will arise in it Triumphant.

Jesus said, "I came to bring a sword." What has been and is the moral effect of this purpose as declared in His own unmistakable language? The greatest naval and military equipments the world has ever projected, mark the closing years of the Christian era. The potential energy of the Christ for declension, must be sufficient to compensate for his potential energy in his ascension. Was Jesus great? and if so, what are some of the factors of his magnitude? He was great in that he could distinguish between good and evil, conscious of the fact that he had arisen above the power of the law of sin. Knowing His own righteousness, he had the courage and strength of his convictions, and hesitated not to declare that he was the good Shepherd. He discriminated between his own righteousness and the unrighteousness of the world, even of that of his closest followers. He was great in that he had the courage to declare the distinction between himself and those who would cavil at his doctrines. "I am from above, ye are from beneath. I came forth from my Father, ye are of your father the devil, and the works of your father ye will do." He was great in that he knew by what law he should disappear from his disciples, in fulfilment of his own prediction: "It is expedient that I go away; if I go not away, the Comforter will not come to you; but if I go away I will send you the comforter: and when he the Spirit of truth shall come, he will guide you into all truth, and will bring to your remembrance all that I have said unto you, and will show you things to come." He was great in that he knew his possibilities for carrying out the laws of his theocrasis, his absorption into his God and into his people. He was great in that he could choose the only twelve men who could execute his will in receiving, first, his doctrine, and then in absorbing his life for the beginning of the new age. He was great in the fact that he knew that future generations would honor his name by dating the dispensation from his birth, and in the fact that there was potential energy enough in his constitution and character to compel the world to thus honor him. He was great in that he had the discrimination to choose the twelve men who, as grand marshals of his militant purpose, would have the courage to stem a world of opposition, and herald the Christian standard until it should take rank as the civilizing power of the world. He was great in that the world today is compelled (because he lived for only thirty years, but a boy) to say, on every legal document throughout Christendom, 1901—otherwise it is illegal. The Christian age began with Him; it will end with him. The world may condemn the tendencies of the Christian age, in what is called the Christian divisions of the world; it cannot deny its power either for good or evil.

The Most Wonderful Character of the Ages.

Christianity is the world power today. It is not the Christianity of the Christ and his immediate followers, but it is the Christianity of Christ's declension. It is the Christianity of the perversions of the greatest truth, of the greatest life. The love of uses to God and the neighbor actuated Him; the love of money, its perversion, is the ruling passion of Christendom today. It is the Christianity out of which shall arise the new Christ, and out of which shall arise the new church and new dispensation; a church which will honor Him in his resurrection, as he honored Moses in his resurrection. He was great in that he knew his unmerciful denunciation of the evils of sin in the people of his own nation and church, would bring down upon him the wrath of those who would deliver him up to death, and that this knowledge did not deter him from condemning the sins of omission and commission which brought his people under subjection to a foreign power and God's displeasure. He was greatest in that he knew of the law of Messianic power, through which he should plant himself in the race as the seminal essence of Deity, and by so doing would fulfil the injunction: "Increase and multiply and replenish the earth," by bringing forth the Sons of God, his own offspring, at the end of the age.

The Lord's real, wonderful greatness will be seen in the evolution of the new genus of men, neuter beings, about to unfold as the true Sons of Deity, the arch-natural race of men, product of his own absorption into the church which received him as the cloud which took him out of the sight of his disciples. He was great in that he knew the philosophy of the law of immortal life and had the force of character to obey it, and thus attain to immortality. His doctrines promulgated nearly two thousand years ago, founded upon the central religious conception, are now becoming the pronounced sentiments of social reformation. He was the most wonderful character of all the ages, because he was the Son of God, because he embodied all the attributes of Deity, and because he was the Lord God Almighty.

To all that believe in His name gives he power to become the Sons of God. This is because none will believe in His name who did not receive the Holy Spirit nineteen hundred years ago. The Holy Spirit was himself in spiritual dissolution. When the Holy Ghost was disseminated, the body of the Christ was broken and fed to his people; it was then they ate his flesh and drank his blood. From this the Sons of God, offspring of Deity, will mature at the end of the dispensation now closing. Those arising into this new-born life will not hesitate to confess their source and parentage. To believe in his name, as before stated, means not only to confess his Divinity, but to be obedient to his will and law. If the promise to give power to become the Sons of God is to be fulfilled, it is in order for us to inquire, What constitutes a Son of God? Is it possible for a man born in sin and shapen in iniquity, with the tendencies of the sensual flesh, to be transformed to the Sonship of the Eternal? Is it possible for a sinful man to be like the Son of God? "It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he appeareth we shall be like him." Do these promises mean anything? and if they do, what do they mean? Koreshanity comes with the scientific reply to all these questions.

Ascending and Descending Degrees of Divine Life.

The Son of God had an ascending and a descending life. In the ascending life of the Son, his consciousness was absorbed into the central consciousness of the invisible God. The external identity, which was the identity of the Son, became one with the invisible identity; thus the Son sat upon the throne of the Eternal. By the throne, we mean the intellectual part of the mentality; this is in contradistinction to the affectional part of the mentality, which is the altar. The throne and the altar are not outside of the human race, but constitute the invisible and visible point of the human race. It is by this regular and constant raising up of a central personality, and his absorption into the central consciousness, that the throne of God and his altar are made eternal and perpetual.

In the descent of the descending element of the life of God, God's animal nature passes down into the race for the process of regeneration; that is, for reproduction. It is of this ascending and descending life, that it is said: "Who knoweth the spirit of man [God] that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast [animal] that goeth downward to the earth?" In the descent of the animal life of God, the Divinity is planted in the race to die that it may regenerate and multiply the Sons of God. This absorption of the Son into the superconsciousness, that is, into the inner consciousness of the invisible Deity, does not invalidate the integralism of the consciousness thus absorbed; it rather strengthens the identity by conjoining the outer with the inner consciousness, making them one and indissoluble. In the Buddhistic philosophy, this is absorption into Nirvana. It is not understood by any of the modern, would-be interpreters of Buddhism.

By the Divinity or God, we mean the God-man—such as was manifest in the person of the Son nineteen hundred years ago. The Holy Ghost was a substantial Spirit, the result of the dissolution of the Lord's body. The descent of this Spirit was the descent of the Christ into the church. We reiterate: this was the seminal potency of Deity, and its implantation into the church was the sowing of the Word, which was the sowing of God. The sowing of God, in the descending life of the Christ, was the beginning of the process of regeneration of the Sons of God, a regeneration to be completed at the end of the age, when the fruition is complete. Those who stand now at the end of the age, are the same ones who stood at the beginning of the age. The resurrection is merely the reincarnation of those who were baptized at the beginning of the dispensation with the Holy Spirit, the impregnating potency of the Father, the begetting attribute of the Son of God. Jesus was the involved product of the whole humanity; the Sons of God begotten of the Christ will constitute the evolved product of the human race through Jesus the Christ and Lord.

The Manifestation of the Sons of God.

The Sons of God evolved from the one Son will also be absorbed, not, however, into the central ego, but into the order of Melchizedek; not into one consciousness, but into as many identities as there are identities to be absorbed. No consciousness is lost in this absorption. When these firstfruits are ripe for harvest, they do not increase the number of those who constitute the perfect cubical number of the solar realm, for this number can neither be increased nor diminished. The absorption of the firstfruits is merely the entrance of the natural lives, perfected in their order of development, taken into and appropriated and assimilated by the invisible Deities. It is in this way that the Sons of God are matured and gathered unto the Fathers, and thus put on the consciousness of the Gods. This is not accomplished merely by the exercise of the will. It will be accomplished through the office of Elijah the Prophet, the man ordained of God to baptize the world into the possibility of applying the law. It is by doing His commandments, not by the exercise of the mind or will, that immortality is attained.

Just about the time the set of idiots calling themselves the "higher critics" have gotten the Bible "fixed up" to their satisfaction, the human race will be called upon to witness the most consummate miracle the human mind has ever conceived. Those who think there are no supernatural laws, will be the most astonished lot of fools the world has ever made a laughing-stock of, since divine operations were transformed, by these wise idiots, into myths. We may believe on His name, and thus believing, become the Sons of God in this world, in this present time, with this generation. The people who now live naturally as common people, may overcome death in the body and leave this world without dying, leaving nothing behind to be buried.

It cannot be done by the exercise of the will, but it can be done through obedience to the law of God. No man nor woman who continues to deny the Godhood of the Son of God, will ever become a Son of the Most High. The transformation will be accomplished by the dematerialization of the physical bodies now existing. The conflagration of the world is the electro-magnetic combustion of the physical bodies ready to enter the flame which the Flaming Sword will kindle.

The Grand Man or Macrocosmic Human World.

We have thus far defined Deity as both individual and personal. The personality is Jehovah, the Son of God; this is the Lord God, personally manifest as the Saviour of the world. Within this Jehovah is the invisible Eloah, God. This constitutes the central anthropic (human) star, Governor, Creator, and Director of the universe. Such is the prime central microcosm. From this central star radiate all the mental and psychic energies of the universal or Grand Man, man in the magnitude and fulness of the universe. This is the man in his greatest form and function—the macrocosm. The Grand Man, or man in his greatest magnitude, is constituted of myriads of entities in every degree and shade of ascending and descending stages—men progressive and retrogressive.

The heavens and the hells unite in the general visible human race. In the worlds (cosmic orders) which are invisible to the natural human race, there are heavens and hells innumerable, and hells terrible. But the hells are places of discipline, full of those experiences which conspire to develop through the incorporation of fallacies and evils, which must finally embrace all fallacies and evils to be brought into contrast with the true and the good. Through man's development in the hells, he comes to be the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. He then knows good and evil, and when he rejects the evil he becomes the fruit of the Tree of Life. The hells are as eternal as the heavens, but no consciousness remains eternally in hell. The hells are constantly made up of the wastes or the debris precipitated from the heavens. When once a consciousness has matured into Sonship, his absorption into an eternal entity consummates his final perfection and his eternal life. There is no further fall of this identity, but there is a fall (precipitation) of the wastes which accrue from the activities which are constant with every eternal mentality.

We have been prolix and reiterative in our emphasis of the Godhood of the Lord Jesus. We have urged this in reiteration, because we have had an experience of thirty years in confronting the dense stupidity and perversity of the human intellect and heart of the so called civilized world. We have made the contrast between the Son of God and all other great teachers; we hope, in an impressive way, that the comparison may be so great as to distinguish the Son of God as preëminently above all the other teachers of the world. The contrast is immeasurable. The Son of God was glorified in the Father, and the Father was glorified in the Son.

Koreshanity the Literal Degree of the Word.

Koreshan theology differs radically from all other religions of the world. It has been said that our views of the Lord are identical with Swedenborgianism. Emanuel Swedenborg made, as he declared, an exposition of the spiritual "sense" of the Bible, which he called the Word. He did not pretend to make an exposition of the literal "sense," which is the scientific, but he did declare that the Word was in its fulness, in its holiness, and in its power in the literal "sense." When Swedenborg reached the knowledge that the Son of God was the Lord and the fulness of the Godhead bodily, he became frightened at what would be the logical results of his reasoning, and failed to reach the science of the literal degree of the Word. Jesus was the Son of God, according to his (Swedenborg's) illumination; but the highest possibility of the human race was the attainment of angelhood, into which the Lord could flow by the influx of love and wisdom from God. He failed to perceive that angelhood was not the highest attainment of the human race. He did not come into the illumination of the fact that, through the first begotten, many Sons would be regenerated, reproduced, from Jesus the Christ who was planted in the church, which was the Garden of Eden.

The world cannot be made alive until it is absolutely dead. The "old man of sin," though dying, is not dead; it is not dead so long as there remains anything to die, hence it cannot be made alive until "the old man" is killed. How shall "the old man" be killed? It shall be done by the Letter—the only thing that can kill. The Letter killeth, but the Spirit maketh alive. We will take the Letter, then, which is the two-edged sword, and by its science kill "the old man," that the Spirit can put in its work of consummating the resurrection of the dead when the letter has done the killing. There is no resurrection from the mortal (dying) state, but there can be a resurrection from the absolutely dead state. How shall we kill "the old man" by the Letter of the Word? We must take the law of God to him, wielded from its scientific exposition and aspect. Obey the law as scientifically expounded, and sensualism, selfishness, and all the evil tendencies of the mind, heart, soul, and body will be eradicated. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the Tree of Life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

The Sons of God will have life in themselves, as the Son of God had life in himself. That the final fruitage of humanity is eternal Sonship, Swedenborg failed to comprehend and realize. In this opening of the Literal Book of Life, Koreshanity differs most radically from Swedenborgianism, and the doctrines of the other churches have no comparison.

Poet's Greeting to the Coming Man.

EDWIN MARKHAM.

WE STAND here at the end of mighty years,
And a great wonder rushes on the heart,
While cities rose and blossomed into dust,
While shadowy lines of kings were blown to air—
What was the purpose brooding on the world
Through the large leisure of the centuries?
And what the end—failure or victory?

Lo, Man has laid his scepter on the stars,
And sent his spell upon the continents.
The heavens confess their secrets, and the stones,
Silent as God, publish their ministry.
Man calls the lightnings from their secret place
To crumple up the spaces of the world
And snatch the jewels from the flying hours.
The wild white smoking horses of the sea
Are startled by his thunders. The world powers Crowd around to be the lackeys of the King.

His hand has torn the veil of the great Law,
The Law that was made before the worlds—before
That far first whisper on the ancient deep,
The Law that swings Arcturus on the north,
And hurls the soul of man on the way.
But what avails, O builders of the world,
Unless ye build a safety for the soul?
Man has put harness on Leviathan,
And hooks in his incorrigible jaws.
And yet the perils of the street remain;
Out of the whirlwind of the cities rise

Lean hunger and the worm of misery;
The heartbreak and the cry of mortal tears.

* * *

But hark, thy bugles blowing on the peaks;
And hark, a murmur as of many feet;
The cry of captains, the divine alarm!
Look, the last Son of Time comes hurrying on—
The strong young Titan of Democracy;
With swinging step He takes the open road.
In love with the winds that beat his hairy breast,
Baring his sunburnt strength to all the world,
Then casts his eyes around with Jovian glance;
Searches the tracks of old tradition; scans
With rebel heart the books of pedigree;
Peers into the face of privilege and cries:
Why are you halting in the path of Man?
Is it your shoulder bears the human load?
Do you draw down the rains of the sweet heaven
And keep the green things growing?
Back to hell!

We know at last the future is secure:
God is descending from Eternity
And all things good and evil build the road.
Yes, down in the thick of things, the men of greed
Are thumping the inhospitable clay;
By wondrous toils the men without the dream
Are laying the foundation of the dream, the Kingdom of Fraternity foretold.

The Restoration of Man and Cosmos.

The Theme of the Poets and Philosophers of all Ages; Hope for the Coming of the Great World-Re-deemer; the Testimony of the Scriptures.

PROF. O. F. L'AMOREAUX, A. M., PH. D.

"THE TRAVELS OF CYRUS," a work by Chevalier Ramsay, in two small volumes, which lack but three and twenty years of being two centuries old, furnishes most of the matter for this article. We will begin with the most ancient authorities—the Chinese. The book called Uking, which means changes, speaks often of two heavens—a "primitive heaven" and a "posterior heaven." Of the first it is said: "All things were then in a happy state; everything was excellent; everything was good; all beings were perfect in their kind. In this happy age, heaven and earth employed their virtues conjointly to embellish nature. There was no jarring in the elements, no inclemency in the air. All things grew without labor, and universal fertility reigned everywhere. The active and the passive virtues conspired together without any effort or opposition to produce and perfect the universe."

In the books called King, or Sacred, it is said that "Whilst the first state of heaven lasted, a pure pleasure and perfect tranquility reigned over all nature. There were neither labor nor fatigue, nor crimes; nothing made opposition to the will of man."

Of the ancient Chinese philosophers, Tchonangse says: "That in the state of the first heaven, man was united inwardly to the supreme reason, and outwardly he practiced all the works of justice. The heart rejoiced in truth, and there was no mixture of falsehood. Then the four seasons of the year succeeded each other without confusion. There were no impetuous winds nor excessive rains. * * The five planets kept on their course without any equality. Nothing did harm to man, and man did harm to nothing; and universal amity and harmony reigned over all nations."

Of the fall from this first heaven, which the reader will plainly see was in earth, the philosopher Hoaninantse says: "The pillars of heaven were broken, the earth was shaken to its foundations. The heavens sunk lower toward the north; the sun, moon, and the stars changed their motions; the earth fell to pieces; the waters enclosed within its bosom burst forth with violence and overflowed it. The earth rebelling against heaven, the system of the universe was quite disordered; the sun was eclipsed; the planets altered their course, and the universal harmony was disturbed." Ventse and Lietse, much older writers, say of this fall from the first heaven: "The universal fertility of Nature degenerated into an ugly barrenness; the plants faded; the trees withered away. Nature, desolate and in mourning, refused to distribute her usual bounty. All creatures declared war against one another. Evils and crimes overflowed the face of the earth."

The book Likiky says all these evils arose "From man's despising the supreme monarch of the universe. He would needs dispute about truth and falsehood, and these disputes banished the eternal reason. He then fixed his looks on terrestrial objects and loved them to excess. Hence arose the passions, and he became gradually transformed into the objects he loved, and the celestial reason abandoned him entirely. This was the original source of all crimes, which drew after them all manner of evils sent by heaven for the punishment thereof." Ramsay says: "The same books speak of a time when everything is to be restored to its first splendor by the coming of a hero called Kiuntze, which signifies shepherd and prince, to whom they give likewise the names of the most Holy, the unrivaled Teacher, and the supreme Truth. He answers exactly to the Mithras of the Persians, the Orus of the Egyptians, the Mercury of the Greeks, and the Brahma of the Indians. The Chinese books speak likewise of the sufferings and conflicts of Kiuntze, just as the Assyrians do of the death of Adonis, who was to rise again to make men happy; and as the Greeks do of the labors and painful exploits of the son of Jupiter, who was to come down upon the earth." "In all these nations," says Ramsay, "the middle God, to whom they all gave the name Soter or Savior, was to put an end to crimes by his sufferings." The Indian sages teach that "souls are eternal emanations of the divine essence;" that they were originally in a state of purity and blessedness, but through sin were "thrown down into the bodies of men and beasts according to their several deserts."

Of the ancient Persians, Plutarch, as quoted by Ramsay, says that Zoroaster teaches that the supreme God Oromanzas made originally all things good, and men in a state of perfect happiness. "He created afterwards [in addition to the six created at first] four and twenty other genii and put them into an egg [by which the ancients meant the earth], but Arimanius and his genii pierced through the shining egg, and immediately evil was blended and compounded with good. But there will come a time appointed by fate, when Arimanius shall be destroyed and extirpated; the earth shall change its form, and become plane and even; and happy men shall have only one and the same life, language, and government." Of the Greeks, Plato said of this first earth, this garden of Eden, "That everything there was beautiful, harmonious, and transparent; fruits of an exquisite taste grew there naturally, and it was watered by rivers of nectar."

A Hebrew prophet declares that "The foundation of the whole law and all the prophecies is the idea of a nature, pure in its origin, corrupted by sin, and to be one day restored." To this agrees Isaiah: "Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; neither shall thy land any more be termed desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzibah, and thy land Beulah: for the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married." The new earth, soon to come, doubtless means, primarily, a new humanity, but its full meaning signifies a redeemed physical earth, in which the perfected humanity shall dwell.

Our author finds naturally, that the nearer a people lived to the time of the facts described, the more clearly do their writers set them forth. On this principle, the Chinese—being the oldest people—their writers more clearly describe that first "heaven"—earth, and the fall from its blissful state. Thus it seems that there are "traces that appear in all religions of a nature exalted, fallen, and to be repaired again by a divine Hero," says Ramsay. The same writer tells us that this Savior-Hero, as were all the other gods, was not another divinity, separate and distinct from the supreme God, but only a title of that god given to them while working in a given capacity. Apollo was not another god separate from Jupiter as the sun-god, dispensing light to the world. These names did not signify different gods, but separate attributes of one god.

In like manner, in the Bible, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost do not mean three separate persons—three Gods, but three attributes of one God. The Father has that name because of his power to beget the Sons of God; just as any father is such because of his power to beget sons. But the Father himself is a Son, in whom dwells a father; but the ordinary father, not yet having reached the perfection of his being, is not a perfect father—he has not within himself the power to produce from himself, a son. He is not, as the Adamic race was, male and female in one form. He is not a father in whom dwells the mother, as Jesus was—he being the Bridegroom in whom dwelt the Bride. Jesus was the perfected man in whom was the Father; hence, as he declared, he and that Father were, not two persons, but one; and that one contained the Bride, the Mother. Hence he was the "fulness of the Godhead bodily"—one personality, one God, not three, although he was called by three names: Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to which was added—by what he did, and will yet accomplish for men—Soter, Savior.

In accordance, then, with the belief of all ages and nations, the Bible teaches, and Koreshans declare, that there was an age of Saturn, a Golden Age, an Edenic state, in which men in earth walked with the Gods in a state of now inconceivable freedom and happiness; that in the course of a long time, because of the entrance of sin and ignorance, Eden was lost, and its indescribable bliss gave place to crimes and the degeneracy of man and the physical earth which we have today. Koreshans also declare that we are on the eve of the time when man will return to the blissful state from which he fell, by the intervention of a Man, a Hero, a Savior, who, although—according to prophecy—he will have another name, will not be another Hero-God, but the same one who came to the suffering earth nineteen hundred years ago. The earth, likewise, will be rejuvenated and redeemed from under the curse, and restored to its primeval condition; and will again bring forth its abundance for its redeemed and saved inhabitants. As men will lay down the implements of warfare, so the warring elements will subside, and there will be no more wrecking and destructive storms and cyclones.

Whence came these accordant records of the history of the world? Ancient writers say that ideas could never exist in the minds of men unless there had been at some time, a state of facts, the same or nearly such, from which they were derived. It is a fact often observed, that when a people decays, as in the case of Greece, the very soil and climate share the degeneracy. The present country of Attica, by no art or cunning of man, can be made to produce such people as it did in the age of Pericles. The restoration of man means also the restoration, the salvation, of the soil from which he will draw his substance. What is before us then, is a redeemed and perfected universe.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE FAILURE OF CHEMISTRY to solve the problems of the simplest substances in which life is manifest, demonstrates the fact that it is utterly incapable of solving the great problem of life itself; and until it can reveal what life is, chemistry cannot be rightfully termed a science. It is now on a par with modern astronomy and theology, helpless before critical inquiry, and defenseless in the face of bold attack upon its premises. It cannot be denied that the chemist has accomplished wonders; as the result of a long line of experimentation, he is enabled to create new substances and make new compounds, but he does not know the processes by which the results are obtained. Prof. Ira Remsen, in the chair of chemistry in Johns Hopkins University, has made some telling admissions in McClure's Magazine for February, 1901, in an article under the heading of "Unsolved Problems of Chemistry," in which he reveals the present status of the so called science, which many uninformed minds have considered as thoroughly established. The chemist, by processes of decomposition, has resolved material substances to "elements," beyond which he cannot go. This is the sum of all research in the field of chemistry; and then arises the question, "What is an element?" "To this question chemists are not able to give an answer. The relation of elements to one another, form one of the unsolved problems of chemistry," says Prof. Remsen. At the very outset, the chemist contends with an insurmountable barrier, beyond which he cannot go, except by mere speculation. In the article referred to, it is admitted that "Another unsolved problem of chemistry is that presented by the constituents of plants and animals;" the chemist does not know what chemical changes take place in substances appropriated and transformed to substances of organic matter. Starch is a mystery to him; sugar has baffled all authority; proteids and protoplasms are inexplicable from the standpoint of chemistry; and the atom is totally out of reach. "In fact, the atom is a great unsolved problem of chemistry. * * If the views held by the majority of chemists are true, the science of chemistry is the science of atoms;" but "the atom of today is a scientific abstraction." The modern atomic theory simply enables the mind to form some kind of conception of chemical changes, but the chemist does not know whether that conception is true or not. "He studies his substances before and after action. New substances are formed, and he concludes that the atoms have arranged themselves in different ways. What he knows is that new substances with new properties are formed. He knows this whether atoms are realities or not; but the atom helps him to form a picture of what probably takes place throughout the masses with which he is dealing. The atoms are as far removed from the intellectual gaze of the chemist as the most remote star from the eye of the astronomer." Throughout the entire article, no mention is made of any relation existing between matter and energy. The chemist is blind to one half of the substances with which he deals, and is ignorant of the great fact that no chemical change is possible without requisite energies which have to do with the new materials created. Koreshan Alchemy solves the chemist's "unsolved problems" of material substances and their phenomena; it rests upon the demonstrated premise that matter is destructible, and that matter and energy are interconvertible, interdependent, and correlative. From first principles to last analyses, it has no missing links, no questions unanswered, no problems unsolved. It is the discovery and revelation of the secret of Life itself!

Ancient mythologies have been looked upon by the modern world as mere fables, degrees of truth couched in myths—popular and superstitious conceptions of theology. The common idea of myths has led minds to suppose that Jesus the Christ did not exist as a personality, but that the narratives contained in the New Testament are but the exaggerations of Oriental imagery. However, there are ample proofs extant that such a man as Jesus lived nineteen hundred years ago—a fact well attested not only in history but also by the very existence of a religious system, the name of which is derived from his Messianic title, the Christ. Egyptologists now maintain that the Egyptian deities were natural men and women; and Dr. Hogarth, one of the most famous and able archeologists, has reached the conclusion as a result of his researches, that "all of the ancient gods, it is now held, were once men; and their actual feats have only been decorated and magnified by tradition and imagination." The great Jove, known to the Greeks as Zeus, and to the Romans as Jupiter, Dr. Hogarth claims, as has also been traditionally held for thousands of years, was born on the island of Crete; and evidences have been discovered which, it is asserted, corroborate tradition. These very recently discovered evidences are by no means startling to the Koreshan, however much of a sensation they may create in religious and scientific circles; because Koreshanity teaches the great fact that not only were the gods of the ancients tangible beings, but that the greatest God of all, the Creator of the heavens and the earth, is Man! Koreshanity alone, of all systems extant, is capable of correctly interpreting the myths, traditions, and sacred books of the East.

The world stands amazed at the new billion dollar steel trust, the most formidable and gigantic corporation ever founded. The twentieth century begins with a new phase of the trust problem—in the heaping up and the heading up of forces in the world of industry and commerce, in the over-towering and over-powering forms of oppression! They are co-operative concerns in the stupendous scale; they embrace the elements of the colossal, the striding movements which hasten the end. The railroad trusts are pooling their issues, and combining their interests in the direction of the formation of one great concern which may control all the railroads of nations. It would be but a step to unite the railroad trust with all the great trusts which control the products of earth, and which employ the railroads for transportation—iron, coal, oil, and grain trusts—in the formation of the greatest commercial world-power. The gigantic evils are outstripping the elements of modern reform, and the end is bound to be revolution; for the forces of labor, upon which the gigantic concerns rest, constitute a stupendous volcano of discontent, which must, soon or later, revolt and shatter the very power which has grown out of them. The gigantic trusts portend, on the other hand, the aggregation of forces in that great climax of all progress—Koreshanity, the magnitude of which can only be seen by the world at large, in the magnitude of the reflex in the perverted orders of industry and commerce.

Millionaire Carnegie, the great steel magnate, has sold out, it has been reported, to the great steel trust, and now announces his intention of devoting his life to giving away the money he has accumulated. His proposed donations amount to about $1,000,000, a month, to be applied exclusively to libraries and church organs! What power is it that gives any man the right to take the products of the labor of tens of thousands of people for twenty-five or thirty years, and apply the proceeds where they can be of no use to the men who produced the wealth? It is not the power of justice! Libraries and pipe organs may serve as temporary monuments to a great pseudo philanthropist; but they do not constitute the proper reward for a quarter century's labor on the part of tens of thousands of people. If the $150,000,000 or more that is proposed to be devoted to a great scheme of perpetuating the memory of a magnate, were placed in a number of great and growing industries for the direct benefit of the people that have been robbed of their products, it would be a step in the direction of practical philanthropy; but as it is, where will Carnegie's vast fortune be in twenty five years from now? In worn-out books and second-hand organs!

The church is away behind the secular world in the matter of the formation of trusts. For a number of years, however, evangelical bodies have been discussing the feasibility of federating their forces, of forming a religious combine which should add to the power of the church; but little has been done. The idea is not that of union, but of federation, in which the different denominations may retain their peculiarities, doctrines, rituals, and organizations; and this would perhaps give the ecclesiastical optimists opportunity to prate about the unity of Christendom! The recent conference at Philadelphia, having for its object a national federation of churches and Christian workers, resulted in referring the whole question to a committee, with instructions to revise the entire plan. The spirit of the trust is in almost every department of the modern world; but there may not be force enough in the old church to effect anything startling in the line of extensive co-operation in promulgating its fallacies.

One says, "Anything that tends to create fear is false." Perhaps it is not "real," in the mind of the mental scientist; but a fall from a balloon, an approaching cyclone, a house on fire without means of escape, or a wrecking ship at sea, is fearful enough even for those who deny the existence of matter. Many false conceptions are employed to inspire fear—notably, the idea of eternal torture in an absurd hell, has been effective; but there is such a thing as employing misconceptions for the purpose of deadening the senses and dissipating fear of the consequences of disobedience to law. For instance: "The teachings of mental science alone places one beyond all fear—I know of no other schools of thought which do not tend to weaken character by some sort of terrorizing doctrine." This suggests the truth of the saying that "Devils rush in where angels fear to tread"!

Jesus developed a class-conscious people; he knew that they were above the masses, because they were able to recognize him as their leader and teacher; and because they did so, he gave them a mental impulse and spiritual power which distinguished them from all other peoples. Jesus drew the line between his disciples and those who had no sympathy with, nor power of recognition of him and his gospel. The Hebrews were a class conscious people; they were conscious of their importance as a great factor of progress; they alone, of all peoples of the earth, were chosen by the divine Mind to furnish the material for the weaving of the threads of destiny. A new class, a nucleus of humanity, is selected at the close of every dispensation to become the embodiment of the powers of progress in a succeeding age.

A Chicago physician announces that he has hit upon the idea that within a very short time it will be possible to transmit coal, after reducing it to a subtle yet substantial form, through the air on a wireless electric current, to be reduced at the place of destination to a solid, and to be sold as coal with the original qualities of the product dug from the mines. Such a feat would be a wonderful thing even to the people of the twentieth century; but we hazard the assertion that a still greater miracle will be required to convince the chemist that matter is destructible!

The society of the primitive Christians was communistic—that is, they had all things common. The word common is from com, together, and munis, serving. The members of that society loved and served one another, because the spirit of service pervaded the body. The absence of such service in the modern church is a demonstration of the fact that the original spirit which expressed itself in divine communism, is absent from Christendom!

The difference between the materialist and the christian scientist is that the one holds that nothing is real that is not material, while the other claims that nothing is real that is not spirit. Koreshanity maintains that both matter and spirit are real, substantial, and interconvertible; neither could exist without the other.

Even the great Temple of Deity is not exempt from burglary; there are minds which persist in climbing up some other way than by the front Door; but they are such as the Lord never knew by intimate conjunction—they are thieves and robbers!

The Almighty sows his seed in soil prepared, and reaps himself for the world's peace and happiness; the devil has sown to the wind, and is about to reap the whirlwind of revolution. The two harvests are at hand!

Theosophy teaches a mere theory of re-embodiment, not reincarnation; reincarnation is resurrection, the goal of destiny, the ultimate of all life and progress of a thousand successive re-embodiments.

Reincarnation and Immortality.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—(1) I think I understand the Koreshan idea of reincarnation (resurrection); but do I understand you to mean that the 144,000 Sons of God will some day be translated, as Jesus was, before they become immortalized in the flesh? (2) What virtue is there in the humble confession of Jesus the Christ as the Savior, by those who become "converted?" (3) Are any persons immortal now? (4) Is the Christ immortal? If so, where is he, and who is he? (5) Is the Messenger of the Covenant thought to be one of the 144,000, or is he a special Messenger, a new Messiah? and what will become of his body?—E. B. W.

(1) The immortal man is biune—that is, male and female in one form. The mortal man is vidual, divided; hence, in the processes of attainment to immortality, there must be an anatomical transformation; a nucleus of humanity, prepared to become immortal, must pass through the fires of theocrasis or translation, before they become immortal. It will require 288,000 viduals to supply the substances for materialization or manifestation of the Sons of God. The translation of this number is not many years hence. The 144,000 are finally absorbed into Nirvana; their ascending life becomes one with the central mind or consciousness of Deity; their descending life fertilizes or rejuvenates humanity.

(2) Under the ministration of the Apostles, the confession of Jesus the Christ as the Savior opened the mind to the influence of the Holy Spirit imparted by the Apostles. Today, it makes one receptive to whatever kind of a ghost pervades a particular church organization to which one has subjected himself in sympathy and belief.

(3) There are no immortal personalities in the world today. Everybody is mortal, and no one can become immortal until the resurrection, when a nucleus of humanity will rise above the mortal plane into the natural kingdom of the immortal flesh of Deity.

(4) Immortality obtains in the flesh. The flesh of the perfect man is divine, and he is male and female in one form. Jesus was immortal—not merely after his martyrdom, but he was born immortal. He was the Bread of Life, the material of which was his body; that body was broken up; the Shepherd was smitten, and the sheep—the entities which he had shepherded, were scattered into the viduals of the early church. He was the Seed sown; his ascending life entered the realm of eternal life, which is beyond the immortal state; while his descending life entered the external humanity and died, as every seed must die in order to reproduce itself. Jesus ceased to be immortal; he rose above that plane, and he fell below it; he was broken up and divided. The manifestation of the Sons of God is His resurrection, and when resurrected he will be, not one personality, but 144,000.

(5) The Messenger of the Covenant involves the 144,000 divine egos, which are the result of spiritual regeneration during the Christian dispensation, the amplification of the Fatherhood of Deity. The Messenger of the Covenant is the Messiah of this age; through his Messianic function, thousands will be baptized with the Messianic spirit, and the divine mind will come into conjunction with all sufficiently progressed to attain to the immortal state. The Messiah of this age will be theocrasised or translated as Jesus was. He is the great Overcomer, whose central spirit will inherit the throne of the Almighty, while the substance of his baptism will awaken and mature that which was sown in the race nineteen hundred years ago.

The God of Modern Science.

A "Scientist's" Conclusion that Ether is the Infinite Omnipotent and Eternal Deity.

It is believed by many that the existence of an infinite ether, which fills all space and permeates all matter in an unbroken continuity is merely a supposition of science. This, however, is an error. According to the highest scientific authority no man can today dispute the existence of this ether any more than he can dispute the existence of air.

The ether has been the field of much study, and much is known concerning it. In fact, physical science today declares concerning it:

(1) That it is INFINITE. "A perfectly continuous, subtle, incomprehensible substance, pervading all space."—Scientific definition.

(2) That it is OMNIPRESENT. This is the first essential attribute of this medium and will be found everywhere recognized by science and mathematically proved.

(3) That it is OMNIPOTENT. "We have now to try and realize the idea of a perfectly continuous, subtle, incomprehensible substance pervading all space and penetrating between the molecules of all ordinary matter which are embedded in it and connected with one another by its means. And we must regard it as the one universal medium by which all the actions between bodies are carried on."—Professor Lodge, lecture on the Ether.

"Electricity has been thought to be a form of energy. It has been shown to be a form of ether."—Professor Lodge. "Modern Views of Electricity." "We are ever in the presence of an infinite and eternal energy from which all things proceed."—Herbert Spencer.

Concludes that Ether is Omniscient!

(4) That it is OMNISCIENT. "Can we resist the conclusion that all motion is thought? Not that contradiction in terms, unconscious thought, but Living Thought. That all nature is the language of One in whom we live and move and have our being?"—Professor Fitzgerald, Dublin University, in a lecture on Electro-Magnetic Radiation. "Everything that is, is thought."—Amiel. "Matter comes out rather as a precipitate in the universal ether, determined by a mathematical necessity. The fountainhead of being and of action is pure Volition."—Dr. Mac-vickar.

(5) That it is ETERNAL. It is possible to imagine that planets and suns and stellar systems should disintegrate and disappear. But it is impossible to imagine that the substance filling all space should destroy itself or go elsewhere.

The parallel between the religious conception of God and the scientific knowledge of the ether is, however, even more complete. St. Paul says: "In Him ye live and move and have your being." Professor Lodge says: "We are to regard ourselves as living immersed in an infinite, all-permeating ocean of perfect incompressible liquid (or fluid) as fish live in the sea."

St. John says: "God is light." "In Him was life and the life was the light of men." Professor Lodge says: "But when we assert that the form of energy called light is undulatory we by no means intend to assert that anything whatever is moving up and down or that the motion, if we could see it, would be anything like what we are accustomed to see in the ocean. The kind of motion is unknown. We are not sure that there is anything like motion in the ordinary sense of the word."—"Modern Views on Electricity."

St. John says: "All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made." Von Hartmann says: "The whole world, in its context, is only a logical process; but in its existence, it is a continued act of will." The Messiah said: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

Proving the Existence of "a Something."

This parallelism in quotations, religious and scientific, might be continued indefinitely. It may thus be taken as obvious, and effortlessly so, that physical science has established the existence of a Something—a Something which is entirely its own discovery, which is Infinite, Omnipresent, Omnipotent, Omniscient and Eternal. It is unnecessary to say that this coincides with the religious definition of the Divine Creator except in one respect. St. John says: "God is love." The whole Christian message is the reiteration and emphasis of this fact. Now if it should appear that physical science has already broken ground in this domain also, it would be fair to expect that the parallel, and not only the parallel but also the absolute identity between the theological and the scientific positions, may one day become complete.

Lord Kelvin, one of the most venerated leaders in physical science, said, in an address to the British Association: "Nature is benevolent." In response to a letter from the writer of this, asking what he meant by that sentence, he wrote: "Read Paley's 'Natural Theology.'"

This is a quaint old book, written so many years ago that wherever it touches any science, botany for instance, its primitive position will seem almost humorous to modern minds. But it was not a scientific book, and did not assume to be. It was simply the effort of a gentle and highly observant mind to show the lavish benevolence of Nature to Man in every possible direction; the abundant provision of Nature not only for every human need, but also for all human joys and ecstasies as well. It clearly shows—and where it does not show it clearly suggests—that all human ills and all human miseries have been brought by man upon himself. That human happiness is natural. That human unhappiness is not natural, and must necessarily diminish toward an ultimate disappearance before the double advance of wisdom and of time.

Proposed Unity of Modern Science and Theology.

"Nature is benevolent." This is already the position of physical science. Lord Kelvin has stated the proposition; Paley has marked out the field; an army of eager workers are ready. It does not seem unreasonable to expect, therefore, that science at some future time may perhaps add another to its present declarations concerning the infinite ether and say:

(6) It is INFINITE LOVE. This will still leave unsolved the question of personality, the triune mystery of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. That is a quest which Religion and Science may undertake together. The Bible says of the Creator, exactly as science says of the ether: "INCOMPREHENSIBLE." But science can progress no further, there is no possible avenue of progress except that which lies in the study of its Something. And if the day ever comes when science, slow and sure, writes this last proposition upon the tablets of its laws, Science and Religion will on that day become one. DR. H. J. W. DAM, in Hearst's American.

Signal For Resurrection.

Rev. E. M. Castle Tells About Its Prophecy, Soon to Come to Pass.

Rev. E. M. Castle lectured on "The Covenants and the Prophecies," in her Koreshanite course in Memorial hall, [Springfield, Mass.] last evening. She said that the sign of the covenant, or conjunction, of God and man was the circumcision. The direct physiological influence of this rite was toward increase of the male progeny of the Hebrews. And, although the Hebrews were forbidden to marry the uncircumcised, and this prevented the women of the race marrying gentiles, it was not understood to be a bar against the intermarriage of gentile women by the men of the Hebrews. So Israel absorbed from the nations about her the race potency committed to woman; beginning with the Egyptian absorption through Joseph and his immediate posterity, and followed by the appropriation of the Midianite maidens, and later by the intermarriage of women from the nations of Canaan. It was this very feminine element, which, upon the revolt of the ten tribes, led to the religious defection of the Kingdom of Israel, and the abandonment of the rite of circumcision.

A careful consideration of the forty-ninth chapter of Genesis will disclose the key to the coming of the Christ at the end of the Christian era. The blessing upon Joseph there recorded has not yet been fulfilled, and unless Joseph's posterity still exists and can be identified, the prophecy is worthless, and with its failure the entire Scripture comes to naught. And the blessing upon Ephraim, the younger son of Joseph, contains the prophecy that his seed should become the fulness of the gentiles. It was further prophesied that the shepherd from Judah, Jesus, was to be united with the shepherd of the gentiles, to come of Joseph through Ephraim. The fulfilment of this is the signal for the resurrection. The prophecies point unmistakably to the present as the time; nor is the manner of the coming left in doubt. —Springfield Daily Union, Feb. 4, 1901.

We are pleased to announce that VICTORIA GRATIA, Pre-Eminent of the Koreshan Unity, is again with us at the Koreshan Homes after an absence of several weeks in Springfield, New York, and Washington, D. C.

Empires of the Future.

Bishop Thoburn's View of Age of Empire Reviewed by Editor of Chicago Record.

However opinions may differ as to the lines along which the world powers of the future are ultimately to divide, the general tendency pointed out by Bishop J. M. Thoburn in his address in this city Sunday is already widely recognized. The movement toward consolidation is as marked in the political world as in business. Surely and with increasing rapidity the few dominant powers are absorbing the lesser ones, and in the apportionment of that part of the world which has still to be brought under civilized rule the greater powers alone are the sharers. Soon or later the arbitrary "balance of power" which answered for the world during the latter part of the nineteenth century must be overthrown to come to equilibrium on a new basis.

The views of Bishop Thoburn, a close student of these tendencies, are novel and interesting. In the day when the world shall be divided among a few great empires, he prophesies, there will be a United States of North America and a United States of South America. There will also be an Australian empire. The old world will be divided among Russia; China, including eastern and central Asia; an Indian empire, consisting of southern Asia; a German empire, which will include the territory now held by Austria; the "United States of Europe, which will not include England," and the British empire. The bishop evidently believes that a strong Anglo-German understanding will be the factor enabling Germany to extend its control to the southwest and secure dominance in that part of central Asia now coveted by Russia.

Much of this would appear to be not unreasonable speculation, although many observers will be inclined to think that the bishop does not give sufficient importance to the enormous, overshadowing influence of Russia and the efforts which France and others of "the United States of Europe" would make to secure Russian aid in resisting aggressions upon their territory in Asia and in Africa. If there is anything in the widely accepted view that the Austro-Hungarian empire will fall asunder upon the death of the present emperor, Germany may take Austria, but Russia will have something to say as to the disposition of the rest of the territory. Bishop Thoburn also seems to overlook the possibility of a United States of South Africa. So far, however, as his remarks apply to the Americas and to the probability of a vast Russian empire and a powerful German empire, his remarks only point to certain tendencies which are now most obvious.—Chicago Record.

Increase in Suicides.

Some Facts and Problems at the Beginning of the Twentieth Century to Puzzle the Modern Mind.

Statistics continue to show a marked increase in the number of suicides in the United States from one decade to another. The greatest percentage of increase is in the large cities, but the tendency is noticeable throughout the country. Between 1870 and 1880 there were 461 suicides in Chicago. In the next ten years the number increased to 1,066, while in the decade that closed with 1899 there were 3,132 suicides in this city. New York shows a similar increase in the three decades, the three totals being 1,369, 2,063, and 3,508. This means that New York has had nearly one suicide daily in the last ten years, with Chicago not far behind.

The increase in suicides is considerably more rapid than the growth of population. In the last thirty years the suicides in fourteen large cities aggregated 28,563. In 1870 the ratio in these cities was 87 suicides to 1,000,000 persons, while in 1898 the ratio had increased to 205 in 1,000,000. The figures do not increase evenly from year to year, but there is a constant tendency to a larger ratio of suicides. Years of financial panics always bring an increase in self-destruction, and the figures never again drop so low as before. Thus the panic of 1873 caused a jump from 103 to 121 in the million. By 1892 the ratio had risen to 153, and the panic of 1893 forced it up to 185. In the last four years it has never dropped below this number, and, while the figures for 1900 are not yet at hand, it is safe to say they will show about 200 suicides in the million in these fourteen cities.

The country as a whole presents the same tendency. The total number of suicides during the year now closing was 6,755. In 1890 the cases reported throughout the nation averaged 42 to the million, while in 1900 they averaged 88. The suicides have increased more than 100 per cent, while the population has increased only about 20 per cent. Whether the cause is the rapid pace of American life, or a change in religious beliefs, or something else, it is a matter serious enough to demand the careful attention of sociological students.—Chicago Tribune.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

The Saturday Evening Post.—The issue for February 9, 1901, is a special double number, with covers in colors, and its articles finely illustrated. An important contribution is by Thos. B. Reed, on Orators and Oratory; while another, embellished with fine views of magnificent buildings in Washington City, is Our Cities in the Twentieth Century, by Henry B. Macfarland. We are much interested in the series of Letters from a Congressman's Wife; as well as in the usual editorial departments. The publishers of the Post, announce that in its issue of February 16, a dozen of the wealthiest capitalists in the country—men who wield absolute control over immense business enterprises—will tell why they remain in the race which they have already won. Each of them writes frankly whether he makes money for its own sake, for the sheer joy of working, or to gain the power with which vast capital invests itself. The Post is only 5 cents per copy; at news-stands.

Leslie's Weekly.—The recent numbers of this popular weekly are valuable as souvenirs of Queen Victoria. A good portion of the current issue is devoted to illustrations of the Queen's funeral, containing as it does, drawings of some of the impressive scenes. A full page illustrates the splendid sea pageant, and another shows the house of mourning at Cowes. Another feature of this number is a full page of cartoons of prominent statesmen at Washington. It is a most interesting and humorous page. 10 cents per copy; at news-stands, or from 110 Fifth avenue, New York City.

The Commoner.—We welcome to our desk the first three issues of Bryan's new publication, issued at Lincoln, Nebraska. It is an eight-page weekly containing almost wholly original matter from Bryan's pen. It is a digest of political affairs, and a review of current events. Bryan is as outspoken in this publication as he is on the platform, and thousands will welcome The Commoner. 75,000 copies were issued of the initial number, and the demand increases rapidly. $1.00 per year.

Electricity.—This is a large 24-page weekly, devoted to subjects related to discoveries and inventions in the field of electricity. Its lessons on electricity are alone worth more than the annual subscription, $2.50. Its contributions are by leading electricians. The editorial notes cover a wide field in small compass. 136 Liberty Street, New York City.

The Suggester and Thinker.—This publication has been reduced to magazine form, and is much improved in every way. It is devoted to the study and investigation of the power of suggestion and thought in the production and cure of diseases, habits, and vices. Its twelve departments are full of interest. $1.00 a year. Columbus, O.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Rational System of Koreshan Science.

Mistakes of Pseudo-Reformers and Their Futile Attacks on Koreshanity ; Sources of Pernicious Doctrines ; Modern Science Without a Proven Premise.

IT IS VERY AMUSING to watch the mental gymnastics of the acrobat of the Lucifer circus, in his attempts to exhibit the doctrines of Koreshan theology in contrast with Lucifer's hobby, "Motherhood in freedom." We do not object to any hobby that Lucifer or any other pseudo-reformer may undertake. We have never seen any very pronounced results toward the improvement of the race, on the lines laid down by the advocates of promiscuity in the application of the propagative law. We have never seen an argument founded on an established premise, put forth by the advocates of this effort to revolutionize the marital methods and systems of the world.

It is a rule with the Koreshan philosopher, to state and prove his premise. The first step must be defined and demonstrated before he argues any question. We do not know the premise of the advocates of this philosophy, first very publicly advocated by Victoria Woodhull. We ask for a statement of a premise, and then we demand that the premise be proven before we will accept the accuracy of a conclusion. It matters not what subject we argue; if we assume the premise, and reason logically to a conclusion, the conclusion is an assumption, equally with the initial guess. We mean by this, that if we guess at the first step in an argument, and reason perfectly, we guess at the conclusion. The Koreshan social system, its political system, its theological and propagative systems are all founded upon a primary and demonstrated premise. In confronting the so called "sciences," we meet no arguments because we meet the admission that the premise of the various "sciences" is an assumption; therefore we are not compelled to meet anything that may be called logic. What, then, do we confront in the opposition to our efforts to present Koreshanity to the world? Merely the consummate ignorance of agnosticism.

The material basis of the Koreshan System is found in the language of causation, as projected in the form and function of the physical universe. It is maintained by many of the pseudo-reformers of these modern times, that the surest means of obtaining the truth is by receding into the "silence," and receiving from within the truth that comes by intuition, or by esoteric processes. If it could be demonstrated that all who enter the "silence" derive the same character of inspiration, it would be at least one argument in its favor. But it is a fact, that no two persons who depend on intuition for the absolute truth, derive the same interpretations of the things they seek. Esoteric or intuitive methods for the discovery of the principles and forms of the exoteric world and its interests, are exceedingly vague, uncertain, and contradictory. We observe the things of material existence through the natural senses. Things are not as they appear, but there is a method of determining—from the true interpretation of facts—the realities of Nature. When our intuitions conflict with our senses, it may be laid down as a certainty that our intuitions are from inaccurate sources; and this statement may be relied upon, when it is known that the intuitions of different people are at utter variance.

Intuitions, or things derived by esoteric means, are the influxes of other minds—either externally or internally projected. Every mind in the universe is constantly the recipient of the thoughts of other minds. If the mind subjects itself to the intuitive influxes of other minds through self-hypnotism, or by receding into the “silence,” as it is called, or by putting itself into a negative state, other more positive mental forces flow in from the interiors of the stronger sources. Every person who subjects the self to the negative condition of this so called “silence,” derives an influx from some other mind, and intuitively believes what that other mind has foisted. The most pronounced difficulty of this esoteric or intuitive method of gaining knowledge, is that the intuitions of no two agree, and its sources are dubious. It will require but little observation to confirm this statement of fact. It may be very satisfactory to a lazy mind to assume the negative state and open itself to mental influxes which readily pass for spiritual experiences, but it is very dangerous, and a very uncertain way of obtaining knowledge.

True knowledge can only be gained through the correct interpretation of Nature, or through the subjection of the mind to the action of the very central Mind of the universe itself. The only method, in this day and age of the world, is to compare the inspiration with the interpretation of Nature; which is founded upon an exact demonstration of a material and natural premise. Esoteric and exoteric derivations of principles or doctrines must agree, and this agreement must be founded upon correct exoteric interpretations of Nature, as founded upon a primary demonstration. The Theology of the Koreshan System is predicated upon a demonstrated premise. The premise has been proven; it is safe, therefore, to logically proceed with the sequences of this first step in the argument to the final and logical conclusion. If in the examination of any man's philosophy we find it to disagree with our conclusions, it is not essential that we examine any part of it, for the reason that we have demonstrated our premise, reached a logical conclusion from our first and absolute demonstration, and finding the opponent's philosophy in disagreement, it is not worth while to give it any consideration.

So called “motherhood in freedom” as a means of perfecting or improving the race from the basis of the mortal and sensual nature, is contrary to every principle of a divinely-determined law. Motherhood in the mortal flesh can only result in mortal fruition, it matters not what the influence under which that propagation is effected. When Victoria Woodhull first publicly announced this pernicious doctrine, she supposed that she was under the spiritual control of an ancient spirit, Demosthenes, if we remember correctly; but the fact is, she was under the influence of Stephen Pearl Andrews' interior mental force. This, some call the subjective mind. When Victoria Woodhull lost the friendship of Andrews, she lost that source of her inspiration. Her doctrine on this question was identical with that of Stephen Pearl Andrews.

We quote from Lucifer: “With Mr. Stern, I confess to having the greatest respect for truth for its own sake, and hence I am wary of the teachings of those who follow science, not for truth's sake, but for some ulterior object, such as establishing a hierarchy, a theocracy, with some man or woman at its head.” It is barely possible that the publisher of Lucifer has failed to analyze his own motives in the promulgation of his hobbies. Lucifer continues: “And this seems just what the Koreshans are doing. To revive an old theocracy with a new order, a celibate order, of priests and priestesses; to rescue science and morals from the ‘infidel’ or ‘ungodly’ leaders, such as Darwin, Huxley, Spencer, Wallace, Buchner, et al, and restore mankind to its ‘Edenic’ condition—these are the objects of a sect that seems growing in numbers, almost rivaling that of the now famous John Alexander Dowie.”

Just before us is the Washington Sunday Times. Under the title, “Longevity of the Sun,” we find the following in confirmation of Lucifer's conception of “science,” as opposed to what Koreshanity is giving to the world:

The modern discovery of the conservation of energy has raised the question among scientists, of the period during which our sun has existed and may continue in the future to give us light and heat. The latest investigations upon the subject have conclusively shown that the quantity of light and heat which has been stored in our luminary is necessarily limited, and that when radiated as the sun radiates, the supply must in time become exhausted. A very simple calculation shows that were there no source of supply, the sun would be cooled off in three or four thousand years. What is a very puzzling question to [the scientist, the one who knows] astronomers is, Whence comes the present supply? During the past thirty years, the source has been sought for in a hypothetical contraction of the sun itself. This contraction is too small to be proved by observation, and several thousand years must elapse before any appreciable diminution can be noted, supposing the theory to be correct. It has been determined by calculation that the sun could scarcely have been giving its present amount of heat for more than twenty or thirty millions of years. But the geologists tell us that the age of the earth is to be reckoned by hundreds of millions of years. Hence arises a point at issue between the astronomers and geologists.

We would remark, that a discrepancy of a few hundred millions of years ought not to feaze the “scientific” mind, nor even Lucifer; for this point of difference between two sets of scientists is only just margin enough to give a good substantial basis for the “higher criticism.”

The Times, speaking of the spectroscope, says:

In the field of the so called newer astronomy, perhaps the most interesting work is that associated with comets. It has been confessed, however, that the spectroscope has increased rather than diminished the mystery which in some respects surrounds the constitution of these bodies.

The Times continues, following in the trail of modern scientific wisdom, with the profound utterance:

But what is known concerning comets, is nothing to what is not known. * * * Whether these bodies consist of nothing but isolated particles, or whether they constitute a solid nucleus, the attraction of which tends to keep the mass together, no one yet knows. The spectroscope has only revealed, so far, that a comet is simply a mass of hydrocarbon vapor, shining by its own light. Even the accuracy of this result has been questioned, and it has been argued that the light of a comet must necessarily be reflected sunlight, from the fact of the increased brilliancy of the comet as it approaches the sun, and its disappearance as it passes away.

Now, according to the brilliant astronomer who writes for the Times, it has been proven by the aid of the spectroscope, that the comet shines "by its own light;" and it has been proven by the same instrument, that it shines by the reflected light of the sun. And Lucifer calls this "science." We call it the confession of consummate ignorance; however, it is about as good as anything the "higher criticism" can produce, for these substitutes for science comprise the basis of its knowledge. The man who is hunting for knowledge and has not found it, has not acquired a right to the title, scientist. The scientist is the man who knows—not the man who guesses. It is claimed by some, that the true scientist is a modest man. This literally means that the man who is afraid to state positively what he knows, knows that he is in doubt; and that if he is sure of anything, it is that the next investigator who comes along will upset all his theories. It is for this reason he knows that the basis for his theory is an assumption; that he knows he is very liable to guess wrong. Koreshanity is not thus perplexed. Our premise is known to be a demonstrated fact. Every pretended astronomer of the Copernican school knows that he reasons from an assumption; and a guess at the beginning of an argument is an assumption at the end of the argument. It is for this reason that Dr. Woodhouse, Astronomer, Cambridge, England, said:

However perfect our theory may appear, in our own estimation, and however satisfactorily the Newtonian hypothesis may seem to account for all celestial phenomena, yet we are compelled to admit the astounding truth, that if our premise be disputed and our facts challenged, the whole range of astronomy does not contain the proofs of its own accuracy.

This is an honest and a truthful confession. But in the following, Dr. Woodhouse further deplures the fact that astronomers have nothing to stand upon:

Sartling as this announcement may appear, it is nevertheless true; and astronomy would indeed be helpless, were it not for the applied approval of those whose authority is considered a guarantee of its truth. Should this sole refuge fail us, all our arguments, all our observations, all our boasted accuracy would be useless, and the whole science of astronomy must fall to the ground!

This is what Lucifer depends upon to dispute the Koreshan Universology. It is perfectly welcome to the fortification behind which it attempts to barricade itself. Koreshanity knows its ground, and all it asks is that the so called scientific world dare come to the front and contend for its assumptions. All we ask is for an open fight, and we are going to force it.

Koresh in the Senate Chamber.

The Founder of Koreshanity Witnesses a Senatorial Farce; Hears a Discussion of the Ship Subsidy Bill, and Sums up the Situation.

IT WAS STATED while the ship subsidy bill was in its heat of discussion, that one of the most important measures to the people of the United States was then before Congress, and with the chances in its favor of its passage through Congress. During the speech of Senator Rawlins (democrat) against the bill, there were five republicans and seven democrats present. Senator Bacon announced the absence of a quorum, and Gallinger, President pro tem., began to call the roll, when there was a scattering of the pages of the Senate, with a corresponding oozing in of the members of the chamber, and an oozing out as the name of each senator was called and answered to. When the roll call was counted, a quorum was announced and the speech was resumed, with five republicans and seven democrats present—the oozing process having reduced the Senate chamber to this number. The Times, commenting on the situation, said: "Mr. Bacon demanded the presence of a quorum, and the roll was called. A quorum was found present." Resuming, Mr. Rawlins said that the measure was a gross outrage on the people of the United States. "On the one side," said he, "are the people of the United States and the Treasury; on the other side are the monopolies." He ought to have further remarked, that the Senate was a gross outrage on the people of the United States.

Mr. Tillman interrupted the speaker. He said: "I want to give notice that the end of the session is less than one month away, and we have done nothing toward passing the appropriation bills. [At this time the session had only passed appropriations amounting to eight hundred million dollars.] Now, if this Administration wants an extra session and proposes to obtain one by delaying everything by this bill, it can have one; but I want to say that as long as this debate lasts, and it will last a long time, I am going to see that the republicans will have to listen to it. I therefore announce the absence of a quorum." Says the Times: "The roll was called, and forty-nine senators answered."

The fact is, when Senator Tillman demanded a quorum, the pages scattered to the lobbies and cloak rooms, and the endosmosis began, with a corresponding exosmosis with the individual responses to the roll. And to five republicans and about nine democrats Mr. Rawlins resumed his speech. "For the first time," said he, "in the history of the country, an open attempt is made to loot the Treasury. No excuse is given, save that certain corporations must be given millions for some secret reason."

There is good reason why certain senators did not wish to listen to the flagellations of corrupters of legislation. They have been purchased, manipulated, or psychologized into the support of this Hanna scheme to rob the people, and they did not want their consciences pricked and galled by the scathings of its opponents, and their purposes weakened.

Senator Berry (democrat) made the next speech, after Rawlins, against the bill. He spoke to twelve members of the Senate, five of whom were republicans—engaged in writing letters and reading newspapers. He addressed his remarks to "Mr. President;" hesitating again, "Mr. President!" Mr. President was buried in his newspaper, and was oblivious to the appeal of Senator Berry to the Chair; but continuing his speech to the wind, the senator said that "During his service in Congress, no measure had been pressed which so flagrantly disregarded the principle of equality, and which gave millions on millions of the public money to a combination of wealthy interests." He criticised Senator Frye, from Maine, for selecting a committee outside of the Senate, a committee not selected by the Senate of the United States, and not according to the usages of the Senate—a committee of twenty-five. During this criticism he was interrupted by Mr. Frye, red and fiery, and who looked as if he had been fried, who asked:

"When there is to be considered a bill for such a purpose as this bill has, whom should I have selected—men who knew all about it, or men who knew nothing about it? Suppose I had selected the senators who have made speeches in opposition to this bill, and who have exhibited the profoundest possible ignorance of the subject?"

"If I had the choice," Mr. Berry replied, "I would rather appoint men who were ignorant of the subject, than men who were to be beneficiaries under the bill." He might have added, that nothing can be expected of the money power which is manipulating this Administration and Congress, than that this power which controls the Treasury of the United States will control it in the interests of its own greed. If the people of the country desire to legislate on commercial and financial interests, why should they not seek advice of the bankers of Lombard and Wall streets, who have reduced the robbery of the people to an exact science, and whom the people believe when they are told by these robbers, "We are putting our commercial feet in your necks for your own dear interests"? And why, when two hundred million dollars are to be stolen from the people's treasury and given—contrary to the Constitutional provision against special legislation—to millionaire shipbuilders, should we not consult these men to whom the spoils are to be given, as to the division of these spoils?

During this debate, Senator Hanna sits superlatively complacent, placid as an unrippled sea, and as serene as a May morning, while Senator Frye is boiling with rage and excitement. What is the secret of Hanna's unperturbed attitude while he leans restfully in his chair, and in placid serenity joyfully anticipates the future pleasure of the triumph of the money power? It is his absolute knowledge of, and confidence in the power of money. He has reduced this knowledge of the application of money to the manipulation of politics, to an exact science. He has supreme confidence in the organic unity of the money lords, and in the centralization of this power now on the throne of human affection.

"The love of money is the root of all evil;" the love of money is the great serpent that beguiled the world; it is enthroned in the human heart. The time has come when no man can buy or sell who has not received the mark of the beast (the money power) in his forehead (credit) or in his hand—the money in his hand. Mark Hanna, which means the mark in hand, is the culminating sign of the final desecration of the most holy place. No legislation will secure the rights of the people. There is not honesty enough to reform the outrages of Congress and the Legislatures of the states. Nothing this side of the great battle of Gog and Magog—the conflict of the people against the money power, the contest of "capital and labor," culminating in a fight to the finish—will settle the controversy.

The republican party, the party of legislation for the trusts, the party of special legislation for the interests of capital against labor, the party which now proposes to institute a ship subsidy steal for a few millionaires, ostensibly for the purpose of restoring the merchant marine of the United States, means to so manipulate its power as to perpetuate the enthronement of the gold deity to enslave the people. God grant the republican party the courage of its convictions, that it may so exercise its authority as to convince the people that nothing short of the revolution which is prophesied, and which is inevitable, can bring about the establishment of equity. The republican party demands an army. It is the so called government, with the money god and the military and naval powers of the United States on the one hand, and the people on the other, that will consummate the catastrophe. Neither of these forces is in the right. A power will arise which will represent the will of the Almighty, and which will take the reins of government and adjust the affairs of men.

Relation of Church and Secular Commerce.

Supremacy of the Papacy During the Middle Ages, the Logical Antecedent of Present Conditions; the Papal Trust Reflected in the Gigantic Corporations.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

THE SCROLL OF HISTORY, like the Bible and the physical world, must be read in the light of Koreshan Science which God has caused to shine out in the thick darkness of the age. The mystery of its characters has been sought in vain by human thought; but there is a key to the hieroglyphics; there is a standard of absolute truth in regard to the whole related system of things natural and spiritual, else were all men most miserable. Through the Messianic law, the truth which is eternally inherent in the interior and central mind comes into outward expression. The God-man interprets the world order, and the pages of history glow with new meaning.

The events of each succeeding age are cast both in prose and poetry; they have a literal and a figurative sense; they are final in one aspect while in another they are types of things to come. The burial of Jesus for example, and his resurrection from the tomb of Joseph fulfilled an absolute and specific phase of his mission; at the same time they pointed to the burial of his Spirit through absorption into the races descended from Joseph, and his resurrection from the same amalgamated people reëmbodied in the Anglo-Saxon nations now. The supremacy of the Papacy during the middle ages shows a specific stage in the progress of the church and the race; it was also the type of things to come.

As the direct channel for the transmission of the descending Spirit of Christ through the long line of Popes, in whom the divine mind was hidden though far interior, the Catholic church marked the culmination of the early organic unity. Why could it not endure? Because, as inevitably as the stars must decline toward the west as soon as they reach their culmination, so every phase of ecclesiastical and political life culminates and declines in the order of law. Moreover, it was a type of organic unity founded upon the perversion of truth and life. The pure Spirit of Christianity joined in unholy wedlock with Paganism under Constantine. The centralization of power in the hands of the priesthood and its absolute control over the minds and souls of men pointed directly to the centralization of wealth today. It was indeed the logical antecedent of present issues.

The Papacy exercised a monopoly over church commerce. It built up a gigantic system of religious trusts. It cornered up those spiritual goods of which material wealth is the outward and natural correspondent. It preëmpted the whole spiritual world, so to speak, through its doctrine of heaven, hell, and purgatory, just as every corner of the natural earth today is under the control of land speculators and monopolists. When a seed is planted in the ground it enters into unity with the spirit of the earth from which it absorbs moisture and heat, together with the magnetic and electric forces of the soil; thus it begins to swell and expand, but the heart of it grows corrupt. By and by the outer covering bursts by reason of the decay within. The centralization of spiritual power in the Papacy for a thousand years represents the expanding period in the seed's progress toward reproduction. The Reformation was the bursting of the old husk, the dissolution of the first phase of organic unity. It did not introduce a period of greater purity and light, but one of license and unchastity.

The kingdom of Christ was a spiritual kingdom. He breathed into the church a new spirit; his mission was to the mind, not the body. The kingdom that Koreshanity comes to establish is a natural kingdom that will develop in the natural world. The focalization of spiritual power in the Papacy by a reflex, is now transposed to the focalization of wealth in the hands of the millionaires. They exercise a control over the natural resources of the earth that corresponds precisely to the monopoly of perverted spiritual truth and learning by the medieval church. Christianity joined with Rome and the Romish church held the Word. For centuries every literary monument was written in Latin, and all the secrets of art and science were known only to the monks. There was no liberty of thought nor speech. The spirit of man was under a fearful constraint.

There is today a similar constraint upon the natural life of the wage earner, over his food, his garments, his home, the corner of land that he wants to till, or the work that he must seek. His mind is free; he has free speech and free thought, so they tell him. He can choose between a score of religious beliefs, and having elected for himself the kind of future state that he prefers to enter when he dies, the force of psychological attraction will carry him to such a sphere when he goes into the world of spirits, but he cannot earn a dollar to buy a single meal for himself or his children without the consent of those who hold the gold of the world in their grasp.

The hope of Koreshanity is to deliver the natural life of man, his natural body and the natural world from such appalling bondage. History shows the constraint of fear succeeded by the constraint of greed. But the only constraint which Koreshanity brings is that of love. Its Founder exacts no vows, imposes no penalties, leaves every follower free to develop along the line of his own desires. He only asks: "Is your love for humanity strong enough to lead you to toil and suffer as I have toiled and suffered for thirty years? Are the ideals which I present noble enough to inspire you with courage to persist? My truth is to conquer the world, and you may share in the victory if you will."

Messianic Factors of World-Perpetuity.

Knowledge of the Messianic Law Necessary; the Divine Seed and Coming Harvest of the Age; the Great Consummation and the Golden Age.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

THE WORLD NEEDS nothing today so much as a knowledge of the Messianic law, which, in its most exalted and in its humblest manifestation, shows but the activities of seed-time and harvest. The Lion of the tribe of Judah, after giving this law in veiled language to those unready for its promulgation, thus expounded it to his disciples: "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; the field is the world * * * The harvest is the end of the world (age). The sower soweth the Word." The Son of God, the Son of man, the sower of the Word, was Himself that Word; otherwise John (who declared that the Word, God, was made flesh, and dwelt among men as the only begotten of the Father) recorded falsely.

The fact that the Lord sowed himself, will only be denied by the biased and the superficial. A sequential query might be: Where did He sow himself? Observation of the animal and the human world supplies the answer: Every species sows its seed in its kind: "That which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be * * * But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body." The Christ was human. He was the Son of man as much as he was the Son of God. Being of mankind, in mankind he sowed himself as seed, and in the harvest he will reappear, the many fold Christ—the Christs.

The summit of Messianic desires is to consummate the atonement—to conjoin man, divorced from God, to his Creator. As related to the anthropotic, He appears when the quality of human life has so far deteriorated as to make the infusion of the God-life a necessity. As related to timic cycles, He appears at the ending of one two-thousand-year period, and at the beginning of another. Invariably, He comes to plant himself in the race through the sublimation of his person, thus reduced to Holy Spirit, which is absorbed by his followers, whom he has taught to love him; for always the Messiah is the one genuine Teacher of the age. Through His teaching he prepares the intellects and wills of men, even as soil, for his planting—through their desire for him he is enabled to implant himself.

Emanuel Swedenborg's mission was Messianic. He was specifically a Messiah or teacher to the spiritual world. Through his presentation of spiritual truths, the spiritual counterparts of the 144,000 people in the natural world (in whom was planted a Christ-germ in the beginning of the age, the husband arising to meet the descending bride) were impelled to decision. The 144,000 accepting the truth were separated from the non-receptive, and aggregated as the Bride, the Lamb's wife. Judgment and justice were met, and none could gainsay, for each had followed the bent of his own desire, and according to his desire had been assigned.

The end of a two-thousand-year cycle (the Piscatorial) and the beginning of a two-thousand-year cycle (the Aquarial) is here. The Messiah of the coming dispensation, or two-thousand-year period is here, and judgment is begun in the natural world. It will proceed to completion, and those who choose Christ's righteousness will be Christs. They will appear as the fruit of the Tree of Life—that marvelous tree which bears twelve manner of fruits, and yields its fruit every month. These months of two thousand years are each represented by one of the signs of the Zodiac.

Why should those who accepted the Messiahship of the Lord Jesus, at the close of the Ariestic and the beginning of the Piscatorial dispensation, doubt the present Messiahship, which closes the Piscatorial and opens the Aquarial degree? Is it because the Sent of God to this age was not born of a Virgin? By that same sign, then, or the absence of it, must they eschew Enoch and Elias. That which has been shall be: Enoch made no record as a character of Godly birth, but his translation is undenied. For the Tishbite, Elijah, no claim is made that his coming was unlike that of the humblest tiny human whose little pink body was ever swathed in swaddling clothes; yet, we are given in his passing, that sublime picture which even the translation of the Lord Jesus does not equal—his ascent into heaven in a chariot of fire!

The present is not alone the closing and the opening of the shorter cycles: it witnesses the end and the beginning of the grand or Mazzarothic cycles of 24,000 years; and the developments to follow, as compared with all developments familiar to man, will even surpass the accession of time as between the shorter and longer cycle. The coming grander time, the Golden Age, God's heavenly pageant, full-bloomed upon the earth, holds prophecy in the added power of 144,000 Souls of God together associated, in compare with that one Godly Figure standing solitary nineteen hundred years ago.

The Koreshan System is inaugurated for the purpose of restoring normal states and relations, and insuring their permanency through the scientific regulation of all the functions of life.

The Christian dispensation began with an outpouring of the Holy Spirit; and the manifestation of love which actuated those who comprised the church was the result of this operation.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE UNSOLVED PROBLEMS of modern science are agitating the minds of so called great thinkers of the twentieth century; they abound in every department of modern thought, in every branch of learning, in every line of research. Mystery after mystery, marvel after marvel, confronts the scientists for solution; their patience is tried, their skill is baffled, and their resources are exhausted. The world is beginning to ask the scientists, and the scientists are forced to ask themselves, if they have really solved a single problem of the ages! We affirm that they have not; and for that reason they should be known by some other name than scientists. Nearly two years ago we noticed in these columns, the admissions of Astronomer Newcomb concerning the Unsolved Problems of Astronomy; and last week we reviewed an article by Prof. Remsen, in the chair of chemistry in Johns Hopkins University, on the Unsolved Problems of Chemistry; and this week our attention is called to three articles by prominent writers, suggesting that unsolved problems in astronomy, in medicine, and in biology are legion. Today, "most of the universe, both in its near and its distant parts, is yet mysterious" to the astronomer. The moon, of all heavenly bodies, the nearest to the earth, contains mysteries which the astronomer despairs of ever revealing; while concerning the sun, there is absolutely no fixed opinion or theory in the entire field of modern astronomy; and concerning the shape of the universe itself, the astronomer can only conjecture. Newton presumed to solve the problems of the universe by his theory of gravitation; but it was soon discovered that his theory brought the universe no nearer to solution than before! The cause of the most common diseases is yet unknown to the medical world; microbes are to the physician what the atom is to the chemist—a mere abstraction with which he endeavors to account for diseased conditions which obtain in the body. Physicians today are as far from a knowledge of the cause of disease and of the processes of cure, as they were centuries ago. They are ignorantly battling with human ills—experimenting at the expense of health and life itself. Who has solved the problems of human existence—the problems of life on any plane? Prof. Walsh, M. D., LL. D., admits that "In biology, unsolved problems are as plentiful as Fallstaff's blackberries. The first great question, What is life? has no satisfactory answer. Living things make use of physical and chemical energies; but there is some force behind these energies ruling and guiding them in the processes necessary for the continuance of life. What this vital force is, is the hitherto insoluble mystery." THE FLAMING SWORD, in the past, has battled against the assumption on the part of the great mass of people that the theories of the modern scientists cannot be consistently questioned. We take pleasure in pointing to the admissions of the scientists themselves, to the effect that there is no certainly in their conclusions. They are forced to these admissions by virtue of the fact that no two scientists agree; there is conflict everywhere, and the cause of the conflict is in the fact that they are utterly incapable of teaching the people the great truths of existence. The day of Koreshan triumph is at hand; its scientific solution of the problems of the universe will soon be grasped by the millions; and the so called scientists and their absurdities will pass into oblivion!

Rev. Gregory, of Chicago, declares that agnosticism is not dead; that it is not any kind of a system, but that "it is a mere state of the mind." He correctly defines what agnosticism means—that it is mere ignorance, honest ignorance, which says,

"I do not know!" and that withal, the position of agnosticism is the only honest and consistent position for the modern mind to assume. Consequently, he concludes that agnosticism should universally prevail, because the solution of the great problems of life transcend the modern mind. Rev. Gregory is bolder than most theologians, but he undoubtedly declares what they would like to express: "There may be a God. We do not know that there is, we do not know that there is not; there may be life beyond the grave; we do not know that such is the case, we do not know that such is not the case. It may be a fact that Jesus was 'more than a man,' and it may be that the writings known as the Bible are of 'superhuman inspiration,' but it is an out and out impossibility for us to arrive at any certainty in the premises. All such matters are transcendental to us, and beyond our ability to see into and understand them. With reference to such remote and inaccessible things, all that we can honestly do is to come right out and say: 'WE DO NOT KNOW!'" From the time of its founding, Koreshanity has declared that such is the condition of the modern mental world. The world is ignorant of the truth, hopelessly, so far as help from the modern scientists and theologians is concerned, entangled in the meshes of fallacy, and under the spell of delusion. The Science of Koreshanity is the demonstrated Science of Being and Existence; it is the antithet of agnosticism—it has nothing in common with the effete thought of the age. It begins with the simplest principles of life, and builds up for the rational mind a great structure of Knowledge, which constitutes the eternal Truth. There is nothing in the universe that is not susceptible of being grasped by the human intellect, and there is not a law in the entire realm of existence that man may not know and apply to himself. Koreshanity is the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible, the revelation of the mysteries which are beyond the reach of all other schools of modern thought.

A number of millionaires tell, in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post, why they continue to amass wealth after they have made themselves and families comfortable for life. From their testimony, they began lines of business which they are loath to leave; they become accustomed to a high degree of mental activity, under powerful impulses of a spirit which intoxicates, under a stimulus without which they would have no ambition. They love power, the power of riches; and impelled by the spirit of greed, they go on year after year in the endeavor to get more and more. They are kings and priests unto the money god; they worship at the golden shrine—they are filled with the love of money. To make money is their passion; their greatest delight is in seeing great fortunes come into their possession. They love to see world-changing enterprises grow up under their manipulation; and they have an idea that the world is getting better because they rule in the spheres of industry and commerce. They pride themselves upon their remarkable foresight, sagacity, wisdom, and judgment in the control of men and their products. The millionaires have simply made use of the opportunities which the competitive system has opened up; the temptations are there, and they enter the school of experience, through which they acquire a high degree of perverted commercial wisdom. We do not blame the millionaires, so much as the system which gives them the advantage. They have their cares; they are worn and torn by the burdens of wealth. They are under the curse; opulence does not bring them happiness. They are in the mad rush with all the world, without realizing the dangers to themselves and to society. They need to learn that they are a stupendous factor of oppression; they are not aware of the coming consequences of their work—they are ignorant of the thunders and the throes of the impending revolution!

Dr. C. Piazza Smyth, the famous pyramidalist, in his elaborate work on the Great Pyramid of Egypt, after tedious measurements of every chamber, every passage, every angle outside and inside, presumed to find the true solar parallax and the true distance to the sun. With the common figures given by the astronomers, in mind, it is not strange that some measurements, either in themselves or their multiples, should correspond to some of the enormous figures with which the astronomer deals. Proctor remarked, that striking coincidences might be found by taking the measurements of a common tin-pail or plug hat! Ignatius Donnelly undertook to prove that Francis Bacon was the author of the works of Shakespeare, because there appears on his tomb the key to a cryptogram found in certain parts of the Shakespearean dramas; Donnelly's contention is said to be well supported by a number of striking coincidences. But by the same kind of argument, we can show that Shakespeare was the author of the Bible, or at least, the book of Psalms. Shakespeare did not use the final "e" which now appears in the name. There are 10 letters in the name as originally spelled—4 vowels and 6 consonants. Shakespear (46), then, is the key to a wonderful cryptogram in the Bible. Turn to the 46th Psalm; count 46 words from the beginning, and the word "shake" is reached; beginning at the end of the same Psalm, and counting backward 46 words, the word "spear" is reached, making Shakespear in the 46th psalm, corresponding to the cryptogram number 46, derived from the name Shakespear. And yet, according to the highest Hebrew authority, the book of Psalms was written at least 2,500 years before the time of Shakespeare!

Mrs. Nation has stirred up considerable excitement by endeavoring to abolish saloons by wrecking them; by this means she hopes to arouse public sentiment against the rum-shops throughout the nation. Notwithstanding the fact that the saloons need abolishing, the new crusader is imbued with the spirit of fanaticism, believing as she does, that she has been commanded by the Almighty to wield her hatchet against the beer barrels and whiskey casks. She would enforce one law on the statute books of Kansas by breaking others. A similar spirit leads the mob to conclude that justice requires that murderers be lynched or burned at the stake; and leads the labor-unions to attack the property of corporations and strike down fellow workmen who seek employment without the sanction of the unions. It is not creditable to the men who have to do with the enforcement of law, that evils should exist in defiance to the decrees of the people's law-makers; but there will be a worse condition of things existing—a reign of terror—when factions presume to take the law into their own hands and execute them through direct anarchistic methods. No cure for great evils today can be effected by attacking symptoms; applying the hatchet to saloons is not striking at the sensual appetite which demands the stimulants supplied by the saloons. The laying of the axe at the root of the corrupt tree is the only effective remedy; reach the seat of the difficulty, and the effects will disappear—but Koreshanity alone possesses the secret of the application of scientific law to the very heart of sensuality.

"The very fact of placing a man or a book in a position of unique authority is going to make one crouch in 'reverence'—in other words, to fear." There are minds which consider reverence to be a dangerous thing; they are jealous of laudable examples, and talk of throwing away one's liberty when the original work and authority of some great genius are admired and acknowledged, or the achievements of some great hero praised. One has more liberty to perform mathematical calculations if he is able to perceive that some work on mathematics is sufficiently authoritative to contain and explain exact mathematical principles. To reverence a hero is to acknowledge that his altitude of strength, courage, and character is possible for one's own self! The strongest love and greatest liberty are in the recognition of some mind that has fulfilled the world's highest ideal; and the greatest impulse in aspiration to reach the altitude of the perfect Man, springs from reverence and worship of a character which demonstrates his ability to lead the worshiper to the altitude of His own destiny! There is a power in mental polarity, of which the mental scientists have never dreamed; their individualism is anti-Messianic. The salvation of the corpuscles of a plant is in following the leadership of the most progressive cell, which leads to the destiny of all in the seed. Is such a principle false in humanity?

Christendom is a term applied to that part of the world where Christianity prevails; the nations of Christendom are said to be Christian nations. Christianity was most powerful when it was united with Rome; and yet so tyrannical was that power, that even today Protestants refuse to call it Christian. Protestantism has not greatly improved the condition of affairs in Europe, and it certainly has not thoroughly civilized the great West. American liberty of thought and speech is directly traceable to the influence of Thomas Paine, a pronounced atheist; the Declaration of Independence could never have been dictated by the spirit of Puritanism. From the standpoint of primitive Christianity, there are no Christian nations today; but Christianity as it is has become a world power, and is adulterating the very life of the world, and it is in so called Christian nations that the greatest evils exist, where the greatest revolution of the ages will sweep in judgment and vengeance!

A journal, the Phrenic World, remarks that "God molded the earth with his fingers; he hung the heavens with blazing stars; he erected the huge mountains, and built their lofty crags; he hollowed out the bed of the ocean, and dug the channels of the great rivers." Some minds take these things for granted, without knowing how they were accomplished; but perhaps a magazine which "inquires into the structure and elements of things," and "seeks to know and explain just what and why a thing is," might endeavor to enlighten the world as to just how "God molded the earth with his fingers," and "hung the heavens with blazing stars," and to what extent other parts of the universe needed the attention of the Almighty while he was busy capping the climax on the mountain tops!

A phrenologist says that "Socialism is not wholly in harmony with the constitution of human nature. Therefore it cannot be wholly right." The difference between scientific socialism and human nature is wholly on the side of human nature. The modern man is not in himself wholly right; he is an abnormal creature, a degenerate. It is a fact that many socialist agitators "who do not study the constitution of human nature and make their schemes conform to it will have to suffer more or less defeat;" but there is such a thing as discovering the basis of a new humanity, and making human nature conform to the laws of Being. The man who thoroughly understands human nature as it is today, is able to make human nature what it should be!

It is said that the "love of the good, of the right, of truth, is the common heritage of all humanity." If all present conditions are good; if all that man does is just; if all that is taught and believed in the world is true, then men universally love that which is good and right and true. But if reformation and revolution are needed in all lines of human thought and relations, it follows that men love that which is evil, unrighteous, and fallacious. There never has been a great truth presented to the world, no great reform ever instituted, that men did not hate and resist!

The Martians may conclude that the inhabitants of the earth are very rude, if Tesla does not soon reply to the message with which the Martians so considerably celebrated the beginning of the twentieth century on the earth. The Pike's Peak electric rattle affords the clergymen, we suggest, as good evidence as they have that there are three persons in the Godhead; for the message to Tesla is interpreted to read, "One, two, three!" But were the Martians endeavoring to teach the people of the earth the fundamentals of theology, or mathematics?

A bill has been introduced in the Kansas legislature to prevent physicians from losing their practice; the idea is to form a medical trust, protected by law, forcing the people, when sick, to apply to the doctors for whatever consequences the doctors are able to bring about. What a calamity it would be to the medical fraternity, if the people should succeed in keeping well! Would bills then be introduced in state legislatures to prevent doctors from losing their practice?

Rev. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) says: "The one thing which, above all others, startled me in America, was the power of the secular spirit and the weakness of the Christian church." The backbone has departed from the church; it has become old and decrepit, afflicted with all kinds of moral diseases; its vitality is low, and it cannot long survive the passing things of the nineteenth century.

By way of retaliation, the saloon keepers of Winfield, Kansas, considered that the church is unconstitutional, and proceeded to wreck a church building, which they did by means of hatchets, stones, and clubs; their effort constituted an effective suggestion that the modern church needs abolishing as much as the saloons!

A writer affirms that "there is a world within each man." Very incomplete world, we should say, and poorly governed! The universe is complete in one great organic structure—male and female; only the perfect man is the microcosm, which corresponds in every particular to the great universe in which we live.

The types in the Jewish system were used to set up the Word of God, which appeared at the end of the dispensation; Jesus was the pole of impression, containing all the "words" printed during the Jewish age.

A monument of the Christ is to be erected on Mount Vesuvius, where there is a Catholic chapel—a suggestion of the fact that Christendom stands over a dangerous, smouldering volcano!

Questions on Koreshan Cosmogony.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Many times in trying to tell others of the Koreshan doctrines, I am asked questions which I cannot answer. I carry with me a little memorandum book, and keep note of them. Will you kindly enlighten me on the following: (1) What are meteors, and how are they formed? (2) What are volcanoes, and how do you account for earthquakes? (3) How do you know that the planets are mercurial discs between the metallic strata? Can you demonstrate the statement? (4) If the moon is a picture of the earth's surface, why does it become invisible a part of the time? If people surround it on every side, why does not some one see the moon at all times?—W. B., Minneapolis, Minn.

It should not be discouraging to students of Koreshanity if questions are asked which they cannot answer, or phenomena suggested for which they cannot account. This department of THE FLAMING SWORD is conducted for the purpose of helping our readers in the study of the System, and in answering the questions of their friends; and we are always glad to reply to pertinent questions submitted to us for answer.

(1) Meteoric showers are periodic precipitations of energies resulting from activities in the physical heavens. Their periodic appearance has led astronomers to conclude that they are particles of material substances travelling in orbits through space, manifesting themselves by coming in contact with the earth's atmosphere. Knowing something of the velocity of the meteors in the air, and the time between manifestations of meteors of a given stream, the size of the orbits are thought to be computed by the astronomer. Of course this is an assumption on the part of the astronomer, resulting from ignorance of the fact that the meteors are materializations of energies, analogous to the formation of hail. The meteoric radiants are within our atmosphere; they are formed in given constellations through rapid precipitation, materialization, and condensation; and fall as burning particles of ferruginous substances.

(2) The volcanic systems constitute the outlet of the great alimentary canal of the physical universe; directly, they are the outlets of the great vulcan fires beneath the earth's surface, where the wastes of the earth are consumed. The great vulcan chambers fill up, alchemically ignite, and an explosion, through usual vents, result. Earthquakes are caused by explosions of gas; by underground fires belonging to the volcanic systems, and by ignition of other inflammables. It is not necessary to suppose that the earth is filled with molten matter in order to account for volcanoes and earthquakes; the old idea of the earth's molten interior is being abandoned by the scientific world. There are a sufficient number of subterranean fires and inflammable substances in the earth's shell, 100 miles in thickness, to cause all the local volcanic and seismic disturbances of history.

(3) The fact that the material planets are mercurial discs in the earth's shell is known in the same way and by the same methods that it is known that the earth is a cell about 8,000 miles in diameter; the conclusion is from the same authority and source. The conclusion is reached and demonstrated through the laws of comparative anatomy and correspondent analogy. The human system has an alimentary canal; therefore, the organic structure of the physical universe must have a corresponding alimentary canal, with its seven divisions corresponding to the seven divisions of the digestive tract in the human system. The function of each planet corresponds to a given division of the alimentary canal in man. Mercury is the universal amalgamator, and the only amalgamator of metals; it is the universal digester. Lava, the nature of which puzzles the scientist, is the offal of the great system of the physical cosmos; it is the product of the complex amalgamations and deteriorations of substances in the earth, through the agency of mercury.

(4) The moon is a materialized reflex or picture of the earth and its strata; but the moon has its phases, due to the relation that the lunar pole sustains to the area of daylight in the earth. If the moon were full all the time, it could not be seen when near the sun, because the solar rays would overcome the weaker rays from the moon, and the moon would be rendered invisible for at least four days out of 29. The moon waxes and wanes; it is renewed every month. It is brightest when full, and becomes invisible when the moon is dark or new.

Immortality and All-Knowledge.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Permit me to ask the following questions: If a person strives to attain immortality now and fails, how long a time will elapse before there is another opportunity to attain it? (2) How will his partial knowledge of Koreshan Science benefit him and others, and to what extent? (3) Must a person attain to universal knowledge in order to attain immortality?—A READER.

(1) Generally speaking, we answer that it depends entirely upon one's relation to Koreshanity, which today promulgates the only science of immortal life. There are thousands of people hoping for immortality, in various shades of misconception of what immortality is; some of them may not attain to immortality for several cycles yet. Specifically, however, there is one opportunity every 24,000 years for hundreds of thousands to become immortal, and that time is always at the close of the Piscatorial dispensation of the Iron Age, when truth is revealed in the scientific degree.

But suppose, for the sake of illustration, that one accepting Koreshanity now and endeavoring to obey the law which it reveals, dies or passes out through corruptible dissolution previous to the great consummation of baptism—what would be the hope of such a case? Such an one enters The Guiding Star of the New Jerusalem in the spiritual world—the sphere of the Koreshan heavens; and that New Jerusalem, made up of spirits of thousands who have died, materializes in the form of the flesh of the Sons of God. These entities of the New Jerusalem inherit the kingdom by becoming a part of the Temple, not the mentality that controls the Temple itself.

(2) Truth benefits no one unless it is applied; knowledge of law is worthless unless that knowledge leads to obedience or application. To whatever extent a man is able to comprehend truth, no matter how little, and obeys it, he is benefitted; he is progressive, and moves in the right direction—in the direction of the final goal of destiny.

(3) Complete comprehension of all truth in the scientific degree is possible only to one Man in every great cycle of 24,000 years; his knowledge is absolutely essential to the attainment of immortality for himself and his followers. It is through the comprehension of all truth that the one Man performs the function of the Messiah by baptizing thousands and enabling them to grasp so much of the truth as will enable them to apply the laws of life and overcome death; and each one baptized receives just so much of the divine mentality as he can receive and retain, and that amount determines his emplacement in the ranks of the divine kingdom in the earth.

Collectively, the 144,000 Sons of God know and embody the whole truth; but each one occupies only his own sphere. During their career in the body, they are teachers of the people, while exploring the realms of human life and mind; they constitute the circumference of God's earth, the perfect macrocosm. The involution of the earth is the sun. All knowledge in unity is the final result of the experiences and exploitations of the Sons of God; then truth becomes involved in One; such an one appeared in humanity nineteen hundred years ago, with the whole truth in the philosophic degree; that same truth appears today in the scientific degree in Koreshanity.

Jonah and the Whale.

Rev. E. M. Castle Gives the Scientific Interpretation of the Wonderful Book of Jonah.

On the subject of Jonah and the Whale last evening, [at Springfield, Mass.,] Rev. E. M. Castle said in part:

"The Book of Jonah is one of symbolism. The story pertains to the communication of the substance of Christ, as Holy Spirit, to the branch of national life which had been specially prepared for its reception. When the very reasonable conclusion is reached that processes in humanity, including racial progressions and transitions and metamorphoses, obtain by virtue of immutable laws of development, which laws have a primary operation in the biologic universe and a sequential operation in the physical, or alchemico-organic universe, the correspondence between the two becomes apparent, and there need be no difficulty in apprehending that the groupings of stars in the physical heavens and their relations to the prime circles of the celestial sphere are in accordance with the causes of these visible effects, these causes inhering primarily in humanity.

"Here is the great book of history and prophecy, printed in points of light on the blue above—the story of nations and of the men who make nations, veritably written by themselves in the physical heavens. In the knowledge of this correspondence, supplied by the Koreshan System of Cosmogony, and only in such knowledge is the key to the understanding of the story of Jonah; and not alone of this story, but of all the ancient myths, with their evident astrological, or rather cosmogonical character—symbolic stories, all of them, expressive of the principles of universal existence, which principles find their highest application in personality.

Jonah and Nineveh Defined.

"The word Jonah means dove, or Holy Spirit, the Holy Spirit being the energetic substance of the Lord's integral form. The dove is the natural symbol of union for life. In the body of Jesus were united principles that are separate in the ordinary existence. This constituted the difference between his body, which did not see corruption, and the bodies of the ordinary corruptible humanity who, in the words of Pope, "propagate and rot." The teaching of the Scriptures is to the effect that the dove, before this manifestation in the flesh, was spirit in the nation that produced Jesus; that this spirit was gathered by John (dove), and was by him passed over to Jesus, this passover being the baptism; and that it was seen by John to alight on Jesus in the form of a dove,—this being the promised sign of the prophet Jonah, i. e. John, or dove.

"The word Nineveh means life of the fish. At the time that Jonah is said to have been commanded to go to Nineveh, it was the representative city of Assyria, and specifically the head or beginning of a subsequently developing people, destioned to be the leading people of the world. The ten tribes were carried away captive by the Assyrian power, the possibility of this carrying away being accomplished through the defection of the kingdom of Israel from the principles that Judah continued to maintain; for Israel abandoned the rite of circumcision with its obligations, and intermarried with the races about her, which weakened her as a nation, making her an easy prey to the Assyrian. The preservation of the principle of circumcision by Judah was the refusal to have part in the race mixture for which the conditions of the Assyrian empire were especially favorable, and thus enter the life of the fish. It was the refusal of Jonah, the dove, to go to Nineveh. The Germanic family of nations originated in the race mixture of Israel with Media, Persia, and Assyria; the soured or vitiated life of Israel constituting the leaven hidden in the three measures of meal, to remain hidden until the life of the entire lump should be vitiated as presented in the parable of Jesus; the three measures being the three nations, Media, Persia, and Assyria.

The Sign Aries and the Constellation Cetus.

In the physical heavens, the extra-zodiacal constellation Cetus, or whale, extending beside the constellations Aries and Pisces is the symbol of the Teutonic family of nations. At the time of the carrying away of the ten tribes, the equinoctial colure, which by its junction with the equator defines the central point of the sign Aries, lay across the head of Cetus. Nineveh, as the representative center of the Assyrian power was this head politically and nationally. Through the entrance of Israel into this race amalgamation, the Teutonic peoples were prepared for their subsequent reception of the Holy Spirit from Christ. Thus was the great fish prepared by God to swallow, appropriate, Jonah,—the dove, or Holy Spirit. At the time of the recorded outpouring of the Holy Spirit, the colure in the physical heavens crossed the belly of Cetus, indicating the development of the people represented by Cetus to a condition corresponding to the belly of the great fish. The fish is the symbol of external natural life, and particularly of that life in its greatest proliferation. It is recorded that Jacob prophesied in his blessing upon Ephraim and Manasseh that as fish were they to increase. In the light of a broadening and liberal reason we may discern more than a barren simile in the expression. The life of Jesus, immaculate, was by its communication to the world compelled to descend into sensual generation—the life of the fish.

"The true story of Jonah involves the true story of him whom Isaiah calls Lucifer, and Ezekiel calls the Cedar of Lebanon. Moreover, one of the Greek myths of Apollo tells the same story. And the key to these is also the key to the character of the Apollyon of Revelation, which theology has misconceived, as it has misconceived the nature of Lucifer, and the significance of the big fish story of the Bible.

"The great fish, the Germanic, family of nations, is leviathan; and who or what has been able to stay his progress through the centuries, in his empire-destroying, empire-constructing course? And when the progressive spirit of this mighty people, ingathered by the Anglo-Saxon, focalizes in one man, as must finally result by the law of involution, that one will constitute leviathan, and must manifest when the national career of the people represented by Cetus is culminating, as Jesus, who involved the progressive life of Judah, manifested at the termination of Judah's career as a nation. The writing of the physical heavens indicates that now is the time, for the colure is passing off the extremity of Cetus. It is time for Jonah to be cast up on land, for Lucifer to return to heaven, for Apollo to throw off the disguise of the fish and reveal himself as the star of glory."—Springfield Daily News, Feb. 11, 1901.

Does the Freethinker Think?

A Pittsburg Editor Roundly Scores Theosophists, Christian Scientists, and Other "Freethinkers."

The Freethinker is accustomed to giving and receiving hard knocks in the controversial arena, and so he will probably not be made hopelessly "groggy" by the forcible blows dealt him by a recent writer who bears the classic name of Addison Steele. Mr. Steele is hard on the average Freethinker, who, he says, "is a Freethinker because he doesn't think. He lets the other man think for him. His mental ability is such as to preclude the pos-

Lectures by Koresh.

THE FOUNDER of KORESHANITY is at present at home in Chicago. He will lecture Sunday, February 24, and March 3, 1901, 3 p. m., at Koreshan Hall, 316 W. 63d street.

Also on Thursday evening of each week, at 8 o'clock, at above Hall, until further notice; opportunity for questions.

We cordially invite the public to attend these lectures, where the most important questions of the day are discussed.

sibility of his investigating intelligently any advanced subject. He possesses just enough knowledge to make it dangerous for himself." Mr. Steele (who is the editor of Kit Kats, a Hubbardian "Periodical of Independent Thought," published in Pittsburg) proceeds to make the following sharp indictment of several types of Freethinkers:

"I next met the average Freethinker at a meeting of Theosophists. Here his predicament was truly painful. In the matter of ridiculing the Bible he, at least, could acquit himself creditably. But Theosophy involved such deep reading, to say nothing of the scores of unfamiliar terms used, that he was truly bewildered. In an off-hand sort of fashion I asked a few of the members for a little light on Theosophy. They stumbled about in the most painful manner. Their minds could not grasp the fundamental principles of the belief. They, however, were advanced thinkers and Theosophists.

Some of them wanted to be odd, so they joined. Some were attracted by the mysterious phrases employed. Some were Theosophists because they could wear a badge. Everything that was said by the leaders was accepted without a murmur. No one would think of coldly analyzing the statements. They, too, thought themselves liberal.

"Then I met the average Freethinker deeply immersed in the contents of Mrs. Eddy's book on science and health. Mrs. Eddy has a few initials before and after her name which have slipped my mind. But it is the christian science Eddy to whom I refer. This young man admitted that he could not fully comprehend Mrs. Eddy's masterly production. He had read it through dozens of times, and he hoped some day for divine inspiration to assist in the interpretation. Yet he was a devout christian scientist because he had been cured of dyspepsia of seventeen years' standing. He was through with orthodox beliefs. He was done with the narrowness of creeds. He threw himself unreservedly into the arms of Mrs. Eddy. Yet upon cross-questioning him he confessed that he possessed but the most superficial knowledge of the subject. He admitted his inability to master the profound mush which Mrs. Eddy doled out. This was a true type of the average Thinker Who Thinks He Thinks.

"The fourth and last instance that I desire to cite to illustrate the species, was found in a meeting of a Society for Psychical Research. This society was burdened with a high-sounding Hindu name, some Oriental paraphernalia, and a little incense. Here the profound thinker was in his element. He was in close touch with a superior being, who knew more about the ways of the Creator in one evening than the orthodox churchman does in a lifetime. This society had its rooms directly opposite a church, and I well remember the contemptuous glances which were cast upon those who were wending their way to divine worship. Each glance seemed to say, 'Poor fools.' All the wisdom was possessed by the members of the high-sounding, Hindu-flavored organization. The leader discoursed on almost everything, showing a knowledge of nothing. Yet the foolish Thinker sat with his mouth open, drinking in the nonsense he couldn't begin to understand. He felt that he was being initiated into the mysteries of a higher life. He felt that he was transcending all creeds. He felt that his condition of mind was the height of free and unrestricted thought. It just goes to prove the pitiable plight of a man who knoweth not that he knoweth not. The members had been attracted by a yellow flag and some mystic characters; a glib talker mouthing in the abstract; a few lectures on subjects that have puzzled the best minds of the world and utterly meaningless to the members. Thus are converts made. No one was able to explain the doctrines preached. They were just Freethinkers.

"Whenever I see a man carrying 'Tom Paine's Common Sense' in his pocket every Fourth of July, I can tell you the books he reads. He has the entire 'Liberal Classic Series.' He lives on them. He becomes so lopsided and bigoted that the term 'Freethinker' becomes a misnomer."—Copied from The Literary Digest.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

Cram's Magazine.—The February issue contains a number of articles of the sort that one having read puts away for future reference. Among these may specially be noted Our Useful Conifers, by Prof. Charles E. Aaron; a brief, but graphic history of William III, of England, by Milton Reeve; a very clear and entertaining account of the bloodless Toledo War, by E. F. Watrous; a number of little points regarding King Edward VII of Great Britain; and some interesting statistics regarding the Growth of Churches in the Nineteenth Century. Woman and her world, and The World's Doings, are excellent reviews of current topics and events. $3.00 per year; single copies, 25 cents. Published by Geo. F. Cram, 61-63 Plymouth Place, Chicago.

The Arena.—The March number contains an important article on the trusts by Justice Walter Clark, LL. D., of the North Carolina Supreme Court, who declares that the trusts can easily be crushed whenever the people choose to exercise their power. This article will be read with interest by all interested in reform. Religion and science is the topic of discussion by James T. Bixby; while Organized Charity, by one of the Editors, should be carefully read; also Direct Legislation and Social Progress, by Eltweed Pomeroy, A. M. Editor Flower reviews the utilitarian character of the last century, in his Topics of the Times. $2.50 a year, or 25 cents a copy, at news-stands.

Leslie's Weekly.—The current issue tells the story of Mrs. Nation and her work, partly in her own words. This issue is the Washington birthday number, in colored covers; and two personalities of hatchet fame are made prominent. Pages illustrate scenes of the Queen's funeral; and a double-page illustration discloses the busy life of cadets at West Point. Curious and interesting scenes at Manila also have a page. This is one of the best issues of this popular weekly.

When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. The Cellular Cosmogony or Koreshan Astronomy.

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DR. CYRUS R. TEED, OF CHICAGO.

The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we INhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, Theocracy, and Social Economy.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univocal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is employed at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Structure of Scientific Socialism.

Futile Efforts of Reformers who Know Nothing About the Law of Construction of the Natural Cosmos ; the Purpose of Democracy ; the Empire of the New Age.

THERE CAN BE NO REASONABLE QUESTION of the fact, that a form of socialism will succeed the crisis of the competitive consummation. There is great conflict of opinion regarding the character of that socialism. The laws of organic order will be applied in the establishment of the social kingdom to be inaugurated now, at the end of the Christian dispensation. The consummate ignorance of the would-be social reformers is something appalling. The audacity of the self-authorized reform leaders is commensurate with the character of the times, and the contemplated social revolutions are puerile. The laws of organic order are not understood, and the efforts at reform will be futile.

The world is hastening with accelerating strides toward that great competitive catastrophe, the inevitable culmination of the spirit of greed which actuates the world, and which the modern Christian system has authorized and propagated in direct opposition to the teachings of the great Exemplar and Seed-Planter of the coming kingdom. There will be no Christian socialism nor democratic socialism as a permanent establishment at the end of the age! It does not require a very brilliant mentality to discern the fact that democracy is but the means to an end; namely, the centralization of government. The disintegration of the old order is an essential prerequisite to the final fulfilment. Democracy has furnished the opportunity for those conditions upon which must depend a bloody revolution, to immediately precede the evolution of the divine order.

The ignorance of men regarding the character of the kingdom to come, is commensurate with and dependent upon their ignorance of the form and function of the physical universe. The universe is an imperial system. Its form is definite, and laid according to the principles of geometric accuracy. No man ignorant of the laws which govern the construction of the architecture of the physical universe, can possibly have any true conception of the laws and principles of social order. Everybody who knows anything, knows that the so called "sciences" of this age of the world are nothing but great systems of fallacy, built upon hypotheses which are of no value but to amuse the agnostics, star-gazers, and "higher critics." The laws of social structure and function are the correspondences of the laws of physical structure and function; and when the social system is organized, it will be instituted and consummated by the man, God-appointed, who knows the universe, and who comprehends its initiations and its limitations. When the time is fulfilled for the social structure to reach its full fruition, it will be on the lines laid down in the Book which, of all others, is emphatically authorized by the Almighty, and given to the world through divinely inspired and illuminated men.

There are two distinct lines of prediction which point to the consummation of the age, and these are in absolute and perfect agreement. They are the indications of Nature as presented in the forms and motions of the alchemico-organic (physical) cosmos, and the predictions of the Bible, absolutely correct both in its chronology and the events to which that chronology relates. Because some of the Biblical chronologists have failed in their attempts to fit their chronological methods into specific events of recent history, it does not follow that the chronology is out of gear, but rather, that the wise men on chronological and mathematical lines are not familiar with anthropostic law and progress.

There is to be a kingdom set up in this world, and this kingdom will supersede all the kingdoms and republics of the world. This kingdom is already organized in its nucleus. Its inception and organic progress are marked both by astronomical chronology and the predictions of the Bible, as related to this kingdom and signified by the Biblical chronological system. The government to succeed the present competitive system will be set up by the Messenger of the Covenant, the product of the posterity of Joseph; he being not only of the ten tribes of Israel, but of the lineage of Ephraim. Joseph is reincarnated in this Messenger; not only so, but the Christ of the Christian dispensation, in his descending life, having passed over into this posterity, is also reincarnated in this same Joseph. There may be and are thousands of claimants to this fulfilment; but the time for the testing of these credentials is at hand, and this testing will be subject to the laws and principles found recorded in the Bible, which contains no mistakes.

If one will take the trouble to examine the statements of Prof. Totten, comparing his mathematical chronology with the events which he thought they fitted into, it will be seen that while he has, without doubt, a perfect chronological system, his blunders are egregious as to the data of his anthropological application. Totten was to have the Turks driven out of Jerusalem about two years ago,—a prediction founded upon his interpretation of the prophecies of the Bible as related to his astronomical chronology. The Turks were not driven out, as we knew they would not be, the Bible being true.

The New Jerusalem is already gathered, and is ready to descend as John saw and predicted. She descends in America, and not in the old Palestine. The new social Empire will have its nucleus in America. It will not develop according to the methods laid down by the self-constituted social reformers, who know nothing about the laws of government as indicated in the forms and functions of the physical cosmos. There is being emplaced and arranged the central battery of organic power; from this nucleus will extend and radiate the mental forces which will gather into groups, a system of societal fellowship having a specific relation to all other groups, and especially to the central group and nucleus of the social Empire. During the process of organic growth, the forces are being organized for the final disruption. There will be a breaking up of the old order, before there can or will be a pronounced enlargement of the new. There will be no new order except by the descent of the New Jerusalem, upon which the new order depends.

There is coming one of the most pronounced miracles of recent or ancient times. By miracle, we do not mean anything contrary to law, but merely what the word miracle implies, namely, astonishment, because it is according to the higher laws of which the ordinary mind is ignorant. This miracle of which we speak, is nothing less than the electro-magnetic combustion of tens of thousands of people who, through their dematerialization, will pass through a metamorphosis in fulfilment of the Biblical predictions of the burning up of the world. It is through this conflagration that the world will be prepared to enter into the new conditions essential to the creation of the organic form into which the new humanity is about to enter. Nothing but the fruit of the dispensation can accept this doctrine; nor do we desire any other than the fruit to be gathered. The fruit of the age will be the result of the baptism which took place in the beginning of the age. The people who did not receive the Holy Spirit nineteen hundred years ago, will not accept the truth today. Those who rejected the Holy Spirit then, sinned against the Spirit; hence the seed was not planted, and therefore they are not the fruit of this age, nor can they possibly be.

The devil will not sit idly by and see the kingdom of God made manifest without a struggle; hence the manifestation of the power of antichrist, as now seen in the manifold christ developments of the times. The antichrist of today is the rejection of the Messianic personality of this age. The Christ comes in the appointed person, not merely in the spirit. God the Lord is manifest personally in the Messenger of the Covenant. This is the Elijah of whom it is said: "Behold I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." Of this day it is also said: "For behold the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." All this refers to those who will enter the fire because of the confession of their wickedness; from these the dross will be removed because of the fire which burns them up. This conflagration is one of the sure things of this, the culminating period of the dispensation. The social fabric will come through this fire, and as a result of its operation.

There are two principal factors in the regulation of economy; namely, production and distribution; and money is not required for either of these purposes.

The government is to be the Lord's, and the kingdom in the earth is to be conducted upon the basis of the conduct of the kingdom of heaven.

"I Will Be What I Will Be!"

A Notable Declaration of the Almighty Perverted by Translators, and Appropriated by Flippant Followers of Mental Science Fads.

AND THE GODS SAID UNTO MOSES, EYEH ESHER EYEH [I WILL BE WHAT I WILL BE]; AND HE SAID, THUS SHALT THOU SAY UNTO THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL, I WILL BE HATH SENT ME UNTO YOU.

EVERY HEBREW SCHOLAR knows that the form of the verb to be, in the text above quoted, is the future, I will be, and also that the singular personal pronoun I is related to the plural Elohim, or Gods. We may legitimately inquire, For what reason should the Gods, or the scribe, employ the first person singular I, when the plural Elohim (Gods) is employed to denote the character of the source of the instructions to Moses? We may further inquire, For what reason should the modern theologian pervert the testimony of the Hebrew scribe, who was not only supposed to be familiar with the Hebrew language, but with the Hebrew conception of theology? There is a deeper significance in this peculiar use of the Hebrew nouns, verbs, and pronouns, than the modern theologian has ever dreamed or conceived; and we contend that no doctor of divinity nor theologian, no matter what his claims to scholastic eminence or to peculiarity of theological creed, has the right to pervert the meaning of any Scriptural text to make it conform to his dogmatic theological conception.

Independently of all theological creeds and conceptions, we are compelled to deal with facts; and we must meet these facts irrespective of what we have been taught or what we would like to believe. If in King James's version, or any other version, of the Bible we read "I AM THAT I AM," and find upon inspection that this is a mistranslation, that there is no such expression in the Hebrew whence this perversion is derived, we are forced to the attitude of utterly ignoring the rendering, even though it demolish the sacred idol erected upon the pedestal of a fallacious sacerdotal concept of Deity.

The prime fact before us resides in the Hebrew term EYEH ESHER EYEH, which, truthfully rendered, is simply this: "I will be what I will be." This may seem inconsistent with the common conception of a Deific and eternal Presence. We suggest that the common sense, sensual, and inverted human race may possibly entertain some very erroneous views of the "UNKNOWN AND UNKNOWABLE." Until this broad but common confession of ignorance, which so universally prevails, can place itself upon a more substantial footing as to a correct comprehension of the Deific character, we would urge upon the doctors of divinity not to employ too heroic treatment in their prescriptions to their invalid idol deity. If the Gods said to Moses, "I will be what I will be," as the scribe has written, and if this statement of the Gods implies just what the Gods intended to convey, it follows that if they, as doctors of divinity, put words into the mouths of the Gods which they did not utter, they pervert the language and the intention, and whatsoever theological conceptions are predicated upon this false premise are necessarily false.

The one great fundamental principle of immortality and eternal life, resides in the fact that Jehovah God reaches maturity in the Son of God. The process of Deific generation in the race provides that, so far as divine development in the race of men is concerned, referring to the only Begotten, the manifestation of Jehovah is in the future. Jehovah did not appear until the end of the Jewish age; hence when the Gods said, "I WILL BE WHAT I WILL BE," they—focalizing their perceptions in and through Moses—spoke centratively in and through the mouthpiece of the Gods, who was one in person, even Moses—the great Lawgiver. The peculiarity of the use of the pronoun in the first person singular, with the plural noun, when relating to Deity, so common in the Hebrew Bible, has its origin in the fact that the Messianic personality of Deity, who is one in person, holds within himself the spiritual entities whom he represents, and in whom the Gods are one. When Saul went to the woman of Endor for advice, and inquired of her, "What sawest thou?" she answered: "I saw gods ascending out of the earth." "What form is he of?" asked Saul. It was because she saw, first, the grouping of spiritual beings of which Samuel was the center, leader, and head, that she said, "I saw gods ascending out of the earth." When Saul asked for a description of the form, the woman described Samuel.

When Elijah was translated in the presence of Elisha, Elisha exclaimed: "The chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof." It was the chariot of Israel, because the translation was the means of the conveyance of the spirit of Elijah to the interior of Elisha—chariot thus signifying conveyance. It was "horsemen," because the spiritual entities in Elijah were under the restraints, liberties, adjustments, and appropriations of commercial law, these things being signified by horsemen. This was the dissolving of the body of Elijah, its conversion to spiritual energy, and thence its absorption by Elisha the prophet. This absorption of Elijah was his entrance into Nirvana. The cause of this combustion or burning of the body of Elijah, was the concentration of those who hated him, this hatred—as a substantial energy or spirit—flowing voluminously into him, together with the love of Elijah's own school of prophets. The influx of the love of those who loved him, with the influx of the hate of those who hated him, generated the fire that burned his body, consumed him, and made his absorption possible. This is the mystery of the law of absorption.

The Lord Jesus, after his natural resurrection from the tomb of Joseph, and when appearing to his disciples, was caught away. His body dissolved by virtue of the fact that thousands hated him with an inveterate hatred, while others loved him with an equal intensity. "They have hated me," said Jesus, "and they will hate you." There is nothing that will arouse the venom of the antichristian spirit so thoroughly as the declaration of the truth on any line of thought. One of the most essential things for the consummation of the age, is the hatred which comes from the spirit of the venomous devil. The Messianic power can only be manifest as the hatred of the world intensifies. This hatred must arise from the lies which the enemies of truth will engender. One of the most encouraging signs of the times, and one which gives Koreshans hope, is the tendency of the enemies of Koreshanity to concentrate their venom, and to employ the most efficient means to circulate their lies. It is only through this means that the hatred of the world can be sufficiently engendered to bring about the results of the theocrasis.

Having shown that there is no such phrase as "I AM" or "I AM THAT I AM," in the Bible, we will proceed to show what bearing it may have upon a class of antichristian men and women, who are employing the phrase as if it were the title of some Divinity. This is a perversion of both the letter and the spirit of the doctrine involved. Upon a false rendering must depend a false philosophy. The "I AM" that is so generally prevailing throughout the world, is the selfish devil that pervades the human soul, and would, if possible, make it appear that the devil is not the devil. It is not a very striking matter, that the old devil should attempt to disguise himself under a title which he supposed to be that which the Lord God had taken to himself for the very purpose of fooling the devil at the critical moment.

The sensual humanity is the mortal humanity, and is now universal. This mortality depends upon the sensual life. To become immortal there must be a radical revolution, not merely in the mode of thinking, but in the mode of DOING. "Blessed are they that DO," not they who think. Mortality is the universal condition; immortality is the condition to be acquired. It will not be obtained through the denial of the personal Messiah, who is the personal Divinity; nor will it be obtained on the lines of sensualism and selfishness. The love of money, which is the root of all evil, is one of the principal things advocated by this spurious god of the "I AM THAT I AM"-ists, and sensualism is the other.

In the Great Period of Transition.

The Messianic Door of the New Era; the Decline of Democracy and the Dawn of Universal Empire; Periodicity of Divine Manifestation.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY, the foundation science of the Koreshan System of Universology, imparts to the heirs of the world to come, the science of the laws of universal Empire. Democracy belongs to periods of transition. The present democracy, or vidualism, serves the purpose in the divine economy of giving to the thinking classes a measure of freedom in thought and speech, which prepares a ripening class of minds to become judges of the Messengers of the Almighty. The Almighty manifests himself for judgment at the end of each age, in his chosen and anointed Messenger, of whom there are always numerous counterfeits. "Know ye not," it is written, "that men shall judge messengers?" The Messenger is the ripened first-fruit of an age, involving all the holy seed of the next. In the order of the priesthood, he comes to effect an advanced degree of conjunction between man and Deity, who constitutes the anointing power of the Messenger.

Deity is the center and source of all mentality; he is in a realm of spiritual existence—a realm just as real and substantial as formulated material existence which is but the precipitate and product of the spiritual, the soil from which Deity reproduces himself. The centralization of mentality is perpetuated throughout all eternity, by the progressive involution of the advancing spirits of the just, whose "path is as a shining light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day," the Messenger of which is the King, the blessed and only potentate.

The era of the judges precedes the kingdom in both type and antitype. A little flock, a chosen generation of peculiar people, zealous of good works, becomes manifest coördinately with the coming of the Messenger. This people has been in preparation from the foundation of the age, or order of things. They have been preparing to judge themselves and to judge Messengers. This genuine Messenger of each cosmos possesses certain specific credentials which, when presented to the public, will be confirmed by the testimonies of two most powerful witnesses—the laws of the universe and the prophets of old, who possessed a knowledge of the Decalogue, the law of life and immortality, and upheld the standard of its most advanced revelation. Nineteen hundred years ago, the Messiah of the world now ending told his rejectors that had they known Moses (the law) and the prophets, they would have known him.

The Messiah of an age must ever be known by a science of the law and the prophets; never by the traditions of men, which make void the law. Men who tithe mint, anise, and cummin, and who forget "the weightier matters of the law," forget that man's first duty is to know God, in God's own chosen way of being known, by him in whom he fulfils the law of Messiahship—the Messenger of the Covenant. Character is revealed in, through, and by personality, which manifests dominating principles of judgment and affection.

Messiahs appear periodically to institute the order of things due in the order of law, by the united powers of the science and love of the law. The prophetic spirits translated by one Messiah, inspire successive prophets to foretell the characteristics and even the names of Messiahs to come, that the thoughts of the median line of racial progression may be directed in the anticipation of good things—God's things—to come, with which man has to do as he gyrates along through cycles of time in the nether world, and through its various domains of existence until he ultimates in the vortex of final revolution and transformation,—until he is at last caught up into conjunctive unity with the apex of Deific personality—the first Great Cause, the Father-Mother of all living, from whom proceed all light and life. Races, nations, all orders of humanity, have in time, each in its own order, the privilege of attaining the quality and degree of mentality fitting them for the investigative court of the highest tribunal of human life, and for beholding the Door of salvation by which they may enter into life that is life indeed—beyond the Door.

In the United States, and in lesser degrees in other countries of Christendom, individuals are protected by the forces of organized governments in what are called liberty of thought and freedom of speech. These rights of man, so called, have instituted throughout Christendom the final great battle of Armageddon, the culminating warfare between the Spirit of truth and the demons of fallacy and evil. All thoughtful men—the waking dead—are discovering themselves as standing in this world's great court of final investigation and judgment—the antitype of Pilate's judgment hall. Every man in his own order must stand before the judgment seat of Christ—the great white throne of truth, before which the Christ is justified with all them that love his appearing and kingdom.

Nineteen centuries ago the spirit of John the Baptist—the spirit of Elias, the messenger of man's final conjunction with Deity—united with that of the Lord Jehovah to energize, through the power of the Lord's theocrasis, the world that was, with a spirit that should involve from the world that now is, the mighty forces of truth in the natural or scientific degree. As an evolution of this cycle (the Door and Seed of which was Jesus, the Messiah), we find a people whose God is the Lord; who will have no other Gods take precedence of him. This people represents the ascending life of mortal humanity; its ripening harvest from the seed of Jesus; the pabulum of the indwelling Gods. As a body they formulate as a kingdom, a Grand Man of component members, whose Head is the Messiah of the world to come. His is the leading spirit of order; the crystallizer of all truth. The members of this body will tolerate democracy as a means to an end—that end being the establishment of the theocratic kingdom in earth. They love not only the appearing of the Messiah, but also the concepts of his kingdom; the laws upon which it is founded; and the principles which it will adequately represent.

The heirs of the divine kingdom are essentially imperialists. Its Imperial Head, the centralization of power, corresponds to the physical solar center. In it the throne and altar of God are united and highly exalted, and given a name above every name, at which every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess. The Imperial Center is symbolized by the sphinx, having the face of a man of the highest constructive potency—a woman whose indwelling Deity is Eloah. It has the body of a lion and the wings of an eagle, to symbolize its centralization of commercial powers sustained by science.

The Messenger of this final and universally operative imperial power of the world to come, is even now calling and preparing his people to eat with him the last supper of his great God—Eloah Jehovah. As a man in earth, he is foretold by astrology as the Aquarius now due, to usher in the triumph of scientific truth. This triumph will give to the people of the Most High, the kingdom and dominion of the whole earth. From this Messenger of the Aquarian age, are now emanating the mightiest forces in the universe—the ascended life forces from which proceed the powers and great glory of Jehovah. When the final conjunction of these mighty forces with the minds of God's waiting people, is effected by the power of the theocrasis of the now present Messiah, all the "greater things" which the Lord Jesus said those who believed in his name should do, will be done. The name of the present Messiah is prophetically indicated as the new name of Deity who, in essence, that is, in truth, is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

Genuine science is the revealer of all hidden or occult things to the rational mind. Even the mystery of Godliness, the mystery of iniquity, and the mystery of the Theocratic kingdom cease to be mysteries when the science of the law of their being is mastered by the Spirit of Truth who, through his Messengers, is able to make each order of each world or age, wise unto salvation. The Theocratic kingdom means the reign of righteousness in earth, when "the righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father," who is Eloah, the Messenger of their covenant with Jehovah.

To "do good and communicate," is righteousness. The communication of truth and goodness is the order of the Lord's day. All the goods of life—celestial, spiritual, and natural, shall focalize their powers for equitable distribution in the preëminent arch-natural Head of Theocracy, from whom must proceed every good and perfect gift which cometh from above. When the kingdoms of this world are delivered up to the Father, whose conquering power is the Sword of Truth, his Godliness will descend to all, and God will be all and in all.

Humanity has gravitated till it has reached a state where the only known god is gold, the static point of which is the outermost confine of the universe; and men are without the most remote realization of that land where the only known gold is the goodness of God, divine wisdom of divine love. Man is now so low, so degraded and dead, that nothing short of the mighty forces of the rising Sun of anthropostic Righteousness—the Father of Light and the Magnate of Life—can quicken and raise him from the grave which holds him—from the mortal body, the forces of which are all degrading. The Sun of Righteousness can change our vile bodies and transform and absorb them, that in newness of life they may shine forth in the kingdom of their Father-God, and go in and out and find pasture in a kingdom in earth, enlightened with the glory of God—the applied science of truth, which lays all the treasures of art and Nature at the feet of man.

Gold is for adorning; and when the stamp of the fiat of a fictitious money power, the product of competitive democracy, is removed from it and from its minion, silver; and when there are no graven images in any domain to testify to man's degradation or fall from his divine estate, gold and silver, in the radiance of fine brass, the product of their scientific union, may glitter in superabundance from the domes and turrets of the Theocratic city of the Imperial Kingdom, and mirror the beauties of every phase of art and Nature; but never more will they be seen or heard on the counters of the money-changers, ringing out their testimonies to the cold, hard, metallic natures of men, the graven images of the love of money, "the root of all evil," and the power of plutocracy—the democracy which is now triumphant.

The Messiah's Lament over Jerusalem.

PROF. O. F. L'AMOREAUX, A. M., PH. D.

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not! Behold your house is left unto you desolate; and verily I say unto you, ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

LET US SEE if we can fathom the meaning of the Savior's anxiety for Jerusalem, thus forcibly illustrated by that of the mother bird to give protection and warmth to her tender and helpless young. The end of the care of the hen is that her fledglings may at length reach the maturity of henhood. Jesus looked upon all men as immature, not yet having reached the state of perfect manhood—no, not even the infancy of that state. He said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life; * * * the door by which if a man enter in he shall go in and out and find pasture," that is, reach the perfection of his being.

He saw what would befall that "holy city" a few years later, because of its rejection of his salvation, when hundreds of thousands of her starved and slaughtered citizens would be carted out and burned in that type of hell, the valley of the son of Hinnom; and that famishing mothers, in their desperation, would kill and eat their own children. Among all of whom would be found not one of those who had accepted his offers of salvation. After Titus, the Roman general, had closely invested the doomed city, there was a withdrawal of the troops for three days, for which history cannot account, during which every Christian withdrew into the mountains. This was the flight which Jesus told his followers to pray might not be in the winter time, nor on the Sabbath day. He saw that the house of their glory, their temple, left desolate, deserted of its protecting power, would be burned with fire, notwithstanding the efforts of the Roman general to preserve it. He saw that these calamities would compass the final destruction and ruin of the Jewish state so completely that never after, as a people, would they bear rule over a single foot of territory as their own. But these, to the Jew portentous, events, were not the chief cause of His anxiety.

That temple was but the symbol of himself. He was God's House that would be left, as far as they were concerned, desolate, and they would be the eternal (age-lasting) losers by it. They who had looked forward for an age, to the time when they should be housed in their Messiah, the Shepherd who should gather them "with his arm and carry them in his bosom," would find that their house was left unto them desolate. He came not to save anybody from being lost, but to save those who were already lost in hell, especially the lost sheep of the House of Israel; but they had refused that salvation, and must remain lost for at least two dispensations, if they maintained that attitude of refusal until after the time of seed-sowing of that, the Christian age, was passed. Such is the plain import of Jesus' own words. "And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost [rejects the divine seed] it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world [Greek, age], nor in the world [age] to come." Just as the seed wheat that at the time of seeding refuses to be sown, cannot have forgiveness (redemption—regeneration—reproduction) either in that age—wheat cycle, or in the one to come, until in the end of the same.

Failing of this redemption which he came to bring them, the Jews would fail of the eternal salvation which it would work out for them, here in earth, raising them into the lost image and likeness of God, which is the perfection of their own being. Such, then, was the well-nigh irreparable loss of his brethren, his kinsmen according to the flesh, that moved the pity of the sorrowing Son of God. But His words still held out the assurance that, at some time during the ages, after the chastisement of their own sins had corrected them, they should again see him, when they would no longer refuse his offers of salvation, but would say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

MODERN SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY have been at war since the time of the founding of the Copernican system of astronomy; but it remained for the so called thinkers of the nineteenth century to effect a kind of "reconciliation" between the warring factions—the kind of reconciliation that obtains between the victor and the vanquished! It is interesting to note how a measure of peace has been obtained by special treaties and treatises. There has been a sweeping of the world with scientific theories; the ancient ideas of astronomy have given away to modern conceptions of the universe. By the ignorant masses, the conclusions of the astronomers are not questioned; and the theologians accept the popular system. When Laplace advocated the absurd nebular hypothesis, there was a wholesale opposition on the part of the clergy; the idea did away with the then popular theological conception that the universe was brought into existence by direct creative power of the Almighty; but the church has given away to the nebular hypothesis, until now it is almost universally accepted. When Darwin announced his theory of the evolution of man from the lower kingdoms, there was another siege of war, because the clergy reserved the special right to believe that God created man by some direct though mysterious process; but now the theory of evolution has become popular in the pulpit, and there is scarcely a clergyman to be found who does not accept the conclusions of modern science concerning the origin of man. The victory has been won by a fallacious system of science, and before it, a fallacious system of theology has given away in defeat unfelt today, because time has removed the sting and the chagrin. How, then, is the reconciliation between modern science and religion effected? Rev. Hillis, the popular clergyman in the pulpit of Beecher and Abbott, answers that "The basis upon which the reconciliation has come is very simple. The scientist and the theologian alike believe in the solidarity of the universe, and therefore, in the unity of the sciences. Since theology is a science, it must be in harmony with all the other sciences." Such harmony is found by unquestioningly adopting the conclusions of the astronomer, the chemist, the geologist, and the biologist. Then what are the clergymen to do with the Bible? "The theologians," says Dr. Hillis, "no longer hold that the Bible is a book of astronomy, or chemistry, or physiology," and concludes that theology and science strike hands in the persons of Romanes, Prof. John Fiske, and other so called scientists, who believe in God. But what do they conclude about the Bible? Why this: That the writers of the Bible knew absolutely nothing concerning astronomy, chemistry, and physiology; and in this the most popular clergymen strike hands with the higher critics in the general conclusion that the Bible is wholly unreliable concerning the most important problems which today demand solution! The next great question for the clergymen to consider, is the impossibility of reconciling modern science and theology with the Bible. The Bible will exist for ages after modern science and theology are forgotten!

Judge Clark, of North Carolina, tells in the Arena, "How Trusts can be Crushed." Regarding them as illegal combinations of capital, he advocates that they should be treated as outlaws, and denied protection and the use of the courts. This, he thinks, could be brought about by the exercise of the people's power through the election of faithful and honest representatives who should enforce the laws already on the statute books. This is easier said than done. What are the people doing now, but endeavoring to elect honest people to places of public trust? There are the officers of state; there is the great body comprising the House of Representatives; and there is the Senate. The people's will is done by these bodies, or it is not. If it is, where is the blame? If it is not, how are the people to help themselves against the conditions which lure the representatives to serve the interests of the money power? The government is under the specific control of the money power; and that power today has greater wealth and greater resources than the government itself. Judge Clark closes his article in a more logical strain than that with which he began. He cites the struggle of the American Revolution, and asserts that "the trusts of this day are a revival of the Tories of 1776, and stand for government by the moneyed classes. Are we weaker than our forefathers? They won the right of self-government. Shall we lose it?" A measure of freedom was gained by a revolutionary war. Are not the oppressive powers stronger now than then? If so, can they be crushed by anything less effective than revolution? Let the modern mind be consistent in facing the great issues of the day. Koreshans are not advocating the violent measures that must inevitably and ultimately be employed in crushing the trusts; the Koreshan forecast of the end of the age, the end of the competitive system, is simply prophetic. A terrible storm is gathering on the human sea, the whirling of a mighty vortex of judgment; and we hold that in that vortex the trusts will be dashed to pieces, for it is where great forces meet. The coming revolution will sweep away that which legislation is powerless to remove!

An Eastern clergyman concludes that God is too busy to enter very fully into man's endeavor to eradicate the evils which have fastened themselves upon the world; and that He has left man to battle for himself against the tide of sensuality and other forces which degrade the millions. Perhaps the clergyman who is able to inform us that God is too busy to pay much attention to the planes of human endeavor, might be able to suggest what it is that monopolizes the Almighty's time and attention. What has He been doing since he declared his gospel nineteen hundred years ago? The common view takes God out of the field of human activity; and the astronomer seeks employment for Him elsewhere, in the creation of other worlds to be inhabited by peoples similar to the people of the earth, and in the probable redemption of worlds which fall into states of unhappiness. What has God been doing through the ages? Koreshanity points to the pages of history, filled with the facts of great events reflexed from the activities of the divine mind in the human world. The Almighty is inseparably connected with the human kingdom; his business is with it and in it—in the field of the first great effect of his creative power. If man is to work out his own salvation, it is by reason of the great fact that God is in a nucleus of humanity, in a line of development of a people, enabling them to will and to do his good pleasure. He is in the hearts of pure aspiration, to lift them above the common plane; and He is busy building up for himself a perfect Temple of immortal flesh—the magnificent structure of the divine Majesty of the Heavens!

A new star, Nova Persei, bursts forth in the constellation Perseus, with an unsolved problem to puzzle and disturb the astronomer. From complete invisibility to a shining point of the first magnitude, the star comes, reaching its maximum brilliancy in the space of only three days; and it is said to be fading as rapidly as it came into view. The distance is fixed at about 6,000,000 times the earth's supposed distance from the sun, or about 552,000,000,000,000 miles. How do the astronomers account for its appearance? "There is a theory about it, of course," says an astronomical writer; "a theory that a sul- len, black, burnt out sphere, a dead giant of the skies, whirling through unthinkable distances, was cast into a cloud of nebulae or vapor, and the grinding of the cloud dust has set it aflame again." In other words, a body in the heavens, long since burnt out, having exhausted its fuel, leaving only burnt-out slag, with nothing left to burn, is suddenly set on fire by entering a star cloud! This is very absurd, but it is modern science, on a par with all its other conclusions. From the basis of the popular system, it is difficult to account for the sudden appearance and disappearance of stars; such phenomena tax the ingenuity of the star-gazer. It should not be difficult to account for them from a true cosmogonical concept;—it is not difficult to account for them in the Koreshan System, in which the stars are known to be focal points of light. With new electrical connections, a star may blaze out as simply as an electric light on the street; or it may disappear as easily as an electric light is turned off by means of a switch board!

The editor of the Chicago Tribune concludes, inasmuch as progress has been made under the old regime of the competitive system, that the competitive system is a promoter, and not a subverter, of civilization. The present methods have been in vogue for thousands of years; there has been competition between men, and between the nations; and it is asked if the world may not progress though the competitive system continues. There has been progress in the hells of humanity. Why, then, abolish the hells? The Iron Age has been an age of warfare; we are in it, and some are contented. Why abolish that which gives contentment to the few, that the millions may be contented also? The present conditions best serve the interests of those in power; therefore, it is perhaps thought that the Golden Age of humanity might disturb the interests of the classes to which the daily press caters. It is admitted, however, that the present economic system has its defects. It has; it is defective at the very foundation of the structure; and the fault runs all the way through the system. It is as defective as the modern man is selfish. Every age of the world's dark period has had its reformers, as well as its evils. As the forces of evil are now heading up in the trusts—the ultimate and legitimate fruit of the spirit of greed—there is also a heaping up of the forces of reform, the real elements of progress through the centuries; and these forces will not count for naught in the coming inevitable struggle!

The Louisville Courier-Journal remarks: "Prof. See, the astronomer in charge of the telescope at the Naval Academy, in Washington, calculates that in 3,000,000 years the sun will have burnt out, the solar system will be in darkness, and all life will be frozen to death. Don't deny this unless you are able to furnish the proof." Very well; this is good advice for the agnostics. But we deny See's conclusions, according to the above stipulations. The central sun of the physical cosmos is eternal, and never burns out, because its supply of fuel is inexhaustible. The universe is the continuous product of the Eternal Creator. The eternal relation between creation and the Creator is reciprocal and interdependent. The visible sun is not the center of the solar system; it is itself a pendant sun, a projection, a refocalization or involution, through refractive atmospheres, of the radiations from the light side of the central sun of the cosmic cell. It will in time, cease to shine; while the modern astronomer is endeavoring to make the sun remote in space and the time of its going out remote in time, the Koreshan astronomer is interested in having the sun near at hand, and the time of its burning out as soon as possible, that the growing Zodiacal light may become transformed to the solar annulus and bring universal day and perpetual spring. The expected disaster will prove, contrary to the views of the astronomer, the greatest boon to all natural kingdoms!

Guessing at the age of the earth occupies considerable of the geologists' time; when they guess once, they immediately begin searching for the foundation of another and a different guess. However, the work is conducted enthusiastically, because it is supposed that any evidence which places the period of the earth's formation beyond six thousand years ago, constitutes a refutation of the cosmogony of the Bible, a blow at the infallibility of the Scriptures. Fortunately, the truth which Moses revealed is not identical with the modern conception and interpretation of his declarations. A scientist now comes forward with the results of a long, learned, and tedious calculation from the basis of the quantity of carbonates annually deposited in the seas by the rivers, showing that the earth has been in existence at least 45,000,000 years, with the surmise that the time from the beginning of the formation of the earth in a molten state to the present, may exceed a billion years. The Bible, however, refuses to be refuted by such calculations, and protests that the common chronology of Usher is not a part of itself. No matter how far back the existence of the earth may be traced by men who misread the records of the rocks, the Bible goes one better—it teaches that the earth abides forever; that the universe is eternal, in accordance with the law by which everything that is now has always been, and will always be.

It is a significant fact that the spirit of the revival is passing from the church; it is because the church is reaching its last stages of declension. During the past century there were numerous revivals; forces would heap up in the different denominations, and find expression in enthusiastic batteries, headed by powerfully magnetic personalities. But the revival is passing. What has become of the spirit of earnestness which expressed itself in the church in the past? Where is the enthusiasm of the Advent body which, near the middle of the past century, stirred the hearts of hundreds of thousands? The progressive forces of Christendom are heaped up in Koreshanity for renewal, for transformation, for the coming world-wide revival of genuine religion. The modern church is resorting to new methods of increasing its membership. The pulpit has lost its power; it is now utilized for mere entertainment, while aggressive work is delegated to the laymen. If names are enrolled on the church books today, it is sufficient; no change of conduct is required; obligations extend only to current expenses and church mortgages, and to the work of maintaining the form of the old shell which has long since lost its life!

An Indiana man is conducting a grocery store "as Jesus would." He is to be commended because he refuses to sell drugs, whiskey, and tobacco; he buys and sells for cash only; carries no insurance, and pays his clerks every night, because, he says, he has no right to keep their money the whole of the week. He is easing his conscience by departing in a few instances from the regular methods of conducting the grocery business. Perhaps it has not occurred to him that Jesus taught a system of communism, which is quite distinct from the competitive business in which employes are put off with "wages." Who gives this groceryman the right, from the Biblical point of view, to monopolize the income of his business, while men who work as diligently as he in the same room, receive only wages? To do otherwise, however, would be carrying the advertising dodge too far!

In a scientific paper, read before an English society, Dr.

McNamara undertakes to prove that the principal difference between man and the ape is that man can speak while the ape cannot, owing to the mere lack of Broca's convolution in the brain. This is either lowering man to nearly the plane of the ape, or elevating the ape to nearly the plane of man. Intellectuality counts for naught, because it would cast a few reflections, on the evolutionist at least, to dishonor his forefathers by imputing to them low moral or intellectual characteristics. However, if the evolutionist wants to claim kin with the ape, we have no objections; the kind of theory he advocates perhaps justifies the conclusion!

"The twentieth century will have a poor opinion of the nineteenth. It botched nearly everything it touched." Botching and patching is the order of modern times; actual botchwork and patchwork are in the fields of so called science, religion, and social and political economy. The twentieth century must do better; but in order to do so, it must have new conceptions and new powers. There must be a radical transformation in the entire world of human relations; a new revelation must bring a mental revolution. The name of the new scientific revelation is Koreshanity; it will bring the realization of the world's hope.

Astronomer Newcomb has concluded that the universe may be limited, and its space limited; and that the Milky Way, with its clusters of stars and nebulae, may mark that limit. Ceaston, of the Rotterdam Observatory, however, holds that the Milky Way system is but one of millions of stellar systems in existence, and that nebulae faintly visible are other Milky Ways outside of the general system of stars which we view. These are examples of how nearly the astronomers come to knowing anything definite concerning the character and extent of the universe!

Unification of the school systems is agitating the educational world. There is much fault to be found with the present competitive school methods, a lack of harmony in the courses adopted and studies pursued in the different schools of the country. The agitation, however, is not by way of effective reform, but by way of the formation of an educational trust, at the head of which the Chicago University is endeavoring to place itself.

Joan of Arc, a progressive mind which stirred France and made trouble for the Catholic clergy, is now declared by the Roman Congregation of Rites, to be a saint. Time may change the attitude of the church, but it cannot change the facts of the persecution by the church, of men and women who have dared to oppose her teachings. The making of saints is now popular; the persecution of them was the order of the day centuries ago.

Coal is darkness which can be felt. The world is feeling the effect of the substantial darkness which prevails throughout civilization. Darkness is something; if it were nothing it could produce no effects. Darkness in any degree, is as substantial as light. Scottoine is the antithet of photoine.

By the fruits of modern systems we may know their character, whether they be scientific, religious, economic, or educational systems. Truth and good are borne together; likewise, fallacy and evil. Which pair of co ordinates is borne by modern institutions?

It is said, "There is nothing so peaceful in this world as a graveyard;" and yet there is nothing more ag-grave-ating to the human family than death.

The world's great universal disease may be divided into two general phases: Weakness and wickedness.

The use of "I am" by the faddists is a mere play on words; there is nothing divine in it or them!

It is evident that we are living in an electric age; so many shocking things occur!

The huge beams in the eye of the mental scientist are mistaken for sunbeams!

Fads and fallacies are transient and passing; truth is ancient and enduring.

Divine love laughs at modern locksmiths and obstructionists.

Modern inspiration is the devil's breath.

Jupiter and the Copernican System.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Do not Jupiter and his moons constitute a miniature of the Copernican system, hung up in the sky where all can see it? The moons can be seen going behind the planet, and appearing on the opposite side, then going in front and casting a shadow on the face of the planet. Please explain.
—A READER.

We may ask, Do not Jupiter and his moons constitute a miniature of the Ptolemaic system, corroborating the conclusions of Ptolemy that the earth is the center of the universe? In this system, the earth as the center of revolution, sustains some likeness to Jupiter as a center of his system of satellites; there is no suggestion in the Jovian phenomena that the earth revolves about the sun!

The Koreshan System maintains that the planets revolve about the central sun; its planetary system is complete, and accounts for all the motions of the planets, and explains their functions as well. We may ask, Do not Jupiter and his moons constitute a miniature of the Koreshan System?

The question arises in consideration of modern astronomy—What is it? The leading astronomers now conclude with Prof. Young, of the Princeton University, that our moon does not revolve about the earth at all, but simply attends the earth in its motion through space. The same logic forces the conclusion that the earth does not revolve about the sun, but, in company with the general family of planets supposed to constitute the solar system, attends the sun in its motion through space. These are the latest conclusions in the field of astronomy; the older ideas of the actual revolution of satellites about the planets, and the planets about the sun, are being rejected. The Copernican system takes on a number of new features, which so completely change its fundamental conclusions as to make an entirely new system. How then does the actual revolution of the satellites of Jupiter about the planet, corroborate these newer conclusions? If the moon does not revolve about the earth, then the moon has no orbit around the earth; and the earth has no revolution around the sun in an orbit. What, then, becomes of the Newtonian theory of gravitation? and what is to be done with Kepler's "three great laws"? The astronomical world is finding less use for them as the years go by. Jupiter and his moons do not constitute a miniature of the kind of astronomy that obtains at the beginning of the twentieth century!

The conclusion that the earth is analogous to the planets, is an unfounded assumption. As well suppose that the earth is like the sun, like the moon, and like the stars at the same time! Why single out six or eight bodies in the heavens, and suppose the earth is like them, to the exclusion of the millions of heavenly bodies? The fact is the earth is like none of them, because they are lights—bodies subservient to the earth, which is the basis of them all.

Jupiter and other planets constitute a miniature of a system which exists in the shell of the earth—they are reflections from that system. Jupiter in the sky is produced from the Jupiterian division of the great alimentary canal of the physical cosmos. Jupiter in the earth—in the shell—is a disk of mercury; around it move five or more similar and smaller discs; energies from these discs are reflected in the sky and materialize, forming spheres, the central and larger one being attended by the smaller. The moons of Jupiter and all the phenomena observable in the eclipses of Jupiter and occultations of its satellites, are accounted for by the fact of the actual existence of these spheres in the heavens. There is no proof that the earth is a convex sphere like Jupiter; there is no proof that the earth is a planet. On the contrary, we have the most direct and indisputable evidence that the earth is a hollow sphere, about 8,000 miles in diameter, and contains all there is of the universe, including Jupiter and his satellites.

The Fall of Lucifer.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Will you please answer the following questions in THE FLAMING SWORD? (1) Do the sun's rays move in curved lines? (2) What will become of the souls of the great mass of mankind after the translation of the number necessary to make up the 144,000 Sons of God in the immortal state? (3) Is there any truth in the Bible account of the rebellion of Lucifer, the Prince of Light? (4) Apart from the truth or falsehood of either, do you not think that the theory of spiritual life enunciated by Marie Corelli is a thousand times more beautiful than the theory of KORESH?—M. W., Ottumwa, Ia.

(1) The rays of light which descend from the visible projected sun are propagated in curved lines, as indicated in the central diagram on the last page of THE FLAMING SWORD. However, the perpendicular rays are straight—that is, the rays which descend from the zenith because there is no refraction. The rays which extend farthest out and over the earth's surface are curved most. In this way the projected sun in our atmosphere illumines one half of the earth's surface at any given moment.

(2) The world of humanity will continue to exist right along through the ages. The 144,000 immortal Sons of God constitute the fifth natural kingdom of life; that kingdom comes to bless the masses, who will be subjects of the great Universal Empire. It will be a period of world-progress; the souls of men will continue to re-embodiment through the ages of light, in their march toward the goal in coming cycles. There are all stages of progress in the world today; at the end of this great cycle, 144,000 will be redeemed; and at the end of every cycle of 24,000 years, the same number are made immortal and enter the realm of eternal life. However, salvation from the curse during the Golden Age is universal; millions of egos become angels, by way of preparation for sonship in a coming cycle.

(3) The Bible account of the fall of Lucifer is correct and true; there is nothing in the Bible that is false. Jesus was Lucifer, the Light-bearer; he fell into sensual humanity, into the mortal world, for purposes of propagation of himself, and for the salvation of those into whom he went. The fall of the Light bearer, the Seed of the Almighty, is as simple and as complex as the fall of a seed and its death in the common soil. The Light-bearer fell that he might produce other Light-bearers—the 144,000 Sons of God.

(4) We cannot conceive of any theory being more beautiful than the great truths of life enunciated by KORESH. There is nothing really beautiful apart from truth and life. We see grandeur and beauty in Nature, because it is true; we may be filled with the sense of the sublime, but only that which is real can satisfy that sense. If there are beautiful and sublime things in the physical world, in the plane of the kingdoms beneath man, there is that which is more beautiful and sublime in man himself—in the perfected man, who contains the world involved, all Nature refined, and in whom the very climax of all existence is reached.

The "electric theory" of Marie Corelli, which holds that life and love pervade the space of the physical cosmos, is neither beautiful nor true; it is a vagary. There is no "electric circle" in space from which man may derive inspirations of life and light. Marie Corelli has no conception of the character and location of the spiritual world, and she is in total ignorance of what constitutes the perfection, the glory, and the sublimity of divine existence. It is easier to be loyal to an imaginary hero like Heliobas, in "The Romance of Two Worlds" and "Ardath," than it is to be loyal to the manifestation of Living Truth in Personality in the world of reality.

The Root of all Evil.

Rev. E. M. Castle Lectures on the Love of Money and How to Eradicate It.

Rev. E. M. Castle gave another of her interesting lectures, in the Koreschan series, at Memorial hall, [Springfield, Mass.,] last evening. She said in part:

"If it be desirable to correct existing evils whether in religious, moral, social, or purely secular life, the first essential is to locate the root of the evil. Everyone can comprehend the fact that the love of money moves the secular world, and that this love is the impulse to activity in the secular domain; the commercial idea being the central one. Indeed, commerce is the central principle of universal activity, commerce proper being the interchange of the products of existence to insure the perpetuity of existence; interchange for any other purpose being a violation of the commercial principle.

"The primary impulse, the root of any activity, is instrumental in determining the character of the resultant activity, and this character may be judged by its fruits, in the conditions it produces. The present results of our so called Christian civilization, including its religious, social, and secular commerce, have been bluntly indicated by 'Mark Twain' in his recent article in the North American Review, which is attracting such wide and varied comment. It has displeased those who would explain away the facts by giving euphonious terms to horrid deeds. A denial of fact may bolster up a rotten order for a time, but only until some one has the sustained courage to speak the truth and keep on speaking it for a season. And though to acknowledge the facts of social, religious, political, industrial, and commercial corruption, is to assail the character of the very foundations of the existing order of things, we would say, 'Let justice be done though the heavens fall.'

"The details of existing conditions need not be recounted, for all who are alive to the facts of the present, know and deplore them. We are concerned with the remedy. There is but one logical method of dealing with the matter, which is, to ascertain the primary root of the evils, and there apply the remedial agencies. The existing conditions of our so called civilization are the evidences of social, religious, and secular unbalance, produced by violation of the principles of righteous commerce in these several domains. A true commerce is interchange for the sake of true balance, which means harmony, rest, happiness. A state of unbalance is one of inharmony, disease, wretchedness.

The present unbalance of conditions, and consequent unrest, in all spheres of human activity, results from the exaltation of a false criterion of commerce, that is, a fictitious standard of judgment, in each of the several domains of commerce, sexual, religious, and secular. Money is properly the guard, or criterion, of commerce, and wherever commercial activities, of whatever kind or degree, obtain, there either a true standard determines to righteousness or a false standard to unrighteousness. The unbalanced activities of an unrighteous order imply labor, while the balanced, recreative activities of a righteous order mean rest.

"The love of money, by which is signified perverted desire operating in violation of righteous commercial principles, is undoubtedly the root of evil. Beginning in the sex domain, this violation extends throughout all realms of human activity, culminating in that most external traffic ordinarily meant by the term commerce. Through this violation has been produced conditions corresponding to those recorded in Genesis as conditions of the primeval curses,—woman's subjugation to man, and man's subjugation to labor. Whether one believes or disbelieves in the Bible, the fact remains that the present condition of man, under the curse of labor, and of woman, under the curse of man's dominion, accords with the statement in Genesis. Natural conditions must have a natural cause and a natural remedy. The cause we define to be the love of money. The remedy must be the eradication of that love from the hearts of humanity. The method of this accomplishment is the question of prime importance.

"The central idea embraced by the curse is labor; that of the male, drudgery; that of the female, the labor of excessive child-bearing, followed by excessive drudgery as an inevitable sequence. The present agitation of the woman question and the labor question is preliminary to the removal of the curse. When woman learns her duty as conservator of the life forces of the race, and performs it, her rights will take care of themselves, and when man finds the love of money eradicated from his heart in the removal of all necessity for the use of fictitious money, the curse of labor, with all it entails on both man and woman, will be lifted.

"The lust of money, the greed for the accumulation of wealth, urges to inordinate activity on the part of the wealth-holders and the enslaved masses, there obtaining an overwrought mental activity on one hand and an overwrought muscular activity on the other. This abnormal impulse to activity creates the demand for increased stimulus in the form of food and drink, furnishing fuel to the passions of sense. The love of money is the root not only of the evil of drudgery, but of the liquor and sex evils, as well as of the crimes of wars waged for the sake of commerce, in the name of civilization, and of the hypocrisy of those who go to heathen lands to pray, and stay to prey. Moreover, the anxiety engendered by the present social, political, and industrial unbalance is the fertile source of disease. All these conditions act and react upon one another with almost bewildering complexity, but the root of the aggregate evils is one and the same.

"A few simple principles lie at the foundation of social and moral life, which operate either for or against the general and particular welfare. However involved and complicated the machinery of government may become, even passing beyond the aspect of common apprehension, yet simple principles comprise the foundations of the system. There are two distinct phases of human impulse, each universal in scope and application, but antagonistic in character, in consequence of which only one can be successfully operative at a time. One is the competitive impulse and activity, the selfish; the other is the participative, or system of united life. They possess not one principle in common; therefore, the laws which operate in one cannot enter into the formulation of the other.

"Koreshanity differs from the teachings of ordinary Socialism, not greatly as to the character of the system to replace the present competitive system, but emphatically as to the method of the transition. In the great controversy between concentrated wealth and diffused poverty, the issue is already made between Socialism and private property. The rapid concentration of the forces that control wealth is rapidly pushing the controversy to the acute stage. The anti-trust element fails to locate the root of the trust, the origin of which may be found by whoso will honestly consider, in the marriage of the protective to the competitive system, it being the proper function of money, the divine, to secure the bonds of this wedlock. No divorce of the two now, such as some of the anti-trust element advocate, can send that progeny back into the loins from which it came. Already the precocious infant has strength to control its parents, not alone one, but both of which are responsible for its existence.

"A certain class affect to believe that these industrial combinations will come peacefully into the people's control, through government ownership. This is a delusive hope. The trusts are simply the money power in organization, and the controlling influence of government at present is this same money power. For government as at present constituted to take control of the means of productions and distribution would be merely a nominal change, without any actual change of the controlling influence. This is as it should be, while the present commercial standard is maintained. So long as money is enthroned in the hearts of men as the supreme object of regard, it must exercise the most potent influence, and the money power will continue to determine the condition, and the condition will determine the arguments that sustain it.

"The existing evils can but intensify until a revolution takes place. That a bloodless revolution will take place, we maintain. This revolution being primarily in the heart of humanity, but while this essential change is in process, it will be accompanied in another field by a bloody revolution, which will destroy the existing system. A controversy marked on one side by a passionate sense of wrong and a spirit to demand redress, and on the other hand by a firm determination to maintain the vested right to control the resources of life, can but resolve itself to an issue of blood. Hope of a bloodless issue evinces not better heart, but merely poorer thought; for even the wisdom that foresees and admits this outcome, deplors it; but knows that no power can avert it. The facetious must exhaust themselves in the death struggle of the old order.

"In the meantime the lesson will be learned that either gold or silver, or both, or paper based on either, is a fictitious standard of value. It is the fictitious valuation given to a particular commodity by government that has operated to place gold on the throne of commerce, making it finally the sole arbiter of human destiny. The removal of the government stamp from gold, would reduce it to its commodity value. The love of money will be eradicated from the human heart through the establishment of a social and industrial order, where a fictitious standard of valuation will no longer sway judgment; but where the value of human performance as determined by use, will be the criterion. Such a system will bring about an equilibrium of industry, culture, and wealth; and by removing the abnormal impulse to activity, obtaining in the desire to exercise unrighteous power through possession of a material to which a fictitious valuation is given through the necessities of the unrighteous competitive system, will enable the race to revert to its normal poise."—Springfield Daily News, Feb. 18, 1901.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

American Review of Reviews.—The Editor's topics, The Progress of the World, in March issue, contains discussion of many important subjects and current questions, such as our Cuban relations, The Hague wedding, the work of Congress, Mrs. Nation's crusade, recent lynching in the West and South, and railroad combinations and the steel trust. W. T. Stead contributes a character sketch of King Edward VII, while a New Way of Settling Labor Disputes is discussed by John R. Commons. Scenes of Country and Town in Australia are finely illustrated with twenty photographs. Twenty-one leading articles in other magazines are reviewed, and the cartoon department contains history in caricature. 25 cents per copy; $2.50 a year. 13 Astor Place, New York City.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.—The March number will be generally regarded as the best issue in the history of the magazine. Farther North Than Nansen, is a vivid account of Abruzzi's dash toward the Pole. Scientific Child Study, constitutes the basis of an article by Edward Marshall regarding mental and physical experiments with 7,900 public school children. The Road to Frontenac is a new serial story beginning with this number. The Barber Surgeon, a story of Wall street life, and An Explorer, with others, make up an excellent selection of fiction. 10 cents per copy. $1.00 a year. 141-147 Fifth ave., New York City.

The Sphinx.—We have the January number, announcing that the price of subscription has been reduced from $3.00 a year to $1.00, and is now only 10 cents per copy. The magazine is of the same size and character as before. This is distinctly an astrological journal, and contains many excellent things in this line; it excels all other astrological publications that we have seen. 336 Boylston street, Boston, Mass.

Mind.—The opening paper of the March number is by a woman, who, in discussing the Value of the Unbalanced Man, shows what the world owes to its eccentric geniuses. Wagner's Conception of the Mission of Art is by B. O. Flower, literary editor of the Arena. The Mind is the leading metaphysical magazine of the new thought school, and is increasing in interest. $2.00 a year. Alliance Pub. Co., New York.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

We have established four new departments to our work. Orders promptly filled by mail or express. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

Single, horse-hide, 50c. Double swing shell and canvas, several grades, from 75c to $1.25. Extra fine material and finish, $1.50. Packed in neat box. Also strops at 10c., 25c., and 40c.—send 8c. for postage on orders less than 50c. Mail orders a specialty.

The Literature of Koreshanity

Uncovers the Mystery of Ages.

THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A glimpse of Koreshan Universology, in its application to human thought and life, preparatory to the establishment of the Social Theocratic System, called the Kingdom of God, may be obtained by a careful study of fundamental principles.

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DR. CYRUS R. TEED, OF CHICAGO.

The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodesic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is enmeshed at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Totten's Astronomical Cryptogram Examined.

A Misfit Key to the Book of Revelation; Fails to Unlock the Mysteries of Divine Existence; Pertinent Questions for Professor Totten to Answer.

UNDER THE FLASHING HEAD-LINE, "Revelation of St. John Solved by Cryptogram," the Chicago American has a lengthy article on Cryptogramia Totten-sonia, founded upon a false interpretation of an utterly spurious system of astronomy. If Professor Totten is correctly reported, he says: "The throne itself was some grand central sun, where God dwells, unapproachable, surrounded by ineffable light and fire; the one that sat thereon was indescribable, and the halo was the many-hued, iridescent rainbow reflected through the photosphere that clothed the terrible orb." If it be admitted that this universe is what the term universe implies, it follows that it is one great system governed by a complete and uniform function. It would logically follow, that "some grand central sun" could be no other than the central sun of the physical universe, if we are to locate the throne of Deity as a material throne at any material center in space.

Let us examine this cryptogram of Professor Totten's from the common astronomical point of view. First, the universe—according to Professor Totten—is illimitable; this is also in agreement with the universal astronomical modern conception. If the universe is illimitable, then it has no limit. If it had a center, it would have at least one limitation, and therefore would not be illimitable. But according to the Copernican system of astronomy, there can be no central limitation, for there can be no central sun, hence no central material throne upon which Professor Totten's god can sit. If the Copernican system were true, the solar system would revolve around a great sun in company with ten thousand other solar systems as great as ours—and even greater. That center around which these thousands of solar systems are revolving, with all their retinue of solar fields, would be revolving around another greater sun incalculably distant, out in the interminable space.

The very conception of the Copernican idea precludes the possibility of any such thing as a central throne of the physical universe. The impossibility of the conception of a physically central sun has made impossible the conception of a central consciousness called God, hence the atheistic determination of the Copernican system of astronomy. With the indescribability of the one who sits upon this nondescript throne of Professor Totten's, we present another cryptogram from no less authority than Ezekiel, who regards the occupant of the throne not as indescribable, but rather as perfectly describable, and in agreement with every other Biblical description of the Deity. Ezekiel declares he "saw visions of God." In this he does not say from, but of God. His visions were of God. This means that his visions were an analysis of Deity, and this analysis was not indescribable, but altogether describable. What did he see when he had visions of God? He saw God in symbolic configuration.

And I looked, and behold, a whirlwind came out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the color of amber, out of the midst of the fire. Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures. And this was their appearance; they had the likeness of a man.

These four parts of a describable and visually approachable being were signalized by four distinct characteristics; namely, the face of a man, the face of a lion, the face of a bullock, and the face of an eagle. These four living creatures constituted, in their summary, the likeness of a man, and this was the vision of, and the appearance of Deity himself.

And every one had four faces, and every one had four wings. And their feet were straight feet; and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot: and they sparkled like the color of burnished brass. And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings. Their wings were joined one to another; they turned not when they went; they went every one straightforward. As for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man, and the face of a lion, on the right side: and they four had the face of an ox [bullock] on the left side; they four also had the face of an eagle. Thus were their faces: and their wings were stretched upward; two wings of every one were joined one to another, and two covered their bodies. And they went every one straightforward: whither the spirit was to go, they went; and they turned not when they went. As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps; it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning. And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces. The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the color of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel. When they went, they went upon their four sides: and they turned not when they went. As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their rings were full of eyes roundabout them four. And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them; and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up. Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels. When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.

And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the color of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above. And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies. And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host: when they stood, they let down their wings. And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings. And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, [Does Professor Totten believe this to be the throne of God—the throne he mentions in his cryptogram?] as the appearance of a sapphire stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the appearance of a man above upon it.

We would also like to ask Professor Totten if the appearance of a man on this throne was to Ezekiel the manifestation of God; and if not, what did Ezekiel have a vision of when he saw this man upon his throne as above described?

And I saw as the color of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins [whose loins?] even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about. As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord; and when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

Was this the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ? Was it the Lord Jesus who sat upon this throne? Is this the throne of God? Is the Lord the God of heaven, as it is declared of him, and if so, is God a man? Will Professor Totten please answer these questions?

Ezekiel has herein described what Professor Totten has declared to be "indescribable," if the Professor is correctly reported. Who is right, Professor Totten or the prophet Ezekiel? We would much rather take Ezekiel for our authority than the materialist, Professor Totten. If there be an "Illimitable universe," which therefore has no center nor circumference, in which there are innumerable suns which the astronomers say are, many of them, much larger than our sun, and have their planetary systems, why is it that the wise Professor selects our seven little planets of this one solar system of thousands, to represent the seven lamps or torches of fire? Are these planets more specifically torches or lamps than the seven pleiades? Are the seven planets of this one solar system all the planets there are belonging to the great illimitable thing which, according to Professor Totten, has no limitation, and consequently no central sun?

The physical universe has a center and a circumference; consequently it has form. It has its definite limitations and one, and only one, center. This physical universe is the correspondent of the anthropostic domain, in which all intellectuality obtains and dwells. The bright and morning star in the physical heavens is not intellectual, it is merely physical light and various other energies. But it is the correspondent of the Lord Jesus, who was the bright and morning Star of the anthropostic cosmos.

The throne of God and the Lamb was manifest at the beginning of the dispensation as the Son of God. Jesus said, "I am the door." If any Door is ever opened in heaven, or if any has been opened, that Door was and will be Christ the Lord. John was in the spirit. Will Professor Totten have the audacity to tell us that the things which John was permitted to see, were things belonging to nature? All the things seen by the Revelator were from a spiritual, not a natural point of view. They pertained to the anthropostic cosmic order. The throne set in heaven was none other than the intellectuality in the interior of the human race. The one who sat upon this throne was Jesus Christ the Lord. To look upon He was like jasper, because it is white, and as a symbol represents scientific truth. He was like the sardine stone, because he united both truth and good in their ultimate degree. John saw the future of the church in its resurrected state, when at the end of the age there should come another personal manifestation of Deity who would constitute the open Door, as the man Jesus was the open Door at the beginning of the age.

The rainbow round about the throne like an emerald, is predicated of those who will accompany the Son of man as his chosen vessels of Apostolic power and authority. At the end and beginning, when the Lord sets his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, he will call around him a people of a specific character to be receptive of his life when, in the theocrasis, he passes into his New Church to baptize it with the spirit of its regeneration. This bow is the same that is mentioned in the blessing of Jacob upon Joseph: "His bow abode in strength." This is the bow of divine natural life, which surrounds Joseph at the time of his final reincarnation at the close of the Christian dispensation. The rainbow which John saw was none other than the group of faithful followers who will accompany the Messianic manifestation at the beginning of the new dispensation. These are conditions, qualities, and characteristics of the firstfruits of the New Church, but they are also the correspondences of the things that are in the physical universe.

Twenty-four seats round about the throne, signifies a definite number of persons who will comprise the order corresponding to the progress of the human race through a period of time marked by the movement of the sign on the physical Zodiac. This is because all human progress is marked by astronomical progress, and its description is portrayed in language which corresponds to astro-biologic signs. That they were clothed in white raiment, means that they were made chaste through the application of the principles of purity. Crowns of gold upon their heads, implies that they are in the full fruits of righteousness. The head is the all of life in first and last things. Gold symbolizes the goods or uses of natural life. Out of the throne—out of the intellectual status, which is the throne, as the affectional is the altar—proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices. Lightnings proceed from the conflict of truth with error, and are manifest when in the promulgation of truth the principles of truth are illustrated by rational processes. The promulgation of the truths of life will produce the conditions of life. These conditions are the conditions of immortality, hence the thunderings are the creations of immortality in the body. Jesus was the Word of God, hence he was the Voice of God. The regeneration of the Sons of God constitutes the voices referred to in this description of John the Revelator.

The “seven lamps of fire” are the seven churches which are to appear at the end of the age as the fruit of the dispensation. If this explanation is disputed, refer to the twentieth verse of the first chapter of Revelation, and notice the explanation of “the stars” and the “seven lamps of fire” as therein defined. The “seven stars” are the angels of the seven churches; and the seven lamps are the seven churches. But Totten says that the seven lamps or torches of fire are the seven dominant planets, while we say that the seven dominant planets are only the correspondences of the seven churches. These were the seven Spirits of God. As the natural sun manifests in the prismatic refractions of the solar radiations, the seven colors of the rainbow, so the prismatic refractions of the mental rays of Deity manifest the seven churches. In the consecutive order of time, there have been seven distinct divine overshadowings. We may illustrate these overshadowings by the baptism of the Spirit which occurred nineteen hundred years ago. God was manifest in the flesh. After the crucifixion and resurrection, the Lord dematerialized and became the Holy Spirit. This was one of the Spirits of God, and will result in the development of the church at the end of the dispensation now with us. The seven Spirits of God operative at the end of the age, are the spirits actuating the seven churches which represent seven distinct principles of immortal life.

The “sea of glass before the throne” does not mean the vast ethereal blue, as Totten says, but the mental perspicuity of the minds who possess the truth. It is said to be like crystal, because the crystalline form of truth is manifest primarily in one mind. Truth crystallized is not like truth fluent. Water is the symbol of truth in its communicative state.

The four beasts are the same noted in Ezekiel, and also in other parts of Revelation. These beasts are the lion, the bullock, the man, and the eagle. They have their correspondence in the Zodiac of the physical heavens. The beasts of Revelation do not belong to the physical, but to the anthropotic Zodiac. The lion (or one of the beasts) is the principle and application of commerce in its every domain. These beasts were full of eyes before and behind. These are intellectual powers that enable one to apply the experiences of the past to things present and future. From what had occurred in the past, they could observe the things to come. This means merely, that they had all prophetic power.

The lion is the power of commerce; the calf (bullock), the liberty of commerce; the man, the adjustment of commerce, and the eagle, the appropriations of commerce. The four beasts represent the four cardinal principles of the New Church, which ramify into all the activities of the divine natural order. As these activities are the functions of the golden candlestick, and the candlestick has its six branches, it follows that the wings or powers must reside in the six wings of the central church or central power. Wings always signify powers.

If we can define the primary and fundamental laws of commerce, we can determine the character of each of the six wings. We have said that the lion signifies the power of commerce. The first two of these wings pertain to the head. They are distinctively, the love of commerce and the wisdom of commerce. Commerce means more than the function as exercised in the secular domain, but in whatsoever field it is considered, it is conducted on the basis of six distinct principles and elements of execution. The love of commerce, to be divinely legitimate, must include the love of its pursuit for its highest and best uses. This can only be true on the basis of love to the neighbor. This would involve the highest wisdom, which is always the accompaniment of the supreme love. The wings that accompany the body are the relations of the uses of commerce to the body, which, in the body politic, involve the economical uses of commerce in the interests of the masses instead of in the interests of the few, as in the perverted commerce now operative throughout the world. The wings which cover the body, in this special domain, include the industrial system, and the collective and distributive system. The ultimates of commerce are the feet, and in this is involved the two elements of life—perpetuity and enjoyment.

In the consideration of this subject in the higher domain, in the order of consecution, we begin with the Lord in his Messiahship at the beginning of the age. As the central star of the alchemico-organic cosmos radiates its energies to the circumference and limitation of its spheres of operation, so the mental and spiritual energies from the anthropostic Star are radiated to the extremity of the dispensation, where they culminate in the materialization of the New Church. John saw down through the age, in the spirit, the progressions of spiritual life as they corresponded to the coincident progressions of external human existence. When one is able to translate the language of spiritual things into the language of natural things, or vice versa, we may comprehend from the one, the significations of the other. Jesus was the head of the church in the consecutive order of its progress through the dispensation. He was the Lion of the tribe of Judah, because he was the center of that commerce which would culminate in the regeneration of the Sons of God. As the Lion, He was the center of the collection of the lambs of God, which he gathered with his arm and carried in his bosom, and also the center from which distribution was made in the dissemination of the seed of reproduction, or, what is the same, regeneration. His two wings were the powers of his possibility to impregnate the church for regeneration. This possibility was inresident with two loves and their corresponding wisdoms; the love of the Lord to quicken his people, and the love of his people to be quickened. This included their corresponding wisdoms. Jesus knew how to baptize his church, and they knew how to be baptized. His love for his people and their love for him did the work of the first and highest powers.

The two wings which cover the body, are the confession of and obedience to the Lord. The body could not exist in its heavenly sphere of uses without these two principles and their application to the continuation of spiritual life. Without the confession of the humanity of the Lord and God, there could be no heavenly influx by which heavenly perpetuity is maintained and perpetuated. The end of the dispensation is reached in the manifestation of the New Church, manifest as the seven distinct orders. These seven churches are the seven planets of anthropostic existence, and they correspond to the seven planets in the alchemico-organic (physical) cosmos. There are two powers which cover the feet. The feet of the dispensation reside in the consummated New Church. The first wing is the manifestation of the Messenger of the Covenant, and the second wing is his acknowledgment. Here again, are applied the two great laws of confession and obedience.

The Pure Gospel and Its Perversion.

The Striking Difference Between the Primitive Christian System and Modern Christian Socialism; the Highest Ideal of the Degenerate Man.

BEFORE US IS AN EXHIBIT of the "Gospel" of the Social Crusader. We quote from J. Stitt Wilson: "But in this new moral teaching there inheres a new spiritual gospel. I find no ground for a better social order, or an ethic, new or old, apart from the essential unity of man in God. The soul is in the Infinite, and its supreme liberty is found in abandonment to its divinest ideals. The soul rests only in God. It acknowledges its possibilities and resources in the Father, and in this acknowledgment, ever new, it finds the final answer to life. The spiritual element of the new gospel will be the call to men to become in attitude, in heart, in motive, the sons of God, just as Jesus taught. Every man is potentially a son of God, a free soul, finding harmony and realizing abundant life through glorious human fellowships, and communion with God. It is for the New Gospel to call men by thousands to the actual sonship in God, to which their inherent nature destines them."

We desire to call attention to the difference between this "New Gospel" and the old gospel of the Lord himself. "The soul is in the Infinite, and its supreme liberty is found in abandonment to its divinest ideals." The Lord Jesus made an undeniable, unequivocal, and unmistakable difference between the soul which is in God and the soul which is in the devil. If J. Stitt Wilson and his confrere, Professor Herron, imagine that they can successfully develop and promulgate a gospel in direct opposition to the gospel of the Lord, they will find to their shame and disgrace that the Lord's gospel, after all, has the preëminence, and will endure after Wilson's "New Gospel" is relegated to oblivion. The soul of the redeemed is in the "infinite" (finite, finished), but the soul of the unregenerate is in the devil, and the works of the devil it will perform. The highest ideal of the unregenerate soul is to perform the works of the unregenerate man. What, may we ask, is the highest ideal of that soul of which the Lord said, "Ye are of your father the devil, and the works of your father ye will do"? Will this highest ideal lead to the works of righteousness?

If the prophetic declarations of the Lord and his disciples amount to anything, we may expect to see a radical division, at the end of the age, of the just and the unjust. There is "the essential unity of man and God." This essential unity, however, is in the ones who have become the Sons of God through obedience to the laws of immortal life. There is no essential unity of God with men in the bonds of iniquity. That "gospel" which attempts to obscure the line of differentiation between those who, nineteen hundred years ago, accepted the Christ and were baptized with the essence of regeneration called the Holy Spirit, and those who rejected him, may be set down at once and without hesitation, as the gospel of devils. The kingdom of God will be constituted of those who were baptized with the Spirit and who, at the end of the dispensation, are resurrected by reincarnation as the offspring of the Lord Jesus, who was "the fulness of the Godhead bodily."

Wilson says, "Every man is potentially a son of God." We do not believe that J. Stitt Wilson purposes to state a falsehood; but either Jesus or J. Stitt Wilson has put forth a consummate lie, for the doctrines of Wilson and the Lord are distinctively at variance—they cannot both be true. We prefer to abide by the testimony of the Lord Jesus.

The Meaning and Purpose of Celibacy.

Chastity a Messianic Factor and Stepping-stone to Immortality; the Ten Principles of Life Revealed by Moses, and Scientifically Interpreted by Koresh.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

THE SEPARATION OF THE SEXES has formed one of the central doctrines of religion in all ages. Chastity proceeds from the Lord's interior sphere of heavenly love, and it is the appointed means by which the Divine Humanity is enabled to reappear in the outer degree at stated intervals. As the Messiah of each age comes when the time is ripe, he begins to live and teach the doctrine of chastity which the world cannot receive because it knows Him not. "The light shineth in the darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not." Yet there are some in whom the truth awakens pure aspirations, drawing them to leave all and follow the man who is its manifest expression. Unto these he speaks: "If ye love me keep my commandments." This is not arbitrary; it is simply founded upon the law of necessity. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden"—that is, "If you are happy in the natural life remain there; every substance in the physical universe and every mental quality seeks its own static plane. But if you find weariness and sorrow in the life of sense, follow me and I will show you a more excellent way."

The doctrine of chastity and restraint is not imposed from without as a mere ceremonial. There is no other method by which the Messiah can provide for his own re-absorption into the interior sphere as well as for his reappearance in the succeeding age. There is no other method by which he can baptize his followers and bring them through one stage of experience after another until they come into divine unity with him. To the young man who asked by what good thing he might inherit eternal life, Jesus answered: "If thou wouldst enter into life keep the commandments." The early church after He baptized it with his spirit was celibate.

The Messenger of the Covenant in founding Koreshanity, has given the scientific meaning of the ten commandments, showing that they inculcate celibacy as a stepping-stone to immortal life. Is he proposing an impossible standard? How is it possible to keep the commandments? Through the law of substitution and polarization. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." The greater love obscures the less. The higher life as he presents it seems so beautiful, the attractive force of the entities of love and wisdom that unite in him is so strong, the desire for eternal life is so powerful that man unconsciously forgets himself and is impelled toward God.

From age to age there are orders and societies that treasure up and transmit the mental quality of chastity. It passes over from them to center in the person of the Messiah, being indeed the very source of his external manifestation. The Lord Jesus was the concrete expression of the pure desires of the whole Jewish age by a wonderful example of the transmutation of spirit to matter. Seized by an impulse which they scarcely understand, men and women in modern times have formed celibate communities like the Shakers, with whom the Founder of Koreshanity has been brought in contact by no accident but in order of law that he might receive from their spiritual treasure a rich portion.

"Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." To chasten is to bring into a state of chastity by means of restraint and discipline. The term chaste comes from the Latin castus, pure, unspotted, whence is derived the verb castigate—castus and ago—to make pure; hence to castigate was originally to chasten, and it is a mistake to think of either chastening or castigation as a punishment imposed in harshness. All results are dependent upon definite processes governed by specific laws. If there is a law of chastity by virtue of which man attains immortal life, then it is not in retribution but in love that God in the person of his Messenger leads those who sincerely desire immortal life into measures of restraint adapted to the end in view. Is not the end worth the strain and the throe? To overcome death is a wondrous thought, almost beyond the conception of the human mind!

"Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness." If God is in the generation of the righteous, to receive the fruits of righteousness would be to come into the state of the righteous man in whom God dwells, or to come into the state of divine sonship by the exercise of chastity. The separation of the sexes on the lower plane means the blending of the sex principles in the neuter being on the divine plane of which Jesus was the great Exemplar. Another derivative from the same root, castus, pure, is the word caste. The division of society into groups or classes is the method by which qualities of mental force are differentiated. By the groupate system a given strain of energy is kept free from admixture and its potency is multiplied. Hence the establishment of groups and orders is an important feature in the adjustment of society.

Though the restraint that leads to chastity is instituted for a specific purpose during a specific time and is designed only for those who are weary of the old relations, it is peculiarly antagonistic to those who prefer the old lines of experience. Joan of Arc whose name, coming from the Hebrew, means the Lord's grace, was a virgin maid, the pure lily of France, raised up to deliver her country in its darkest hour. By an influx of chastity from the Lord she was able to do battle with the strength and courage of a man. With the sword which the spirit taught her to bring from its hiding place behind the altar, she rode forth on a white horse to meet the armies of England. All the world knows how a woman saved France. But, despite the service rendered, calumny and hate and ingratitude arrayed themselves against purity. Joan was burned at the stake as a sorcerer in 1431. Four hundred years later, in the century of irreligion, Voltaire blasted her memory in a scurrilous poem. In 1894 she was canonized by the Catholic church, and her name is now inscribed in the calendar of saints.

The peasant girl of Domrémy was one of the well-springs of chastity whose streams flowing down through the desert make glad the city of God—the doctrine of a pure life as taught by the Messenger of the Covenant into whom are gathered mental energies transmitted from the great characters of history. Thousands of spiritual entities contribute to a single human thought. Think of the concourse of angels that contribute to the annunciation of the gospel of purity! Those who receive it in love, entertain angels. "Blessed is the man whose delight is in the law of the Lord; and in that law doth he meditate day and night." Angels around the throne cry Holy! Holy! Holy! veiling their faces as they catch the bright effulgence of that law, the continent and origin of universal truth—the law of the Messianic personality. If angels find their joy, their life, in the confession of the Divine-Human, what exaltation of intellect and love, of thought and speech will man attain through the same recognition!

The doctrines of chastity form the stepping-stones to immortal life. The river of death flows on to Hades, sweeping away in its broad current a mass of struggling human beings, but those who accept the principles of the higher life with all its restraints pass over dry shod from stone to stone—these stones being in another sense the seven Messiahs who teach and practise the doctrine from age to age.

The Regenerate Man and Degenerate World.

Correlate Forces Bring the Christ and the Crisis; Examples of Modern Perversions; Significance of Great Events of the Nineteenth Century.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

UNIVERSAL CORRELATES culminate in the MAN and the emergency. Before this are epochal extremities, desperate straits among men from whom certain arise to their opportunity. These belong to the valley of human circumstance, or are but the growths and inequalities upon the mountain of a final terrible height, conjunction of unrighteous aggregations which, together with all men, the MAN must meet.

"As it is written, there is none righteous, no, not one." With the creeping in of unrighteousness, knowledge took to itself wings: "There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God." Man is self-seeking, and this self-seeking, this business code of humanity, by universal consent occupies prior to considerations of human weal or human woe. Under this system of ripe degeneracy, facts have become perverted with a sequence of vitiated terms. Our modern false system of astronomy, for instance, poses the constellations stationary as related to earth movement. It makes us say that the earth sign transits the constellation. To the end that one be understood, many of these terms must be retained until such time as the MAN has established genuine science in the earth. We will correct this one error, and convey a statement of the time when these things shall cease, by transcribing from THE GUIDING STAR, Vol. III. No. 1, page 29:

When the sign Libra passes into the constellation Leo, justice enters into the arrangement of government in the earth; or, expressed according to the technology of Koreshanity: When the Zodiacal constellation Leo transits the earth division called the sign Libra, then will be fulfilled the Lord's prayer:

"Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." Then justice, which is a heavenly exercised attribute, will become operative in the earth, and the glorious dominion of righteousness will be set up. It has already been noted that Leo is the fifth sign and the fifth constellation. It will now be further noted that the fifth constellation, which is the constellation of dominion, is transiting the seventh sign, the sign of justice.

Among these myriad perversions, and in foremost rank, is the word "trust," whose genuine signification is replete with restfulness. In what bitter uses is this meaning made void! To what concupiscence is it reduced in its revolt against the teaching and practice of the Word whence all words are derived! The pirates of the high seas have answered to the gibbet; these pirates upon the sea of humanity snatch, unrestrained, God-given meanings to inversion, and following consonant practices impoverish the earth. The soil does not grudge; the skies are not unwilling; the sun is prodigal, but mankind, O mankind!

Of what avail is it that the nut-trees could sustain treble the world's population; that the cereal and vegetable supply is practically inexhaustible; that of vegetable production a much greater per cent than is generally supposed, is spontaneous; that to this spontaneity a single Western tribe of wild Indians could add more than forty additional varieties; that the abundance of unharvested growths of wild fruits outvie like products of human activity; that our forests and the earth inhere the means of warmth and shelter? Yes, of what avail if the stronger and more grasping restrain and plunder the weaker?

The century opens upon combination and centralization whose issues are the precise antitheses of the proceedings of Him who commanded the seeker for eternal life to sell his possessions and give to the poor. It opens upon a system of centralization which holds the poor to their poverty, and reduces the better circumstanced to the same level. It combines not mankind in purposes of loving uses; it is one of the coordinate antitheses of the polarization of certain minds in the MAN, the person of the Messiah of the new dispensation—the Savior of the race.

Men and measures stood in striking proportions in the beginning of the seventh decade of our last century. As making possible the succeeding phases, so intimately are they connected with its accomplishment, 1870 witnessed a unified Fatherland—united Germany under the rule of Kaiser William. With Napoleon III pitted against the figurehead Kaiser resting upon the Iron Chancellor as pedestal of power, it beheld the opening of a tragedy which swept a half million beings into the invisible, snapped the sword of France, dethroned her emperor, and hurled herself into the arena of action as one of the foremost disintegrators of the universe; namely, a republic. Upon the presence of the French armed contingent in Rome, had depended the integrity of the papal territory. The precipitation of the Franco-German struggle forced Louis Napoleon to withdraw his support. This opened the door to the forces subject to King Emmanuel, and the papal temporal hierarchy became but a thing of history.

Only the changes of power in externals are actualities to a world existing in effects, until the First Great Effect has moved into the Great First Cause. Then will man recognize the hidden lever which even through retrogression propels him to his ultimate destiny—God. Men fail to appreciate the significance of a united Fatherland, or of an Italy united under Victor Emmanuel (Emmanuel, God with us; Victor, victorious). Still less does it dream of the unseen supreme change which made 1870 the prime epoch of the fading age. We refer to the passing of the Spirit—sequential of the papal dogma of infallibility—to the MAN of the Aquarial age; even to him of whom the Revelator says: "And I saw an angel standing in the sun;" that is, the MAN in a state of illumination.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE REINAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT McKINLEY follows closely upon the inauguration of King Edward VII, of England. The great display at the capital of the American nation is unequalled in the history of previous inaugurations; the ceremony was impressive; the military and civic pageant was pompous; and the inaugural ball was brilliant. Kings have been crowned with less formality, and emperors have ascended to the throne with feebler powers and amid less dazzling glory. Conspicuously as a monarch, the President took anew the oath of office, and delivered his inaugural address. Even in the most conservative dailies of the nation, the occupants of the White House were this week referred to as the "imperial family." In the literature of the daily press, at least, the impression is left and felt that an emperor has been crowned at Washington. Yet the position the president occupies is not one of usurpation; the people have placed him there, and Congress has unqualifiedly endorsed the past administration. As a result, the President spoke with greater confidence on March 4, 1901, than he did four years ago. Events have somewhat changed the complexion of the nation; it has come to recognize its own greatness, its own power as a peer in the world of nations. In the campaign of 1896, prosperity was the cry; the result has been surprising in the extreme; the climax was reached in the last days of the President's first term—in the formation of the $1,000,000,000 steel trust. Never before, in the history of the world, has there been such aggregations of wealth, the development of such gigantic corporations and industrial concerns, as have come into existence since the setting up of the gold standard in America. The kind of prosperity that oppresses has come! The form of imperialism which the people least expected reigns supreme, threatening to dominate the commercial world, both at home and abroad! It is the imperialism of the millionaire, the imperialism of the money power. It has to do with the political affairs of the nation; and to whatever extent the President executes the will of that power, rather than that of the people, he is an emperor so far as the people are concerned. It is this power that the people of America need to fear, rather than that which has developed as a direct result of the Spanish-American war. We believe the President spoke the truth in the key-note of his inaugural address: "Our institutions will not deteriorate by extension, and our sense of justice will not abate under the tropic suns in distant seas;" yet he did not observe the inevitable deterioration, and disintegration of the nation through the overpowering commercial and industrial conspiracies which are handicapping every element of justice all over the republic. The coming four years promise remarkable events, the making of startling history; the world anxiously awaits developments, as the waves of prosperity roll toward the rocks and reefs of revolution!

Prof. Totten has published a theory of the book of Revelation, which theory involves the idea that the visions of John were astronomical; in other words, he undertakes to interpret the Apocalypse by means of an astronomical cryptogram, the basis of which is the conception that the throne of Deity is on some central sun, where the Almighty is surrounded by ineffable light and fire; that the twenty-four seats are twenty-four divisions of the Zodiacal year; that the seven spirits of God, the seven lamps or torches, are the seven dominant planets; that the shattered group of asteroids is but the wreck of the so called planet Lucifer, once dominated by Satan; that the sea of glass is the ether expanse of infinite space; and that the four animals are the four cardinal points of the Zodiac. On the supposition that the universe is solely the physical cosmos, Totten's materialistic mind hits upon an astronomical scheme, making the book of Revelation a mere work on astronomy; he does not know that humanity itself is the universe to which the Bible refers, nor that the universe of humanity is the exact correspondent of the physical cosmos; nor does he know that God is in humanity, nor that the seven planets of this anthropotic system are seven specific divine manifestations which, by processes of theocrasis or translation, produce the seven Spirits of Deity. If we take the astronomical cryptogram on the basis of Totten's application, the universe as revealed to John is a very different kind of a universe from that conceived in the popular astronomy, to which Totten himself holds. Why does he omit the earth from his category of planets? How could there be a central sun in a universe that is infinite—that has no circumference? The astronomy of the Bible makes the earth the physical body of the universe, with the sun at the center of that body. Prof. Totten well knows that in the Bible, the earth is the basis of the physical heavens. Why should the book of Revelation, containing the principles of eternal truth, take as its basis of interpretation a central sun located billions of miles from the earth, and then come down to seven planets of a little solar system near the earth? The fact is, there is but one system of planets in the physical cosmos, and that is comprised of the seven planets observable in the physical heavens. The Koreshan Cosmogony is the only astronomical system that agrees with the Bible in every particular.

Notwithstanding the claims of the civilized world to progress, the fact remains that today there is a dearth of great men, and a famine in truth. Modern literature has reached a low ebb; there are no new conceptions in art; and the mental stars are growing dim, while fallacies multiply. The world is looking for the manifestation of some epoch-making power, some brilliant strokes of genius, some masterful achievements which shall benefit humanity. Without these, the new age cannot come; there must come an overpowering intellectual force which shall enlighten the masses, and express itself in all planes of human activity and relations. The world is growing old and helpless; it must be rejuvenated ere the springtime of humanity comes again, and great men reappear; the stream of life must be purified, and new conceptions of humanity must be inculcated ere art is revived, literature stimulated, and the world beautified. How is such an impulse to be given to humanity? It is evident that something must enter the very mind and heart of the vidual—a substantial force sufficient to burn out selfishness and transform the man; it must be a world-moving and a world-making force, so potent and refined as to make the world what it should be, not for a century, but for ages! Whence is such a force to be derived? There is but one scientific answer to this question, and we maintain that Koreshanity contains that answer. On this point Koreshanity differs from all other schools of thought of modern times; nothing else like it has appeared in this age of the world. It is the Messianic conception—the conception that the force which is to reform the world and rehabilitate man in garments of purity in all his relations, must be the result of the dematerialization of a man who involves the universe in mental solution, and the baptism of the world by the forces of his own life and mentality, the spirit of life and truth as substantial spiritual entities and beings. Without such a baptism the salvation of the world is hopeless; with it, there is nothing that can prevent the coming of the Golden Era, in which all human hopes will be fulfilled!

Though the missionaries of the various church societies have plied their work faithfully and persistently, there is little progress in the promulgation of Christianity in the Oriental countries. Asia seems to be specially averse to the Christian religion; no Asiatic nation of any consequence has accepted it; and the Oriental peoples who are most familiar with the creeds, manifest the greatest degree of antagonism. This is not merely because the so called Christian nations have made war upon the heathens with church canons, and military cannons, and other evils of civilization; a greater reason is, that the character of the Oriental soil has not been prepared to receive a new religion. Observe the influence of Christianity as it rapidly progressed throughout Europe, and finally to the great West. It has swept the field prepared through ethnological progress, the result of the great plan of race improvement introduced by the head of the Hebrew race. Dispensational religions, such as have appeared in the line of divine progress in the past, have not become universal, and Christianity can never become universal. The religion that is to prevail universally must be another, a new and great religion, the fruit of all mental and ethnological progress, a religion which shall be broad enough to embrace the entire world in the field of its application, and potent enough to pierce all mental and spiritual spheres of humanity. It is the scientific religion, the religion of Koreshanity.

The Agnostic Sunday School is a new departure in Baltimore; it sets the example which other Sunday schools should follow—that of naming the school according to the quality of mental substance imparted. The only inconsistency about this school is that it purposes teaching science or knowledge, while its teachers are agnostics; that is, they are men who do not know. That which an agnostic teaches is, according to the definition of the word, not-knowledge; and inasmuch as the teachers of the agnostic Sunday school will teach the “popular sciences,” we must take them at their word and call their science ignorance! The following paragraph appears on the cards distributed: “Never intentionally hurt the feelings of any human being; be charitable and tender in disposition; recognize the brotherhood of mankind, and remember that we all sprang from a common cause or source.” A fraternal feeling should be cultivated because of the theory that the “common source or cause” of human life is the baboon; and as the goal of destiny is Cause itself, the public is asked to co-operate “in the betterment of humanity” by striving with the agnostics to reach that destiny in the kingdom with which the school begins its studies—the animal kingdom, with its Darwinian tree of life, the involution of which is the baboon, from which humanity is supposed to be evolved!

An exceptionally curious church bet is under way in Chicago. Three “holiness” evangelists are in the city, the leading one being a “converted” notorious character from Texas, claiming to be able to stir up a revival in any of the fashionable churches of the denominations. A banker is backing the evangelists, and has made an offer to forfeit $1,000 if the evangelists do not succeed in converting fifteen souls in any church in two weeks. Rev. Morley, of the Sheffield M. E. church, has accepted the offer, and announces that if a definite agreement can be reached, a revival will begin at his church at once, resting under the conviction that no one will be converted, and that the church treasury will be better off by $1,000. A brother of the banker it is said, offers $1,000 in cash for every convert made at a church in another vicinity, of which he is a member. He says: “I shall give Rev. —, or anybody else sent out here, a quiet tip to the effect that I would like to have him tackle our trustees. They are an unregenerate lot, and the revivalist who starts in will be up against the hardest game he ever played”!

Prof Herron has a hobby about what constitutes Christian society, the Christian state; and the basis on which he proposes to have the world approach the state of the ideal society, is in the assumption that truth is in every man, that every man is divine, and that he may express that divinity in its fulness by merely awakening to the possibilities in economic lines, of his own godhood. Somehow, whatever Prof. Herron's claims are, or to whatever extent he may endeavor to cover up his claims, the fact is apparent that he considers himself awakened, a Christian, and that his mission is to awaken others. How he reconciles his theory of the divinity of man with that very palpable, innate, and inbred disposition to selfishness, he does not make clear; but an assertion of his sets at naught all his conclusions concerning the inherent goodness of the modern degenerate man: “We talk about commercial dishonesty, but our all around intellectual dishonesty will outweigh it a million to one”!

Rev. Ainslie, of Baltimore, takes the position that the world is worse now than it ever was; that "many of the soft, sweet things said about the world" lead him to wonder where all the sinners are; and that all "this sort of talk is nothing less than dry rot. This old world is lost, and it is the saddest fact in human conception." He contrasts modern Christianity with the primitive Christian system; finds many discrepancies; and remarks that "it is the same old story—the world's theology is wrong again." If the world's condition today is proof of the fallacy of modern theology, it also proves the fallacy of modern science and the world's economic or social theories. Fallacy is promulgated, and evils prevail; they are but the co-ordinate mental states and environments—desire and realization. The conclusion is inevitable, that the redemption of the world from the various phases of the curse, consists in the revelation of the absolute truth and its application to all planes of human activity and relations.

Cuba's conception of gratitude is strikingly expressed in the attitude of the Cuban constitutional convention toward the American government and its Congress, and in unwholesome threats by various Cuban publications and politicians. If the United States government had the right to intervene to free Cuba from Spanish tyranny, it also has the right to dictate the terms of future relation between it and the government of Cuba, and to prevent, if possible, the lapse of Cuba into another Santo Domingo, and the repetition in Cuba of the conditions which exist in the West Indian and Central American republics.

No two critics attack the Koreshan Cosmogony from the same point of view; they disagree among themselves for the reason that they have no demonstrated premise; they reason from the basis of assumption. The conflict of conclusion among our critics proves the indefiniteness of their basis of logic.

The modern church is like a watch with a broken main-spring, or a clock with weights removed; little revivals are mere attempts to push around the hands on the dial; but with all that, the hands do not keep pace with the hands of genuine progress.

The church holds that men are mere worms of the dust. We suppose that the clergymen who let their "light" shine are merely glow-worms!

Baltimore American Controversy.

An Eastern Man Blunders While Endeavoring to Evade the Direct Evidences of the Earth's Concavity.

The fundamental error on which Koreshanity, with its vagrant religious and pseudo-scientific beliefs, is based is the assumption that our earth is concave, in direct opposition to all established facts of the Copernican system now universally taught, viz., that our earth is convex, and in shape that of a sphere, which is flattened at the poles, and we living on the outside of this sphere.

To substantiate this false assumption on the part of the Koreshans, one of its leading disciples, who styles himself Professor U. G. Morrow, has conducted several elaborate experiments which, in their minds, they claim as scientific. And the conclusions they have arrived at from these experiments have had the bad effect of leading them still further from the truth.

The experiment of projecting an "air line" by means of a clumsy contrivance, that they call a "rectilineator," during May, 1897, on the coast of Florida, has been supplemented by a telescopic experiment on Lake Michigan, August 27, 1899, under the supervision of the afore said Prof. U. G. Morrow.

A brief outline of this experiment is that at an elevation of 11 feet above the water level, a mounted telescope of three inches aperture was located, and a lighthouse eight miles off was viewed. At the base or water level of the lighthouse a target three feet broad and six feet long was placed. The rate of convexity for four miles (or half the distance) would be about 11 feet, and their conclusion is that the target would be hid from view by this existing bulge. From a pamphlet published by the Koreshans, one might be led to the belief that they had really made out a good case, but this is not so.

The distortion in the diagram by Prof. Morrow is at once apparent, when he represents our earth as having one mile diameter instead of 7,916 miles (mean diameter). The diagram drawn to a scale of 1-10,000 actual size, the bulge in four feet 2.6 inches (or 8 miles) amounts to a hair's breadth, or 13-1000 of an inch for 11 feet.

Another misrepresentation is the manner of representing the view through the telescope as a single line, whereas it should be a cylinder, or, more correctly, a cone of rays of lines. This is evident from the picture of the lighthouse and target. Taking the lighthouse as 50 feet in height, the whole picture, or the telescopic field, would be about 200 feet, and 200 feet at a distance of 8 miles would equal a circumference of 50½ miles (about) or 17 minutes of arc. The telescope used, therefore, had a visual angle of about 17 minutes of arc.

The following experiments with a telescope of three inch aperture and four feet six inches in length, which is similar to the one used in the Koreshan experiments, can be readily verified. At a distance of 50 feet, view some object against a fence or wall, and mark the whole field, especially the bottom of the field; then attach a string to the bottom of the three-inch object glass and extend it to the bottom of the object on the fence or wall 50 feet away; at a distance of 25 feet (midway between the telescope and the fence or wall) place a board so it projects one and a half inches above the string, and thus obliterating one half of the pencil of rays from the telescope, the whole object can be seen as plain as before the board was interposed, and as the telescope is focused on the object on the fence or wall nothing is seen of the board.

The board can be moved upward until it is nearly three inches above the string, and yet the whole object down to the bottom is as plain as ever; the only difference will be a poorer definition; or, in other words, the object will not appear so bright. From this it appears that a telescope focused on a distant object will show the whole picture, even if a barrier is placed midway or even beyond this point so as to shear off all but the uppermost rays that enter the telescope. Apparently on a dead level, where a telescope is mounted at an elevation of 11 feet to the center of the object glass and an object noted 8 miles away, upon interposing a solid barrier, bulge or anything else, 11 feet high, at a distance of 4 miles from the telescope, the same picture without any alteration will still be seen.

The above experiments being original, so far as the writer knows, it is possible that some readers may manifest some doubt about their correctness; and should such interested parties not be in a position to try these experiments for themselves, the author will be happy to repeat them for their benefit.

There is another fact which we are obliged to consider in viewing distant objects, and that is refraction. In order to wholly invisible, and that as much of the mountain as appeared occulted to the naked eye by house and hill, would become visible when viewed through the telescope. The telescope becomes a wonderful X-ray machine when a pretended scientist desires to invert a subterfuge with which to evade actual facts of observation!

There is not a word of truth in the above statement concerning the experiment by means of a telescope, board, and wall. A man who will deliberately prevaricate concerning a simple experiment, in order to mislead minds regarding indisputable evidences of the earth's concavity, strikingly manifests his sense of the weakness of the popular system. Notice in the above that there is absolutely no attempt to prove the Copernican system by establishing its fundamental assumption—the convexity of the earth. We advise our friends who have telescopes or access to them anywhere, to follow the directions given in the above, and note the results. As carefully as possible, we repeated the experiment in Chicago. The field on the wall viewed through our mounted telescope was $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches; at the object midway between the telescope and the wall, the field had a diameter of about 4 inches, while the object glass is 3 inches. A perfectly opaque barrier was interposed, elevated $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches above the "string;" the bottom of the field on the wall could not be seen by any of a dozen witnesses show the nature of this phenomenon take an empty basin or saucer, place a coin on the bottom and place the eye so it can see it just beyond the rim. Then move backward until the coin is lost to view; if water is now carefully poured in the basin or saucer so as not to change the position of the coin, it will then again appear, and its appearance is due to refraction of the water. Owing to this same principle objects 50 miles away are brought to our view by the refraction of our atmosphere, and stars below the horizon again become visible.—EDWARD A. OSSE, Member Astronomical Section, Maryland Academy of Sciences, in Baltimore American.

The above article appeared in the issue of the Baltimore American for February 24, 1901, under the heading and subheadings: "Mr. Osse Hits at Koreshanity.—Scientific attack on the Concavity Theory.—Member of the Astronomical Section of the Maryland Academy of Sciences, Discusses the Fundamental Error on which the System is Based.—Apparently no Account Taken by the Enemies of the Copernican System of the Bearing which Refraction has upon the Subject.—Criticism of Morrow's Elaborate Experiments.—Projection of an Air Line by means of the Rectilineator." For some weeks past a controversy has been conducted in the above publication, between Mr. E. A.

Many of our readers are familiar with the experiment which is briefly described, and on the basis of which our astronomical friend admits that to some minds it might appear that we have "really made out a good case;" but to him it does not appear to be so, because he has discovered an original method of evading the facts! The diagram we publish, representing a bulge of water 11 feet in height between the telescope and the target, as per the convex idea, legitimately exaggerates arc and relative objects; all the relations as to verticals would be exactly the same if the diagram were seventy-five feet in length instead of $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Every draughtsman knows that such exaggeration does not misrepresent principles; it is an exaggeration for convenience in drawing and printing.

The particular point we desire to notice is the unique and original method of looking through a bulge of water 11 feet in height by means of a telescope. Perhaps many people who saw the above in a daily paper, are ready to conclude that a house and hill-top midway between the telescope and a mountain would be who participated in the experiment. With the barrier elevated to about the center of the "cone," a little more than one half of the figure or field on the wall was visible. We most emphatically deny, on the basis of actual experiment, that the statements of the above writer regarding the results are true—and he knows that they are not true!

At so short a distance as 50 feet, the rack-work and eye-piece of 50 diameters, in a telescope $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet in length, must be drawn out to the farthest limit to make the wall clear; hence, the barrier midway has no clear outline for the reason that it is out of focus. The appearance is much the same as if one looks at a distant object over the edge of a book held within half an inch of the cornea of the eye. This effect, however, is not seen on objects midway between the telescope and objects 8 miles away, because objects 4 miles and objects 8 miles distant are in very nearly the same focus; hence, any object situated between the telescope and the object viewed under clear focus appears well defined in the telescopic field against the distant object. Why is a 50-foot experiment resorted to with a powerful visual aid usually used for viewing distant objects? Why not suggest an experiment with objects a mile and two miles away? Because the author of the above desires to muddle the readers—that is all. The idea of seeing through an opaque object under such circumstances is simply preposterous; and any mind knowing anything about optics or telescopic observations, will not for a moment consider it true. It is one of the most absurd arguments upon which it has ever been our misfortune to waste time in answering!

It is admitted that "the rate of convexity for four miles would be about 11 feet;" but it is asserted that "their conclusion is that the target would be hid from view by this existing bulge." This is not our conclusion merely, but the conclusion of all the old school astronomers, repeated over and over again in the astronomical and geographical text-books. We merely took the conclusions of the other side already made and taught for centuries, and used them as a basis of refutation of the idea that any actual bulge exists on the water's surface. We took them on their own ground, on the ground of their own statements and necessary and consistent conclusions from their premise, and they have lost! Astronomers as well as laymen have persistently denied, since the facts of our experiments have been published, that it is possible to restore by means of the telescope, objects cut off by the sea horizon. Peabody admits that if such restoration were possible the earth's surface could not be convex. Proctor asserts in his Myths and Marvels of Astronomy, page 279: "Of course if Parallax (an English experimentalist who denied the prevailing theory of the earth's convexity) had, with his eyes a few inches from the surface of Bedford canal, seen an object close to the surface six miles from him, there manifestly would have been something wrong in the accepted theory of the earth's rotundity." He simply denied the facts of Parallax's experiments. In his elaborate work, "New and Old Astronomy," Proctor makes the following statement regarding the disappearing ship: "We finally lose sight of every part, not from the effect of distance (if it were so, the telescope would bring the ship into view again), but by the obvious interposition of the rounded or dome surface of the sea between us and the ship."

What does the above evasion of the facts of our experiments amount to? It amounts to this: The admission is made that the report of our experiments is true; that the disappearing ship's hull, or the occulted base of the lighthouse, may be restored to view through the telescope. What then? Why the main "proof" that the earth is convex is admitted to be no proof at all, for the "explanation" explains it away! If this main proof is rendered useless by an invention of a subterfuge with which to evade the conclusion that the earth's surface is concave, to what will the inventor of the subterfuge appeal as proof that the earth is convex? He has disarmed himself by his own admissions, and is now defenseless!

In the telescopic view of the lighthouse, in our experiment on Lake Michigan, August 27, 1899, there was no part of the surface of the water in the telescopic field that was blurred; the "out-of-focus" effect was not there, neither was the bulge. The target was in plain view, with complete definition; there was no obscuration of the target, nor was the target less bright than the top of the lighthouse. If we consider the field of the telescope as a cone from the object-glass to the vertical field of sky, lighthouse and water, and draw such a cone in the accompanying diagram, on the basis of the supposed convexity, we will find its lower half merging into the water itself—such a bulge that no "out-of-focus" effect in the mind of the would-be astronomer, nor in the telescope, could ever remove!

Our critics may deduct the usual amount of refraction allowed by surveyors and geodesists; but even this will not help them in their attempts to show how a target may be seen over or through a bulge of water, because refraction would obtain just the same when objects beyond the horizon are viewed with the naked eye alone. The usual refraction allowed is one seventh the amount of the earth's curvature. (See Johnson's Theory and Practice of Surveying, pages 453 and 567.) Proctor says, in considering this same subject, that refraction is rarely one sixth, often far less. In our experiment the effect of normal refraction from the summit or apex of the supposed convexity to the target, would elevate the target a little over one foot, leaving nearly 10 feet yet unaccounted for. In the conduct of our Geodetic Survey, we so thoroughly considered refraction as to eliminate it entirely by the use of a mechanical apparatus for the extension of an air line in demonstration of the concavity of the earth. The old school geodesists employ optical instruments; and against their work the factor of refraction, as shown by the coin in a basin, may be used. Refraction is an old and familiar story; we have been familiar with it since the time we were able to observe water in a tumbler!

In conclusion, we observe that the following communication received by the chief disputant in the Baltimore American controversy, may throw some light on the scientific standing of the man who champions the Copernican system, and who has written the labored article lumbered with prevarications:

O. J. RUTH, M. D., Chicago, Ill. DEAR SIR:—In the Sunday American (Feb. 24) I noticed some criticisms of our theories and an attempt to ridicule them, by a Mr. Edward A. Osse, who purports to be a member of the Astronomical Section, Maryland Academy of Sciences. How Mr. Osse came to be a member of our Academy of Sciences, I do not know; neither do I know why this Mr. Osse should so criticize your theories. He is not known here as a scientist, as far as I can learn. He was and I believe is, a fairly good draughtsman, and his initials were originally, I believe, O. E., not E. A. He was known here as Odorless Excavating Osse, from his initials, and the fact that at one time he was connected with the Odorless Excavating industry. A reference to this matter in a letter replying to his vagaries would, no doubt, act as an extinguisher of Osse.

I notice also in today's American (I enclose the clipping), a letter from another crank, who signs himself Prof. Edmund F. Weber, but of what he is professor I am at a loss to say. Please "sit on" these cranks, and let us have some fun. Yours truly,—JUDEX, Baltimore, Feb. 26, 1901.

Astronomical Cryptogram.

Prof. Totten's Scheme of Interpretation of John's Visions, Founded on Rev. iv: 1-11.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., March 3.—Professor C. A. L. Totten, lately instructor at Yale, has at last published his famous cryptogram of the Bible. This remarkable cryptogram illustrates his theory of the visions that came to St. John and other prophets and apostles. Thus of the vision of St. John at Patmos, as told in Revelation iv: 1-11, Professor Totten says: "It is pictorial and graphic enough to satisfy the most profound and confirmed astrologist the world has ever seen, and at the same time it is strictly astronomical."

By this cryptogram Professor Totten explains the vision of St. John, quoted above, in full. He says: "John was shown, as it were, the horoscope of eternity and let into its magian law. The throne itself was some grand central sun, where God dwells, unapproachable, surrounded by ineffable light and fire; the One that sat thereon was indescribable and the halo was the many-hued, iridescent rainbow reflected through the photosphere that clothed the terrible orb."

"The four-and-twenty seats were the stations of the twenty-four hours upon the Annus Magnus of 25,827 years' duration, the measure of which is 365½ times the life of a human being (70 9-12 years): so each hour upon that tremendous scale, which is but a greater day among the aeons, is 1,076½ years long, and we are living in its sixth hour only."

"The crowns are the work that transpires under each sign as the sun runs its course through the circle. The lightnings, thunders and voices are perpetual attendance upon all such manifestations of a Deity. The seven lamps or torches of fire are the seven dominant planets, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune, which are explicitly and astrologically explained as the seven spirits of God, each having an appropriate influence in the economy of the earth—which John himself temporarily represented."

"The scattered group of asteroids, which occupy the outer region between the interior and exterior planets, is understood to be the wreck of Lucifer, star of the morning, once dominated by Satan. It is now cast out, put out, scattered, and, with its spiritual principalities and powers, is wandering in erratic confusion and perturbing the entire system."

"The clear, glass-like, crystal sea was the vast ethereal blue expanse of illimitable space, and the four creatures were the four cardinal constellations of the zodiac—Leo, Taurus, Aquarius and our present Scorpio, which was originally and more correctly depicted as a flying eagle."

"Each creature had six wings about him; the two above and the two below were the decans or accompanying constellations, well known to astronomy and astrology and always associated with them, while the other two, the one to the right and the other to the left of each creature, were the adjacent and subordinate constellations of the zodiac itself—Cancer, Virgo, Aries, Gemini, Capricornus, Aquarius, Pisces, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, each with its wings full of eyes.

"As St. John represented the earth in this vision, his diurnal point of view is set at the midnight of a still future Spring equinoctial new moon; for Leo is before him, and, therefore, at zenith, and the order Leo, Cancer, Gemini, Taurus, shows that these constellations are trending down to the west, while Virgo, Libra, Secrata bend down along the eastern arc. The sun of our solar system is thus aspected at the first point of the sign of Aries, but in the constellation of Pisces, and is just beginning its annual passage up the ecliptic through Pisces, Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, and so into Leo, while the earth, in correspondent descent, wends its way to the right and down through Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricornus and Aquarius into Pisces.

"St. John saw the literal astronomical facts as they are, and was given the astrological interpretations that they were set to compass."—Hearst's American.

These novel Wraps are becoming very popular, and the demand for them still continues. They are made of Shetland floss, hand-crocheted by our own people, and are light, airy, and beautiful.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DR. CYRUS R. TEED, OF CHICAGO.

The Earth is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Suns, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, Theocracy, and Social Economy.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Whole No. 432

Koreshanity as a Religio-Social Movement.

Knowledge of Character of the Fruit of the Dispensation Necessary to the Establishment of the New Order of Society; Progress Through Religious Impulse.

THE CLASSES OF PEOPLE WHO, THROUGH the teachings of the modern Christian church, are made ignorant of the gospel of the Lord as set forth in the Old and New Testaments, know nothing of the character of the fruition of the age. The dispensations culminated nineteen hundred years ago in the production, by involution, of the Son of God. This Son of the Eternal came into the world as the firstfruit of a new genus or race of men. He came as the promised Seed, the Seed-man. For this purpose He came to be planted back into the race, directly through the early church. The absorption of the Lord by his Apostles and disciples, was his absorption into Nirvana. This absorption was the fulfilment of his own declaration: "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day;" that is, at the end of the age. Jesus, the man, was eaten by his followers; this fact is constantly portrayed in the wafer of the Roman Catholic church, in which it is claimed is the transubstantiation of the Lord's body, and in the sacrament of the so called Evangelical churches. The body of the Christ is not in the sacrament, but literally in the church. The body did not get into the church through the symbol of the sacrament, but through the sacrament itself, which is the Lord's sacrificed body. The body of the Lord was dissolved in the presence of his disciples and converted to Holy Spirit, and as the Holy Ghost, was partaken of by the church. Thus the Lord was eaten by his people, just as he declared he would be. This declaration is made on the authority of the Almighty, who has ordained the instrument by which the declaration is made.

The planting of the Son of God in the church will result at the end of the age in the production, by regeneration, of the Sons of God. The Sons of God will constitute the highest fruits of the dispensation. No man can become this specific firstfruit who did not in the beginning of the age partake of the Holy Spirit. The reason is simply, that if the seed of God was not planted in the soul at the beginning of the age, the process of the regeneration of God in the soul could not progress. Those in whom the seminal essence of God was not planted at the beginning, could not be regenerated from the Lord and become his Sons at the end of the Christian era. The first and highest operation of the full fruition of the age, will be the ripening of the firstfruits of the age. This will leave the old church without any life, and its rapid disintegration will immediately follow. A new people, a distinguished race of men, will occupy the throne and dominion of the world. The churches, including Roman Catholicism, will lose their power with the people, and with the disintegration of the church will pass the power of the kingdoms of the world. Thus will be fulfilled the prediction, the old heavens and the old earth shall pass away.

The Koreshan Unity is the power ordained of God to fulfil the purpose of the Almighty in the establishment of the new order of society. We are often advised to drop religion from our advocacy of the coöperative and communistic principles to which we hold. We are frequently informed, that our work would progress more satisfactorily if we would leave religion out of the question. We have to again iterate our statement: We want the fruit of the age only, as our gathering represents, and therefore do not urge irreligious people to enter our institution. We are after the people who love the Lord, and who, if they do not know and love him now, can be induced to love him through the power of regeneration, which began to work in them at the beginning of the Christian dispensation. We know whereof we speak; we know what will constitute the fruit of the age. We know that the socialism to succeed the present competitive system will be an organized imperialism, and that the pattern of this imperial system is the physical universe. It is for this reason that the Koreshan Universology involves a thorough knowledge of the form and function of the physical cosmos.

We thoroughly believe in the doctrine of evolution, but not as given to the world by so called evolutionists. There can be no evolution without its coördinate involution. Let it be taken for granted that the principle of involution be true; is there any proof that another kingdom may not succeed the present kingdom called man? We maintain there is not. If the kingdoms of Nature as they now obtain are the result of the law of evolution, may we not reasonably suppose that the continued operation of the law will bring into being another, higher, and better race of beings? The Bible furnishes historic and prophetic testimony to the truth of evolution, and better evidence than the so called scientific world has so far, ever presented. It has given prophetic and historic testimony in the facts concerning the conception of the Lord and his character as the archetype of a new genus. He was the Son of God, the involved product of the human race. He demonstrated the law of a higher kind of life than that which obtains with the world at large, a life in which immortality was unmistakably manifest. The life obtaining with the Lord was the acme of creative power in the perfection of man. Humanity brought forth the Son of God as the first product of the new genus. From this firstfruit there must come a multiplication of the same kind. These men, begotten by and born of this Son, who becomes the Father, will constitute the higher order to succeed and rule over the race that now inhabits the earth.

The manifestation of the Son of God, and the promise that to all who believe in his name gives he power to become the Sons of God, comprise a better exposition of the doctrines of evolution than the so called evolutionists have ever made. This is the order of Melchizedek, of which the Lord was declared to be the High Priest. How was the Lord, the Son of God, the High Priest of the order of a new genus of men? This question is easy of solution. If the Lord, as declared, was the Son of God and the promised Seed, he came to be planted in the race that he might be multiplied as the Sons of God. His planting was his sacrifice. The death of the Lord in the church, after his resurrection, was the fulfilment of his mission as the High Priest of the order he came to produce through his death in the church, where, as the two witnesses, he lay dead in the streets of the great city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. The Lord Jesus was planted in the church. He died with his church, and arises anew with his church in the resurrection, the reincarnation. The time is at hand for the manifestation of this new order of men. They will constitute the firstfruits of the coming of the Lord now, at the end of the dispensation.

The new genus of God-men, the arch-natural product of the human race, will remain in the visible world a definite period of time, after which they will pass off the arch-natural plane of existence without the ordinary death. These are the Elohim who said: "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." The Gods who made man were the product of the race of men, for there is no being in the visible or invisible domain who has not been a man on the natural plane of existence; yet it is true also, that the invisible Gods have ever existed on the plane of the invisible and eternal Being. As the offspring of men, they are constantly absorbing the fruits of immortal life as it is produced, as the sons of men in and of the visible humanity. This absorption does not increase the invisible number, nor is there any loss of identity or consciousness of the Sons of God who are thus absorbed.

No system of religion has ever been evolved, formulated, and transmitted to the world, or conceived of by its adherents and devotees, in the perspicacity of its founder and supreme annunciator. The great religions have been conceived and formulated in and by the central mind, thence imparted to the few educators who were capacitated by nature and culture, or want of so called culture, to modifiedly accept and understand the cult of the central discoverer, formulator, and annunciator of the system. No great teacher has ever come directly to the people acceptably. He reaches the few who may philosophize and define his system from their own best and highest possibilities of appropriation, and through them it is disseminated to another stratum of thought. Thus it is let down by degrees, through stratum after stratum of mental conception, until finally very little of the original concept remains.

The Future of the Island of Cuba.

The Gem of the Antilles in Danger of Appropriation by the American Government; its Prosperity and Peace Contingent upon Independence.

THE FUTURE OF CUBA is one of the important questions now before the public. There can be no doubt of the fact that the power now in control of the Congress of the United States is determined to appropriate, not only the Island of Cuba, but everything else in sight not already in the hands of the great commercial cormorants who manipulate the halls of legislation to suit their greed. The future prosperity of the Gem of the Antilles is in the maintenance of a government independent of the United States, because to be ruled by this government is equivalent to absolute control by and subjection to the trust. The United States is in the hands of the oligarchy, and though the nominal government is republican, there never obtained a more absolute imperialism than that which is conducted in the name of a republican or a democratic form of administration. Our imperialism may not have taken the form of an imperialistic state with an emperor at its head, but it has taken the form of a more decided and oppressive centralization. It is the centralization of the most oppressive power on the face of the earth, in which resides the most infernal love. The centralization of the money power in the single standard, means the subjugation of the masses and their abject servility to the money-lender. When—from under the heel of the oppressor, and through years of struggle for liberty—our people cast off the yoke of British tyranny, we were careful to observe every indication of an attempt to endanger the liberties so recently achieved through blood. When we were young in the acquisition of liberty, we loved it too well to yield to the encroachments of a greater tyrant than the one from which we had just escaped.

The Cubans have struggled to free themselves from the hand of the oppressor, and their appreciation of the enjoyment of independence would make them wary of any sign indicative of the curtailment of their collective and individual rights. They have seen the power from a distance, which they know to be sapping the foundations of our liberties, and this has made them fearful of the influence of the control of their country by the power under which the people of the United States are beginning to groan. They know that their subjection to the supremacy of the United States would signify their bondage to the gold owner—a most merciless and unrelenting bondman. There has opened up the opportunity for the inception of a new world power, as potent in its influence for good, as the British empire has been for evil. The late action of the Congress of the United States in relation to its claims, would seem to indicate the purpose of the government to impose upon the Cubans conditions to which they could not subscribe, for the purpose of forcing them into an armed resistance that there might be a subterfuge for a war of conquest. It is to be hoped that the Cubans will not give to this government the excuse for conquest that it appears to seek. If the counsels of the conservative Cubans prevail, and there arises no subterfuge through which the money power can force the government into a war of subjugation, there can be no doubt of the final triumph of the Cuban cause.

Cuba ought to become the great and new heart center for the development of an ultimate race of commercial integrity and commercial power. In Cuba, there resides the ethnic foundation for a new and progressive racial development, which will exceed in physical and intellectual beauty and power any race of historical eminence. The so called civilized nations of the earth have reached the goal of their highest aspirations; they have exalted the god of their supreme affections to the throne of dominion, and are ready to crumble to the debris of a God-rejected and dejected elimination.

The so called world powers of today are rapidly reaching the culmination of their dominance of the world. The time is at hand for their final overthrow, and there will arise a new power with a new racial foundation for a higher and better people. The position of the Island of Cuba in the zone of inceptive life, would mark it as the focal point of a new commercial power in the world; and indications exist that there, God has purposed to establish the heart of a new Empire.

All forces or energies have their origin in fire, or in a process of combustion. This has its thousand-fold degrees, beginning with the most external form and ending with the most internal fires of the mind, where love (heat) and wisdom (light) are generated.

The Koreshan System has but one standard of spiritual, moral, social, and natural excellence, and that standard is the life of the Lord Jesus as practically set forth in the daily walk, conversation, and culmination of the career of the Messiah in his theocrasis.

Immortal Life Through Obedience to Law.

VICTORIA GRATIA.

AS WE REJOICE in the hope of our inheritance, the throne and dominion of the universe, we ought not to be unmindful that immortal life must come through obedience to the laws of immortality. Eternal life is promised to such as seek for immortality.

Koreshan Science, now before the world for thirty years, has defined the laws by which we may attain life; and through this wonderful Gospel of the New Age, we are brought around to the fundamentals of all life, namely, to the twelve foundations of the Holy City.

The consciousness of the truth that we may be regenerated from the Word, and thus become the offspring of Deity, the Sons of God, is marvelously inspiring, and especially so as we look upon this prospect in the new light of the Koreshan Gospel.

Its laws may be summed up in the simple statement: "We shall be led by truth into the performance of use to God and the neighbor."

Social Caste in the American Republic.

False Professions of the Equality of Men; Social Classes More Rigidly Divided than in India; the Sampson Episode; Caste of the Divine Order.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

IT IS CLAIMED as one of the chief advantages of a republican form of government, that no system of caste can intrench itself among the people to act as a divider and promoter of discord; and it is especially claimed that this is true in America where, they say, all men are born free and equal citizens of a glorious republic. Has this cherished belief other foundation than repetition? Does it stand upon hypotheses like the Copernican cosmogony, or is it established by actual facts like the Koreshan world-system? It will not be difficult in answering these questions, to maintain the proposition that there never was a country where society was so rigidly divided.

The caste system of ancient India was a mild provision in comparison with the modern institution, though the latter hides itself and its deeds under an alias. It is characteristic of the age to call black, white, and evil, good. "All is good and there is no evil," is a formula to conjure with in these days. Democracy and freedom and equal rights are bold terms to please the ear; but they ring false in the mouths of those who are stealthily trying to subvert these principles.

"Any man may aspire to the White House." The statement is still made in the present tense and supported by florid allusions to Abraham Lincoln, the rail-splitter. The result of the last election proves that a change of tense is imperative, and the theme should read: "Any man might once aspire to the White House." It is evident that no man who represents the common people and their interests can become President.

The organization of caste in the American Republic does not relate simply to social lines drawn between the rich and the poor. Society has more than two grand divisions; the "four hundred" are set over against the common people, but the laboring classes in their turn are arrayed against each other by divisions as arbitrary. The ramifications of caste in the body social are as complex and as minute as those of the capillary system in the body physiological, and extend as far into extremities.

In ancient India the system of caste was instituted by the priesthood. It was designed to hedge about the religious orders with sanctity, and invest them with prerogatives almost divine. It was, virtually, a protective tariff laid upon things spiritual. The Brahman priests were impelled by self-interest, which is the basis of our republican caste, though the latter is intended to protect material things. Take the medical fraternity as one example of caste; note how rigidly high caste members protect themselves against the encroachments of low caste practitioners who are branded as quacks, a term applied to every new school at the outset, and equivalent to the disgraceful epithet, pariah. Mark the legislative discrimination shown and the fine distinctions drawn between regular schools and new methods just coming into vogue. Did any stricter system prevail in Hindustan?

Caste is not confined to any section of the United States. An order founded upon culture in the East is matched by that which boasts of enterprise in the West. The pride of birth springing from ancestors who came over in the Mayflower, is equaled by that of descent from parents who crossed the great plains in a prairie schooner. The Sampson episode has exposed the glaring insincerity of smooth talkers who clap the working man familiarly upon the shoulder, assuring him in honeyed voice that he is one of Nature's noblemen, and all ranks of society will open before his aspirations. Let him act upon these suggestions and knock at the door which he is told will swing at a touch.

Gunner Charles Morgan tried to avail himself of the bill just passed, authorizing the appointment of six ensigns in the navy out of the list of gunners. Admiral Sampson, after endorsing the record and personal qualities of the applicant, objected to the youth's advancement because he lacked the grace and training required by the social functions to which he would be eligible as a commissioned officer. "The common people are boors; let us keep them down" is the secret doctrine of caste that moves very quietly and subtly to accomplish its ends, the while it talks of equal rights and the obliteration of class distinctions in America. Now and then some republican leader is maladroit enough to let the carefully hidden feelings of his powerful caste slip from his lips.

Caste as known in India originated with the priesthood; but in the ancient Sanscrit literature, which lay buried at the foot of the Himalayas two thousand years before it was discovered by the British East India Company, there is a word which carries the system outside of religion into ethnology. The Sanscrit term for caste is varna, which means color, indicating that caste was founded at one time upon race distinctions. This principle of discrimination does not find authority in Nature as many, afflicted with scientific myopia, contend. Through amalgamation the dark races are periodically merged into the light ones, as the energy of darkness that radiates from the central sun to the earth's crust, returns after successive transformations to form the energy of light at last. How the ancient caste of color with no basis but scientific delusion has persisted! How strong it has grown with time and the fostering influences of republicanism! It was but justifiable homicide in India, if the man of high caste struck dead the pariah whose polluting shadow chanced to fall upon the sacred person of his superior. Wherein does this exceed the cruelty that shoots peaceable Negroes, miles from the scene of an assault, with no ground of suspicion beyond their color to justify the crime?

It is not necessary to multiply examples to show how strictly the lines of republican caste are drawn. Every day the morning and evening newspapers note the development of some new order of self-protection and self-aggrandizement, all designed to foster the material interests of one group at the expense of another group. Caste is from the root, castus, pure; and the aim of each caste is to keep its gold pure, out of the hands of every other caste. Widespread devastations of truth and good show inverted forms of the kingdom of uses.

The prevalence of caste indicates that it belongs to the divine order. The magnitude and luster of every star bring it into fixed relations with its own group, where it finds its orbit and its freedom. There will be a corresponding system of grouping when society is organized in righteousness, but the institution of caste will then pertain to the good of the whole body social, not to the private good of one order. Certain qualities of energy and strains of force are essential to the inauguration and maintenance of the Lord's kingdom. Caste, or the conjunction of minds that generate like qualities, preserves the potency and purity of these energies. By this means the various religious orders will keep themselves unspotted from the world.

Principles and Purposes of Divine Marriage.

Popular Fallacies Regarding Modern Legalized Consortism; What the Divine Marriage Is; the True Religion and its Wonderful Harvest; the Coming Race of Biune Men.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

"MARRIAGES are made in heaven." This familiar statement is true from a scientific standpoint, but the present wicked and adulterous generation is not scientific, and its marriages, falsely called divine, are made in "hades" and are too often shockingly hellish. They are seen, when scientifically considered from the standpoint of genuine Christianity, to be mere forms of legalized consortism. The usual ceremonial statements used to effect the public recognition of their legality, are practically confirmations of the statement of the curse which followed the dissolution and fall of the man made in God's image and likeness, and ended the Edenic condition of the divine or heavenly marriage in earth.

Consider the statement of the curse upon the woman: "The Lord God said * * unto the woman, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." All marriage ceremonies legally subject woman to man, and must until there "be no more curse," and the twain are restored to one flesh; then the feminine or wisdom principle will control the begetting or love principle of the man. That woman is under the curse of suffering and sorrowful motherhood today, is testified to by millions of facts; and that ceremony which keeps her under it is called a sacrament by millions, and as such forbids or prevents her divine marriage in the Lord who, when the final marriage supper of the Lamb is come, is both in heaven and in earth; for in the reproduction of God's humanity, the Bride and the Lamb are made one flesh.

The doctrine of the fall of man is a foundation doctrine of true Christianity. The whole or holy man in God's image and likeness is a biune being, the result of the divine marriage in heaven, which makes of masculine and feminine, or pneumatic and psychic egos, a biunity which precipitates and formulates its self-expression in one flesh—one body. This divine marriage takes place at the end of a cycle of human development, in which an order of humanity—called the Levitical Order—is ripened for reproduction in the harvest to come from the sowing of the Logos or Son of God. It is the members of this order who can neither marry nor be given in marriage on the mortal plane. Their energies are necessarily polarized and absorbed by the Sun of Righteousness, which effects their ripening and appropriation by the spirits of the justified, the fulness of the Godhead in the Christ of the age. The harvest reproduction of the Logos from this conjugal order of humanity—humanity married only in the Lord, is the literal manifestation of the earthly kingdom of God, the race of Eloah, called in the Scriptures the Elohim, and also the order of Melchizedek. Every Son of God is a fruit or manifestation of a divine marriage, the true spiritual and heavenly conjunction of male and female aspirants for holiness—wholeness, which alone can image the likeness of God.

In these last days of the "man of sin," when evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived, we have manifest, as a climax of evil, an unholy church profaning the name and marriage of Christ, dominated by a lustful male priesthood reveling in consortism and forbidding the chaste divine marriage, by condemning and ridiculing celibacy. The Almighty has to deal with this corrupt church and priesthood, when he comes at the end of the age as the Spirit of Truth—the eternal science of the laws of life and immortality, which were demonstrated in the person and doctrines of our Lord Jesus Christ. The man and woman of sin will then be compelled to behold both the goodness and severity of God. All who will restore the science of the law to the rulership of their lives, in the recognition of its loveliness and in the adoration of its doctrines by their application, will know the goodness of God by conjunctive unity with him; but those who make void the law, loving darkness rather than light, will know sin in ultimates and all its consequences of disintegration and precipitation to the outermost, where death and the grave are as eternal as is God's truth in the heaven of heavens.

The time has come for all who would have part in the first resurrection to reject the ties of bondage to all forms of legalized consortism, and for the complete conservation and polarization of the sex energies in a divinely-authorized Messianic center, that a vortex of spiritual absorption may be produced, for all aspirants for spiritual power to overcome every lustful demand of the mortal flesh, that they may go out by dematerialization, "the new and living way," to be spiritually alive in Christ, spotless and blameless, to be projected through the medium of his psychic potency as the re-born or rematerialized Sons of God, called virgins (men-women, from the Latin vir, man, and the Greek ἄνθρωπος, gune, woman), beings having inherent the matured and unified divine sex potencies, with power to materialize and dematerialize at will the Jehovistic flesh—the divine forms of self-expression. This divine marriage, recorded and foretold in Scriptures emanating from the divine mind, repeats itself in the order of law in the course of time. The time is now at hand for its repetition. It is the grandest of the coming events, and consummates human origin and destiny in the production of the coming race.

The proclamations of Koreshanity herald this consummation and prepare its highway of holiness. Koreshanity cries out against continuance in mortal marriages, or consortism, for all who are aspiring to the immortality and eternal life of the divine Sonship in this day and generation. It is for all such to conserve their sex energies and polarize them, absolutely, as exalted aspirations directed to the Messenger of the Covenant of this age—the High Priest of the order of Levi. (Levi signifies conjunction.) Other orders of humanity will fulfil the destiny of their lower desires in obedience to the laws of sensual and mortal reproduction, according to the regulations of whatever form of government they may uphold.

Until the coming of Jehovah as the manifest God-kingdom, it will be as it was "in the days of Noah;" the dead in trespasses and sins, who choose the way of all the earth, will marry and be given in the marriage of the old and dead way of mortality. It is useless for those who choose this way, to forbid and protest against the divine marriage and its white stepping-stone of chaste celibacy; for the laws of ascending and descending life operate continuously, and in ultimates the ascending or divine life subdues all kingdoms to its holy triune Deity of one-flesh, that of the first-born Son of God, embodying the fulness of the Godhead, our Father-Mother Deity whose mediatrix of the Deific maternity radiates the Lord in power and great glory as the solar sphere of an hundred forty and four thousand Sons of divine Being.

The weakly peepings and mutterings of the demons of sensualism, who have prolificated the animal nature of humanity in such excess and in such disobedience to the laws of human perfection that it is ceasing to be difficult to convince rational minds that we are all in the lowest mortal hells, can do absolutely naught to hinder what to them must prove the great and dreadful day of the Lord, when the present excess of sensual proliferation shall be cut short by the establishment of righteousness and the full salvation of the ransomed of the Lord—body, soul, and spirit. Those who seek this salvation of the Lord, must come out from the old Babylonish order on all lines. They must forsake participation in Babylon's sex commerce, her religious commerce, and her secular commerce. All the tithes of each domain must be gathered into one storehouse by one reaper; and from this aggregation of resources, equitable distribution and newness of life must proceed.

There is one Name given at the beginning of each age, by and through whom all who would receive another renewal for another cycle of age-lasting, progressive life may receive it. Just one Name is primarily called of God to witness a good confession of the power of God to save from age to age, all who serve to make holy his anointed, his Messianic Name, and to become a great cloud of witnesses to his honor and glory. From Him the life forces which we may husband or waste, are from age to age received, and to him they must be returned when he comes to claim his own harvest from his self-sacrifice, his self-implantation by obedience to the law of the cross, that mortals may put on immortality, and the corruptible be transformed and clothed with incorruptibility.

Unto the upright, the ascending, there ariseth a light in the darkness. This light, which proceeds from the Christ who is our life, indicates the path of the just who will justify all who love his appearing and kingdom, who do his commandments, and who love the Lord their God with all their heart, might, mind, and strength, and their neighbor as themselves. This love of the neighbor means the destruction of the competitive system, the end of lying, deceit, and all uncharitableness; it means the purification of heart and life; it means self-surrender to Him whose right it is to inherit our earth, and to till and subdue it to the laws of his being, that God may be all and in all—the great husbandman of a wife who will become the Mother of all living. Thus does she swallow up death, that she may become the Lord and giver of that life proceeding from the unity of God and the Lamb, the Alpha and the Omega of Divine Marriage.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE FLAMING SWORD greets its readers with a brighter face; it enters upon another period of progress on the basis of evident success in the work of promulgation of the scientific gospel of Koreshanity. THE FLAMING SWORD has been in existence for nearly twelve years, and from the beginning of its publication it has made steady progress against a flood-tide of opposition; but as time passes it improves in tone and appearance, and is rapidly advancing to the stage of popular recognition as the advocate of the only true system of Religio-Science extant in the world today. The appearance of this issue will doubtless please our many readers and admirers; we discard the old outside pages, and now in their place appear artistic designs that are both original and unique. We introduce an innovation; for the first time in the history of journalism, a magazine appears with two outside title-pages. The convenience of this unique arrangement is apparent, and its purpose is obvious; the name, place of publication, date, volume, and number appear on both sides. The pages are appropriate, and equally attractive; they are co ordinates; their features go together. Like Castor and Pollux, they ride side by side in the White Horse Army, in the Twin Land of America, represented by the constellation Gemini. Like Janus, THE FLAMING SWORD has two faces. Janus, from his wisdom, was regarded as a prophet, and was supposed to be as well acquainted with the future as with the past. This double gift of looking forward and backward was the experience and foresight of a wise man; he was the arbiter of war and peace, having the double knowledge of the past and the future; and he possessed the double attribute of war-maker and peacemaker. He was supposed to open and shut the gates of heaven, having in one hand a key to denote his power in heaven, and in the other hand a scepter to express his authority in the earth. Such authority was given to the Apostle Peter; and THE FLAMING SWORD is the literary representative of the true Apostolic Successor. The flaming sword placed at the east of the Garden of Eden, "turned every way"—both ways. The hand that grasps the hilt of the sword on the first title-page is the hand of the Prophet who guides his people by the light of his Science; the living embodiment of Liberty enlightening the world. The picture of the hand was drawn from a photograph taken in Washington, D. C., several weeks ago, especially for this purpose. The appearance of the lion and the eagle represents the rise of America to commercial power and supremacy; the deer symbolizes commercial integrity; the serpent represents the wisdom of commerce; while the torch is the symbol of reason. These two new pages are striking examples of the value of Koreshan methods of education. The pages were designed and developed in detail by the Editor of THE FLAMING SWORD, and executed in the art department of the Koreshan University by Mr. Moses G. Weaver, who came to us about one year ago from the mountains of Pennsylvania; and his work now graces the covers of the leading Twentieth Century Review of Human Progress, the only Magazine of Universology.

The question of social reform is agitating the world as never before; it is being discussed throughout civilization, and numerous remedies are offered for existing social and economic evils. There is a growing sentiment in favor of government ownership of public utilities, and the control of public interests by the government of the people. It is hoped by its advocates that through agitation and education, the people of a state or nation may be led finally to unanimously adopt such a plan. But there are obstacles in the way of such measures, and without corresponding changes in other departments of the world's activity—aye, even in the human mind and will, such reform could only be superficial and temporary. At best, with such a view in mind, only a gradual change can be contemplated, while realization of the ideal society must be remote in time. This is not very encouraging to men who are struggling against the adversities of poverty and the grinding power of monopoly. Richard T. Ely, a well-known advocate of government ownership, thus concludes an article in the Cosmopolitan: "We may, then, in conclusion say that while the obstacles to reform are many, and progress must, in the nature of things, be slow, the situation is on the whole a hopeful one. We must not anticipate great changes this year or next year, but we may feel pleased if there is a steady movement in the right direction. Nor must we be fanatical adherents of any one particular reform. Social improvements come in different ways and from every direction. Each one sees but a fractional part of the truth, and must be satisfied if he contributes a little to the grand work of social amelioration." This is a correct and excellent view of the present status of the world's social reform movement; it is the best that men can expect from reform originating in circumstances. Impulses from the circumference must centralize; it is a necessary factor of involution. The only hope is in a powerful impulse from the center of the sphere of reform itself; then, development will not be slow, because the whole situation is grasped by a central mind, the world's problems solved, and a movement inaugurated that will embrace the world in its field of growth. Such a movement is Koreshanity; it is in contrast with the above confessed powerlessness of common reform to soon fulfil the hope of the world!

The making of cryptograms is not a difficult thing; and it is for this reason, perhaps, that Prof. Totten was able to devise his astronomical cryptogram with which to interpret the Bible. By similar processes, we may prove that King Edward VII is the man of destiny. We construct a royal cryptogram, the key to which is the name of the new king. We discovered this cryptogram through a brief study of the names, dates, and history of the monarchs of Great Britain. The names Albert and Edward have each 6 letters—2 vowels and 4 consonants; 2 and 4 placed together make 24. The average length of the reign of each preceding Edward was 24 years; the average length of the reign of the 35 monarchs was, expressed in round numbers, 24 years; and the letters in the name Edward make 24 different combinations, so many legitimate English words—no more. Edward I reigned 35 years; while Victoria was the 35th monarch from William the conqueror. The numerical value of Albert Edward VII is 123; the aggregate length of the reign of the preceding Edwards is 123 years; divide 123 by 2, as his name is divided, and it gives his age, in round numbers, at the end of this year. The 35 monarchs reigned 835 years; and the numerical value of the 13 royal names employed from William I to Victoria, is just 835; $8+3+5=16$; $1+6=7$ —Edward VII. There are 7 royal houses from which the actual 35 reigning monarchs descended; and these 35 may be divided into five series of 7's, as follows: 7 reigned under 10 years each; 7, 45 years and over; 7 from 24 to 40 years; 7 from 10 to 12 years; and 7 from 13 to 23 years. 7 dates at which English monarchs ascended the throne end with the figure 7; and in 7 other dates the figure 7 occurs medially. There were 7 wars of England during the 19th century. The numerical value of Victoria is 97; $9+7=16$; $1+6=7$, indicating Edward VII, just as the date 1837 makes 19, indicative of the age of Victoria at her coronation, in the 19th century. The royal names and dates, full of 7's and striking coincidences, come down to and cluster about King Edward VII. He was the "Prince of Wales,"—13 letters; all told, there were but 13 royal names; Edward I began his reign in the 13th century. Now we have Edward VII. Is he to be the last English monarch?

Swami Abhedananda, a Buddhist missionary in America, takes the position that Jesus the Messiah did not teach a new religion; and that what is true of his teachings, was derived from Buddhism through Buddhist missionaries in Syria two centuries before Christ. As the matter is viewed by us, in the light of historical, ethnological, and etymological facts, this would be on a par with the statement that an electric light is not so brilliant as a candle, or that a star exceeds the sun in magnitude and importance. Buddha taught a conception of absorption into Nirvana; he referred to the state of devachan; he taught a doctrine of re-embodiment, and a system of morals. We maintain that Buddha did not teach a new religion; what he taught he received by tradition. He did nothing to demonstrate his doctrines; he was a witness of no resurrection; he never saw an individual in a state of devachan; and never was acquainted with anyone that was absorbed into Nirvana. What he taught was but the vitiated truth of that which existed in its purity thousands of years before Buddha lived. Enoch, in antediluvian times, founded a system of religion, and culminated his career in the natural world by actual theocrosis, through which he was absorbed into his following—he was absorbed into Nirvana. Noah put forth the light of Egypt; there that great civilization shone out in the world, and penetrated the darkness of the Chaldeans, the Hindus, and other nations and peoples of the East. Abraham taught re-embodiment, and the Hebrew prophets foretold the resurrection and the coming of a great kingdom, before the time of Buddha. Jesus was the perfect and immortal fruit of the Jewish dispensation; he was in the state of devachan, and he was absorbed into Nirvana—into his church. He taught the divine truth; he borrowed nothing from the East, for he was the Truth in concrete form. The seed does not copy the conceptions of the corpse. Jesus overcame death and demonstrated his truth, while Buddha fell a victim to corruptible dissolution. Jesus was the Light of the world, while Buddha was a star, which shone out in the darkness of a people who are yet unprepared to receive the light of the anthropotic Sun!

We were interested to some extent in the perusal of an article on astrology in the March Mind, entitled, "Heliocentric or Geocentric?" The article is the result of its author's study and observation as applied to the two current systems of astrology, the one (which is an old one) taking the earth as the center of the universe, while in the other, horoscopes are made on the basis of the sun as the center of the solar system. The first is that which fits the Ptolemaic system; the second, that which has been adapted by modern astrologers to fit the Copernican idea of the world. We quote from the article, parts of two paragraphs: "I believe the time will come when every astrologer will learn both systems, not to form a composition, but as a needful means of gaining the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. * * Both systems hold truth that should not be cast aside. Let us advocate neither at the expense of the other, but rather try to harmonize them; for the time comes swiftly when all will acknowledge that the many paths to the truth no longer present a tangle, but lie parallel as they near the summit." We cannot conceive that it is possible to harmonize these two systems of astrology on the basis of the present system of astronomy, for the simple reason that the two schools of astrology are as distinct as the two systems of astronomy with which they are associated. Astrology is a lost art; today, it is misapplied just to the extent that its purposes and principles are misconceived—and that is almost total. We maintain that the true system of astrology contains both concepts—that which is commonly called the geocentric, and that which is advocated as the heliocentric. The earth must be taken as the basis; its Zodiacal signs agree with the Zodiacal constellations in the physical heavens. We are on the earth's surface, not in the sky; but the planets and stars are in the sky, and their orbits are heliocentric—even the earth itself is concave to the sun, because the earth is a cell. The signs in the earth are geocircumferential as related to the base, while they are heliocentric as related to the sun. Koreshan Cosmogony solves the problems of astrology, and revives the true Astro-anthroposophy of the ancients.

The eternity of the universe is taught in the Bible and demonstrated in Nature. All law is eternal, by virtue of which day and night alternate, seasons come and go in regular order, centuries roll, dispensations bear their fruit, and cycles bring nuclei of humanity to the goal of destiny. The eternal laws of propagation make the rise and fall of humanity absolutely essential to the perpetuity of universal existence. Every seed says, in a language of its own, when it views the old and dying plant, "Behold, I make all things new!" Events recur; history repeats itself; the Golden Age returns every 24,000 years; it is the time when the world is restored to conditions of universal peace and happiness, and when the divine Seed multiplies and replenishes the earth. The prefix re means back, again, return, repetition. The world will be reformed by processes of regeneration, and in the results the world will rejoice. The divine Seed was planted in humanity that it might reconcile God and man; to establish the new religion, and to revive and rejuvenate man. We have before us the fifth annual report of the Chicago Bureau of Charities, Englewood District, which is one of the twelve integral parts of the entire bureau. It affords us opportunity to review the character of the work of organized charity. This is a society which is supposed to care for the poor. It asks the public to contribute its savings; and sometimes the hard-earned pennies of the poor are utilized. A part of its work is to secure vacant lots for cultivation by poor families; institute home libraries; reform bad boys; give fresh air outings to children; supply medical aid and clothing to the sick and destitute of the district. We take the items in the financial statement of the Englewood Division of the bureau: The disbursements for the year ending November, 1900, were $1771.60, while its receipts were $1544.30; leaving an indebtedness of $227.30. Out of $1771.60, $1399.12 went for salaries, rent, and other expenses, leaving only $372.48 for fresh air outings, emergency relief, gardens, and miscellanies. Thus only about 21 per cent of the entire amount contributed for charitable purposes found direct application to the needs of the poor. 79 per cent of the whole is absorbed in the red tape and machinery necessary to deliver the 21 per cent to the destitute! The same conditions exist in the charitable institutions of the nation, and in the Bible and missionary societies of the world. This is false philanthropy; modern charity is a humbug. Better let the poor do the begging themselves; it is less expensive!

The pope's encyclical letter on socialism is published because it is desirable to give the Catholics the use of a limited vocabulary concerning economic questions, and to instill into the mind the assumption that the papal church is the Christian democracy, involving the fundamentals of true socialism. However, the pope looks upon modern social democracy as he does on Protestantism—fallacious and dangerous. The papal conception of socialism is not that of the commonwealth, or the abolition of private property. He says that Christian democracy "solemnly insists on the right of acquiring and of possessing and maintaining the proper distinction of degrees in every well-constituted society;" in other words, he means that society should be characterized by unequal property rights and privileges, and that the "distinction of degrees" in society, means the possession of property and the enjoyment of luxury according to rank in the church. But in such an arrangement even the pope sees conditions of poverty, for he says that the church should always be zealous in the "enterprise of charity."

Editor Bryan says that McKinley is an emperor. Very well; if he is, the people made him so; the democratic idea is to accept the will of the majority. The people voted to allow the millionaire to continue to accumulate wealth; they voted for the trusts, and the trusts are increasing in power; they sustained the Administration's Philippine policy, and American sovereignty continues in the East. If imperialism has come, it is the will of the people. If that will is bad, it is so much the worse for the doctrines of democracy; if it is good, it is not wise to oppose it. It appears to us, however, that it is well to oppose the present powers of oppression; and it appears to us also, that there is something radically wrong with the fundamental principles of a so called government by a people who cannot personally control themselves, and who will allow the money power to rule in all their industrial, commercial, and political affairs.

Rev. Ducey, a noted New York priest and socialist, is the author of the following "Millionaire's Prayer" to the gold god—a paraphrase on the prayer which Jesus taught his disciples: "My father who art in heaven; hallowed be thy name. My kingdom has come on earth; thy will be done—in heaven; my will be done here. Give me this day all the income I want. Give me my debts in violence against humanity, in foreclosure against my debtors. Deliver us this day from all the 'isms' that destroy our power to enslave humanity. Mine is the kingdom and the power, and thine be the glory forever. Amen!"

Physicists of the past have had much to say concerning the latent heat of solids; but the Scientific American remarks that "a solid has no latent heat. It is liquefied by heat, and this heat becomes latent. The term latent is going out of use. It is not found in the best text-books. We simply say 'heat of liquefaction.'" There has been much said about latent divinity in the mortal man; it is time that the advocates of the idea should know that there is no such thing as latent divinity, nor latent heat nor love; and this will soon be demonstrated to the world.

The status of the Martian question, notwithstanding all that emanates from the Lowell Observatory, is summed up in the following paragraph in an astronomical article by Henry Norris Russell, Ph. D., in the Scientific American, March 2, 1901: "So at present, we can only say that no completely satisfactory theory of the condition of Mars' surface has been advanced, much less demonstrated, although those which assume the presence of intelligent life on the planet will always remain the most attractive to the imagination."

A gospel gold mine is a new thing in history, but a movement is on foot to establish one in Colorado. It appeals to churchmen to invest in its stock; the mine is to be opened with prayer—and perhaps with picks also. The greater portion of the proceeds is to be expended in building a great gospel temple, the surplus to be used in feeding and clothing the poor. The originator of the scheme thinks he is inspired by the Almighty; perhaps he is—by the almighty gold in the vicinity of Cripple Creek!

Kant said: "Give me matter, and I will explain the formation of a world; but give me matter alone, and I cannot explain the formation of a caterpillar." This suggests the reason why the chemist will never solve the problems of life. With spirit alone nothing can be accomplished—the christian scientist denies the existence of matter, and has done nothing but inflate empty heads with noxious breath. Spirit and matter in their highest and most perfect conjunction and unity, constitute Cause itself.

A new method of municipal reform is introduced in a Chicago high school—that of training children for good citizenship by introducing courses in the municipal code, and enlarging on what constitutes pure city government, and telling how it is to be secured. This is education with a vengeance; men who are now unable to accomplish anything in the way of reform, are supposed to be able to teach the rising generation how to achieve the victory!

Pluto, in mythology, was the presiding deity of hell, the supreme ruler of the infernal regions. He sat on his throne surrounded with darkness, and ruled the spheres of hades. The plutocracy of today is the government by the money power, in which the love of gold is the great spirit which pervades the modern hells of humanity. Pluto sits again enthroned in the hearts of millions, who are in the tangible hells of mortality.

To the modern mind the universe is a puzzle, man a riddle, and life an enigma. Origin and destiny are alike unknown to the scientist and the clergyman, who talk of life and worlds beyond the stars; their solutions of the problems of existence are very far fetched!

Thought is the progenitor of all things; revolution of the spheres of the physical cosmos is the result of the freedom of action of man, while the direction of revolution is derived from man's choice of action.

Every thought is a spiritual entity; a progressive thinker involves millions of progressive spirits, because the spiritual world is in humanity.

When a corrupt social caste develops in a land of boasted freedom, worthy men are cast out, and politicians take the places of statesmen.

The greatest hero thinks more of the world than he does of himself; his life is a life of sacrifice. He that is greatest is the servant of all.

There is no mystery except to those who cannot see; there is no miracle except to those who cannot understand.

Surveyors Project Curved Lines.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Have not straight lines been projected by engineers? Is it not a fact that in the construction of long tunnels, that at times the work is carried on from both sides of the mountain, the tunnels meeting midway, and the sides approximating with great accuracy? Is not this the driving of a straight line through solid rock, as it were? If the tunnels be driven from equal altitudes above sea level, and meet in the center, would the completed tunnel—under present engineering practice—be straight, or would it curve in conformity with the curvature of the earth's surface? If straight, could a person using a powerful telescope at one end, directing its axis parallel with the sides, see through the tunnel?—E. S., Philadelphia, Pa.

It is a fact, that engineers and surveyors perform some remarkable feats of accuracy in the construction of tunnels, canals, etc., in leveling, and in geodetic survey. Notwithstanding this, no engineer or surveyor outside of Koreshanity, has ever surveyed an air line. Lines which do not curve either to the right or the left, are frequent results of the work of survey; but the factors of perspective and curvation of visual lines preclude the possibility of extending an air line through space by means of optical instruments. In the great American geodetic survey over the North American continent, the surveyors followed the 39th parallel, but they also followed the curvature of the earth throughout the entire distance. From the basis of this fact, it is quite apparent that surveys as now conducted follow the earth's curvature.

Mining and tunnel surveys do not differ materially in principle from surface surveys; the work of construction of tunnels is but the result of accurate leveling. If tunnels be driven from equal altitudes above sea level or a given datum line, and meet in the center, which they sometimes do, within a very few inches, the opening when completed is level, conforming to the curvature of the earth. This is inevitable because of the methods of survey employed. However complicated such work may be in detail, the principle involved is that of back and foresight surveying, in which foresight is positive and backsight is negative; they neutralize each other, and thus conform to the curvature of the earth, whether that surface be convex or concave. Johnson, in his elaborate work on "Theory and Practice of Surveying" in all its phases, asserts on page 74, that if the back and foresights are equal, "the effect of the earth's curvature is eliminated by so doing, however long the sights may be." There are few grade tunnels, and these are, for the most part, in mines where tunnels follow the veins.

A tunnel 10 or 15 miles in length, perfectly straight like a tube, could be seen through with a telescope, if placed midway between roof and floor, and midway between the sides, because perspective would operate equally on all sides. But this is quite different from surface views, where the solid surface is beneath, and not counterbalanced by a corresponding solid surface above; and quite different also from surface surveys, because geolinear foreshortening operates in surface views in conjunction with vertical perspective, and a horizon is formed, not because the earth is convex, but because, so far as visual lines are concerned, it is practically a plane. The only difference between a view on a plane surface and a view on a concave surface, from the same altitude, would be, that on the latter the horizon would be farther away, and the geolinear extense in view greater; and in proportion to the rapidity of concave curvature, the more the retinal picture of the view would elongate.

Koreshan View of Marriage.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Will you please give the Koreshan teaching in regard to marriage after the establishment of the Kingdom, as fully as possible; and of the relation which the world will sustain to Koreshanity. If these questions have been answered, kindly send copies containing replies. We enjoy your question department of THE FLAMING SWORD very much.—Mrs. N. C. C., San Francisco.

The Koreshan teaching regarding marriage in any period of the world's progress is that of purity of the marriage relation; that it should be for its legitimate purpose—that is, the production of offspring. This doctrine will be applied wherever Koreshanity prevails, until the present degradation of man through desecration of the functions of procreation will give place to obedience to law, and consequent refinement and longevity. We advocate monogamy. Celibacy will never obtain generally throughout the world; it will be confined to given nuclei or circles of religious orders.

After the establishment of the divine kingdom, marriages will continue in the mortal planes; they will be authorized by the state, in some such legal form as will be recognized by society. It is not the purpose of Koreshanity to abolish marriage, but to enlighten the world regarding pure marital relations. We have no sympathy with promiscuous marriages nor free-lovism in any form. During the coming age, there will be marriages in the outer circles of the Koreshan Societies. In the highest marital orders there will develop the highest form of mortal marital relations, and thousands of mothers will bring forth offspring through the application of the law of parthenogenesis. Such marriage relation will be somewhat after that which obtained between Joseph and Mary, the parents of Jesus the Messiah; the offspring, however, will not be immortal, but the product of the highest mortal plane.

The relation the world will sustain to Koreshanity, is that of citizenship in the various nations of the Universal Empire. Church and state will be united; through the coming Theocratic government, the world will be reduced to order. The people will be taught the great principles of Koreshanity; societies and forms of worship will be instituted for the people at large, and the whole world will ultimately recognize the new Church, and obey its laws in all affairs and relations. The world will be governed in justice and equity; the seat of the new government will be in America. We may point to the British empire as a crude suggestion of the people's loyalty to the Royalty of the coming great Empire.

Ratio of the Earth's Curvature.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—You say that on the convex side of a globe 24,000 miles in circumference, the depression from the tangent is as to the square of the distance, multiplied by 8, which gives the depression in inches. If I start on such a globe and go 12,000 miles, or half way around, is not my fall, or the depression of the earth, equal to the diameter of the globe—8,000 miles? But the square of 12,000 is 144,000,000 which, multiplied by 8 gives 1,152,000,000 inches, which equal 96,000,000 feet, or 12,500 miles. I do not see where my error is. The earth is only 8,000 miles in diameter, while the above calculation gives more miles for depression than half the circumference. Please explain.—D. E. S., Santa Ana, Cal.

The error lies in your misconception of the application of the rule. Draw a tangent to a circle; follow the arc from the tangent point to 90° from starting. At the tangent point the arc is parallel with the line; while for the last mile in the quarter-circumference, the drop is an even mile, because the arc there is at right angles with the tangent line. So, over an arc of 90° there is a constant increase in the ratio of departure of the arc from the tangent.

If the earth is considered as having a diameter of 7,920 miles, its circumference is 24,980 miles. The depression on a convex globe 24,980 miles in circumference, for the first mile from tangent point, is 7.92 inches; the second mile, four times that, and so on for several miles. At the end of the first hundred miles the depression per mile would be a little over 8 inches; so that for all practical purposes, for the first hundred miles the average depression per mile may be considered as 8 inches per mile. To be strictly accurate, a new ratio would be necessary for, say, every hundred miles or so, because the quarter circumference must be equal in depression to the earth's radius. The same results would be obtained with reference to the rise of surface in a concave earth. The common rule applies for all ordinary purposes of observation and experiment within the range of vision, even from high altitudes.

The Koreshan Telescope.

The Editor of Radiant Centre, Washington, D. C., Writes of Koresh and Koreshanity.

DR. CYRUS R. TEED, founder and publisher of THE FLAMING SWORD, is in Washington at present, delivering a course of lectures on Koreshanity. Very many of my readers do not know what Koreshanity implies, and I confess to a limited knowledge of the cult myself, but what I do know is this: It sets all known laws of the cosmos at defiance and flashes its flaming sword in the face of established custom. The founder, DR. TEED, or KORESH, as he is called, promulgates the idea that we are living on the inside of a hollow sphere, the sphere being this planet, and constituting the entire universe, outside of which there is nothing, and inside of which are set the starry heavens. In listening to this statement I was forcibly reminded of what Howard McQueary once said about the furniture of the human mind being screwed so tightly to its flooring that a rearrangement of the former entailed a ripping up of the latter.

Yes, as I listened to KORESH, I became conscious of a shaking up and a commotion within, which seemed to threaten the mental timber, and, fearing the bottom might fall out and leave me in a state of vacuum, I quietly took out a screw or two so as to admit, if necessary, of a new arrangement without a catastrophe. I know it is not considered quite the thing to "have a screw loose," but, from my point of view, it has its advantages.

You know Galileo had the tight screws to wrestle with when he came along with his little innovation, and Professor Baden Powell tells us that in the invention of the telescope and the discovery of the moons of the planet Jupiter: "Galileo, having sufficiently improved upon his instrument, now began sedulously to direct it to the heavens, and Jupiter formed the object of examination. No sooner was the telescope pointed to that planet than the existence of the satellites was detected, and their nature soon ascertained (Feb., 1610). These and other observations were described by Galileo in a tract, entitled 'Nuncius Siderius,' which excited an extraordinary sensation the moment it appeared. Many positively denied the possibility of such discoveries; others hesitated; all were struck with astonishment.

"Kepler described in a letter to Galileo

the impression made on him by the announcement. He considered it wholly incredible; nevertheless, his respect for the authority of Galileo was so great that it set his brain afloat on an ocean of conjecture to discover how such a result could be rendered compatible with the order of the celestial world, as determined by the five solids.

"Sizzi argued seriously with Galileo that the appearance must be fallacious since it would invalidate the perfection of the number 7, which applies to the planets as well as to all things natural and divine. Moreover, these satellites are invisible to the naked eye; therefore they can exercise no influence on the earth; therefore they are useless; therefore they do not exist.

"Others took a more decided, but still less rational mode of meeting the difficulty. The principal professor of philosophy at Padua, (in which university Galileo was also a professor), pertinaciously refused to look through the telescope."

Just think of it! But, after all, the best way is not to look through the telescope at all if you don't mean to loosen a mental screw, because really it would have a tendency to unsettle you.

For my part, I don't mind being unsettled once in a while, and I have heard it rumored that something of the sort is quite essential to the evolution of mind and the construction of new brain cells. Scholars call the process "Apperception," but in plain language it amounts to this—the ideas of the mind group themselves in a sort of arch with a dominant idea on top to maintain order and concerted action. But after a while the "Dominant" gets old and gray and doesn't look after the interests of his subjects as he should, so in stalks a new "Dominant," a vigorous young fellow who carries things with a high hand, until he finally deposes the old "Dominant" and takes the throne himself. Usually he brings a retinue of "subdominants" with him, and, of course, the old "subs" don't like this one bit, for it throws them quite out of office. They don't all go, however, for some of the "subs" readily adapt themselves to the new order, and afterward are heard to declare that they enjoy the government and are glad they are in it.

I observed my "Dominant" applying his eye to the Koreshan telescope, and he said afterward that he did not exactly like the field of view. He said that, being a "Dominant," he did not relish being imprisoned in a cell. He would rather be outside of it, or on top of it, and I quite agreed with him.

But we all (that is, the "Dominant" and all the "subs" and I) were of one mind—we all said that DR. TEED was a man of exceeding power, and that if he did not convert the world to his opinion it would not be the fault of his reasoning or his eloquence, but owing to the mental screwage in the minds of his hearers, and possibly an obstinate fact or two. He may be right! Who knows?

At any rate, some few people are now embracing his idea of "Immortality in the Flesh," which he says he promulgated some thirty years ago, but he declares that people cannot think themselves into Immortality because the Christ life is the door. Of course, to go through that door takes a deal of thinking, too. Still, a man may think and think, and not be a Christ! Do you not see the point? It is worth considering.—The Radiant Centre, Washington, D. C.

When the Poor Become Rich.

The Editor of Hearst's American Instances a Few Cases of Human Selfishness.

The trouble with this world, the trouble with civilization at the point which has been reached, the trouble with society and social organization, does not reside in the cold-heartedness of the rich. The real trouble with humanity lies within humanity itself and not with any class.

Take a million poor men and one average rich man. Listen to the poor men as they discuss their lucky fellow. How bitterly they comment on his intelligence. They will point out to you many ways in which his money is spent—ways which to them seem criminal. It is a private car for himself, the cost of which would feed a hundred families for two years. It is extravagance here and extravagance there, and often there grows up among the unlucky a stupid, unreasoning hate for the fortunate and extravagant man.

Viewing the extremes of wealth and of poverty, various men who call themselves philosophers offer various explanations. One sort of philosopher, who is a peculiarly irritating idiot, will tell you that the rich man spending his money foolishly gives employment to the poor and therefore does well. The stupidity of this statement has been exposed, and it still lives.

Another sort of philosopher will tell you that poverty is a very good thing for some and riches a good thing for others, and that we should all be happy in our station. This is the theological, philosophical gentleman, who sometimes leads to revolution by irritating the poor too much.

The fact is, that we of the human race are a great family of half-developed babies. Among similar circumstances, with few exceptions, we are all similar. The poor child in the gutter looking through the rich child's window sees the rich child stuffing itself with cake, oblivious to poverty outside. Make the poor child rich, and the very next day it will be stuffing itself with cake, equally oblivious to the outside world.

At Princeton there was a hunchback bootblack. He worked in the cold and in the heat for scarce five-cent pieces. He slept on a hard bed and had poor food. He saw the rich young students around him. They ate and drank and wore finer clothes. The heart of the hunchback was bitter. "If I had such wealth," said he, "how glad I should be to help those who suffer." This bootblack inherited some thousands of dollars. As rapidly as possible he spent all of those dollars, and all on himself. This happened some time ago. We meant to write about it at the time, but forgot.

Now comes the news of John A. Bunting of San Francisco. Mr. Bunting used to keep a railroad water-tank on the desert near Tucson, Arizona. After years of hard luck he became a freight brakeman. He was still poor. As he turned his brake or stood about in the cold he thought of the lucky millionaires, of their heartlessness, of the injustice of fate and of various other things which make our anarchists.

From his salary he saved a little money and finally lent a friend a small sum, receiving as security a mortgage on forty acres of land. The man could not pay the mortgage. Did the brakeman sympathize and say "Never mind"? Not at all. He foreclosed the mortgage and took the land. He discovered an oil well on the property, and he is now a millionaire. He arrived in San Francisco the other day.

His business was important. Possibly you will think that he came to spend his millions to help men and women as poor as he had been.

Think again. He came to order a private car of the best kind that can be built. He is a millionaire and he is acting like his fellows, thinking mainly of himself. When he was a poor devil he acted like his fellows and thought mainly of himself.

Occasionally, and most fortunately, a man arises among us capable of abstract sympathy. Such a man feels sorrow for the hungry and sorrow for the cold, though he himself may be neither hungry nor cold. Such a man helps the world move and is responsible for such progress as exists. The majority of us are selfish and self-centered. The poet who said "A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind" might well have added: "None but a fellow feeling has any effect upon us." We are a selfishly imperfect lot. The main hope lies in education and in the slow progress of time.—Hearst's Chicago American.

The Literature of Koreshanity

Uncovers the Mystery of Ages.

THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A glimpse of Koreshan Universology, in its application to human thought and life, preparatory to the establishment of the Social Theocratic System, called the Kingdom of God, may be obtained by a careful study of fundamental principles.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY

Founded by Koresh (Dr. Cyrus R. Teed),
A. D. 1870.

THE EARTH is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Sun, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth constituting the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we INhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, and the pattern of the new order of Human Society.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univocal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Book of Revelation.

Part XII.

The Decline of the Church From its First Love ; Return to that Love is in the Recognition and Confession that the Godhead is the Man, the Messenger or Messiah.

NEVERTHELESS I HAVE THIS AGAINST THEE, THAT THOU HAST DECLINED FROM THY FIRST LOVE. Rev. ii: 4. (From the Original Greek.)

THE TESTIMONY OF THE LORD JESUS to John, in this text, pertains also to the church of Ephesus. The church of Ephesus primarily implies the science of life as distinct from the application of the principles of life. The Lord had a charge against this church, the specific character of which may be determined by a consideration of the nature of the judgment pronounced on such in that church as did not repent. Supreme or first love is the love of God, with its accompaniment, love of the performance of uses to the neighbor. If one says, I love my neighbor, and does not love to perform uses to that professed neighbor, he merely lies and is worse off than if he had not made the profession. The first love as to the Lord God, implies that there was a knowledge of the character of the Divinity that was worshiped. No man can love God until the character of God can be defined. God created the Lord by and through the law of generation from the human race. This Son of God was produced in the image and likeness of God. This means that the Son was just like the Godhead that produced him. Hence it was declared of him that he was the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

Jesus the Son possessed all the attributes of the Deity who produced him; he was the reëmbodiment of the Father who was in him. This knowledge of the character of the Divinity that was in the Lord, the Son of God, induced the first or highest love to the Lord. The church of Ephesus, the first condition of the church at the end of the age, in those who have not returned to this conception of the Divinity of the Lord Jesus, is a want of the true conception of God as the Man. At the end of the age, the Light of the world comes to those who are pretending to love the Lord, and also to those who look for his appearing; and to both he sets forth the true doctrine of life. There are two distinct phases of character in those who are in this desire; one class will be ready to see the light and accept it, while the other will not accept; they will therefore reject the truth, because it is not in harmony with false and preconceived opinions. The candlestick, lamp, or source of instruction will be removed from them. To remove the lamp-stand, does not signify that a lamp or church will be removed from the ones who will not return to the first love, nor does it imply that God will remove one of the planets, which would be the logical thing to do if Professor Totten's views are correct; but they will have their views so confirmed that they can see no light in the source of light, which in the literal sense means simply, that the Messenger of the Covenant, who is the Light, will be regarded as the messenger of darkness.

What is to be done to embrace the first love? There must be a recognition of the great truth that the Godhead is the Man. There must be a return to that confession of Peter when he declared: "Thou art the Son of the living God," which means that if the Lord Jesus was the Son of God, he was the embodiment of all the attributes of the Divinity who produced him. The universal condition of the church today, is that the Lord Jesus is only a part of God, and not the fulness of the Godhead, as declared of him. This denial of the Father,

Son, and the Holy Ghost (Spirit), in the Lord Jesus, is the denial of God, and is therefore antichrist. A return to the first love is the recognition of not only the fact that God is man, but of the further fact, that the Messenger of the Covenant is the promised return of the Messiah, and that the confession of this Messenger is a return to the first love—if this return involves also a return to the love of the performance of use to the neighbor. The fallen condition of the church will be seen by what follows:

“Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his [not its] place, except thou repent.” It is evident that the church is fallen, and that repentance is required. The command is not to return to the first faith; this should be particularly noticed: “Repent and DO the first works.” It is of the greatest importance that the student should regard the stress that is here laid upon the fact that works constitute the first essential of life, for the allusion is to life; the promise to the repentant is, that he shall be given to eat of the Tree of Life.

The universe as a whole is the Grand Man, and is in the form of the individual man. The physical universe, or, as we denominate it, the alchemico-organic cosmos, is in the form of man as the cell, before incubation has arranged it in the form of the final government of humanity, reduced to the perfect government, which is the Grand Man in the incubated form. In other words, the physical universe is the great egg in its physical existence. The incubated life from this egg is the man in the universal order. As the physical universe has its specific center, into which all the energies of the entire grand cell converge and flow, so the anthropostic universe or the Grand Man, incubated, has its nucleus and center into which all the pneumatic and psychic energies of the entire humanity flow. This pneumatic and psychic center is in the heart of the human race, and is human in every particular.

Modern Christianity says the Lord was both divine and human; Koreshanity says that the Lord was divine both in his interior life and in his exterior humanity; his visible humanity was divine. The Son of God was specifically divine in his visible manhood, for in his external manhood dwelt the fulness of the Godhead bodily. In the form of the visible man, the Lord was in the fulness of his power, in the most perfect degree, because in that visible manifestation he became and was the seed of regeneration; that is, reproduction. This law or principle may be illustrated by the ordinary tree, which produces its fruit and seed before it can produce the new tree. The beginning of creative power is not in an invisible life. A tree is composed of its root, trunk, branches, leaves, and fruit. These are the visible parts of the tree. This tree contains the invisible and immaterial forces. The visible tree alone cannot reproduce a tree, nor can the spirit alone reproduce a tree; neither can both together reproduce a tree until the visible and invisible tree, that is, the spirit and body of the tree, have together produced a seed of the tree. This is not psychic; it is not pneumatic, that is, spirit, but rather, a tangible seed of the tree to be reproduced. The visible seed contains the tree in its involved manifestation. The spirit of the tree has been rolled together as a scroll in its visible product, and with power to reproduce another tree. The power to recreate resides in the seed, which is the first and the last. No tree can be reproduced but from the tangible seed.

The universe cannot reproduce itself and thus perpetuate its existence, except through its visible, reproductive seed. As the universe is in the form of man, its seed is also in the form of man. The universe cannot recreate itself but through its involved visible product. This visible involved product is the visible man; this is the Son of God; it is the Godhead in his fulness, in his holiness, and in his power. This is God manifest in the flesh. This was comprehended by the primitive church, but the church has fallen from this consciousness, and therefore from a knowledge of God. A return to this first essential of the knowledge of God, is the first step toward a true worship or love of God.

The beginning of the creation of a new tree is in the seed, in which the tree is in its fulness, in its wholeness, and in its power. The beginning of the creation of the universe is in its seed, which is the absolutely perfect Man. In this perfect Man the universe is involved, and from this Seed-man the universe has its beginning. In this Man the universe is in its fulness, in its wholeness (holiness), and in its power. This Seed-man was planted in the church, and from this the universe acquired its new impulse for perpetuity. A lack of this knowledge is a lack of the possibilities of salvation. Hence the stress laid upon the fact, that the church of Ephesus has left, or fallen from, its first love, and must return.

The Lord Jesus said: “A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another.” He not only presented the theorem of the principle or law of love as the one to actuate the race, but he substantially demonstrated in his own life the practical possibility of making the theorem operative as the energy of impulsion, and the motive to quicken the activities of the sons and daughters of men.

Effective Promulgation of Koreshan Cosmogony.

Growing Uneasiness of the Advocates of Modern Science; the Determined Purpose of the Apostles of Koreshan Universology is to Overthrow Fallacy.

WE HAVE SHOWN in our publications the true character of cosmogonic form, and have placed this revelation in contrast with the uncertain Copernican system of astronomy. We have devoted much energy and effort to bring the questions of Koreshan Universology prominently before the public for public discussion. In this effort we have been held up to insolent ridicule and most bitter persecution, consonant with the invariable rule to which every innovation upon prevailing public sentiment is subject. We would not be worthy of consideration, if our doctrines were not important enough to excite the animosity of the sentiment in both the secular and religious phases of thought which our system assails.

We have pushed our claims to a knowledge of cosmology, until the advocates of the spurious "sciences" begin to feel their insecurity, and the necessity for defending their right to the title of "scientist" and "scientific." So long as the "scientific" world rested in absolute security upon the ignorance of the laity, it felt no necessity for the discussion of the question of the Koreshan Cosmogony; but our persistence in the advocacy of the truth, in contrast with the audacious assumptions of the Copernican advocates, incites a growing uneasiness regarding the stability of an astronomy which has nothing but assumption upon which to rest its claims to acceptance. The whole batch of assumption and absurdity called modern science, is assaulted in front and rear by the consistent and determined purpose of the apostles of Koreshan Universology. We know that when our system is considered of enough consequence to receive candid notice from thinking men, and when the advocates of the prevailing system of astronomy begin to comprehend the fact that their premises, which they confess to be mere assumptions, are being analyzed by honest investigators and are known to be worthless as foundations for the building of the superstructure of science, they will be compelled to make an open defense of their untenable position.

The Copernican system of astronomy had its rise in the dark age; and there is not an astronomer of note who does not know and confess that there is nothing but assumption for its foundation. It is responsible for the agnosticism so much in evidence, and for the attitude of that stupendous farce, the "higher criticism." There is not a phenomenon manifest that is not easily and rationally explained and accounted for from the standpoint of the Koreshan Universology, whether belonging to the domain of physical or psychical manifestation; and per contra, there are no phenomena, either psychic or physical, rationally accounted for on the basis of the modern system of so called science. All that Koreshanity asks, is a fair chance at the absurdities of the so called scientific claims of the age. This chance we will make, for we know we have the truth and are making progress toward a comparative hearing.

The World of Want.

BY CAROLINE RICE SHAW.

I STOOD UPON a morning height and saw
The oceans roll; I caught the Light of Time
And felt the glad vibrations of the stars.
A century new swept grandly into space,
Golden with light of promise, while the old
Yet lingered in the glory of its going.
My heart was filled with love, with love of love;
Of life, of all that is.

The amber sea,
The purpling peak, the bursting bud, the bloom
Shook me with ecstasy. Sweet life and love
Thrilled every sense; when lo, a searching wail
Fell on mine ear; and turning swift as thought,
I looked from my World Beautiful, through shades
As deep as Hell, to that World Hideous where My brother dwelt.

There grim and gaunt he stood;
Wan-eyed Despair alone accompanied him.
I saw the knotted hands, the twisted frame,
The vacant eyes from which the soul had fled;
And even as I gazed he fell as falls
The stricken brute; then, struggling weakly up,

Bent to his task again as bent to oar
The galley slave of old.

Then heard I there
In that dark world of his the lean wolf's cry,
And saw young babes lie gasping out their lives
In homes where grewsome Want held fearful sway;
And beauteous girls I saw, selling themselves
For bread to thrice-damned monsters guised as men.
"Christ Jesus!" quick I gasped, "O Christ!" then stood
In anguish dumb, till in authority's voice
I heard His own, call loud across the gulf Of light between:

"Courage, my brother! yet
In this new century's dawn I see foreshown
That day when God the Nations shall convulse;
I see His forces rushing on in wrath.
Across the broad and glimmering plains of Time,
Torrents of Truth come sweeping on apace
To inundate the old worlds—worlds of time,
That from the cleansing may arise and stand
A nobler world, where Justice shall be king.
O weary manhood, rise and face the morn;
Rise, woman, rise! Our God is living yet!"

The Formidable Power of the Trusts.

Legislators Powerless to Cope With the Monsters; President Hadley's Prediction of Imperialism; the World Faces a Crisis, an Epoch of Revolution.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

PRESIDENT HADLEY OF YALE has predicted that there will be an emperor in Washington within twenty-five years, unless some means of controlling the trusts by public sentiment regardless of legislative measures can be found. The trust system is assuming the proportions of one of those great and terrible dragons which in olden times were said to devastate whole countries until some knight or hero could be found, willing to risk his life in combat with the monster. Even those who have contributed to it with their substance, in the shape at least of thought and will, which are the most substantial aids to any cause, are beginning to look upon it with exceeding dread.

It is significant that President Hadley sees that legislative measures are useless in the case of such a mighty power. Has not every legislator his price in gold? Is not the gold of the whole world virtually at the disposal of the trusts? It is also significant that the head of a great university does not suggest any practical method of restraint. Is it beyond the scope of collegiate thought and learning to devise the necessary means? The third point in this prediction, is the recognition that the tendency of the trusts is toward imperialism.

The commercial world, the religious world, and the collegiate world are dead. They are in their graves, and it was written long ago of this humanity: "There is no thought, nor device, nor knowledge in the grave whither thou goest." Nineteen hundred years ago there was a man sent from God, whose name was John. He was not that Light, but he came to bear witness of that Light. Today there is a Scientist sent from God to bear witness of the laws that are to bring forth the Sons of God. In an age of darkness, he bears witness of the Light to come.

Motion in both directions, from the center and toward the center, is limited by the law of terminal transformation to opposites. It is the law of the resurrection, whereby many who are in their graves shall rise again. The lowest natural humanity is the stratum to be transformed to the highest Arch-natural. This is an alchemical law, and the change to be effected is an alchemical one, whether it pertains to material atoms or social atoms. The formation of the steel trust is an object lesson which shows the gigantic power of the system that is still waxing. President Hadley is right; there is no hope of checking such a force by legislation. He is more astute than the Congressman from Wisconsin, who introduced a bill repealing all the duties on iron, steel, and their products except a few highly finished specialties, on the ground that these manufactures have ceased to be "infant industries" needing protection. Mr. Babcock urged in support of his proposal, that public sentiment is crys-tallizing so rapidly against the great combinations that the republicans must forestall the democrats in legislation, and the only hope of redress lies in free trade. Does anyone imagine that the passage of such a bill would produce the effect intended? Are there not ways and means innumerable of evading and outwitting legislation? Given a competitive system with a gold basis like ours, and free trade cannot prevent the centralization of power.

The talk of constitutional revision just now is ominous. The original constitution was framed to ensure the execution of the will of the people. Revision means the introduction of subtly worded clauses to insure the execution of the will of the trusts. President Hadley says that the trusts must be controlled by public sentiment. History proves that, given unregenerate man as an agent, public sentiment, which is public feeling, simply arrays one order of selfishness against another. The result is a clash of arms, but the conditions which spring out of the conflict only produce another imperfect form of government, founded upon the competitive impulse that dominates man in the hells before his heart of stone has been changed to the heart of flesh.

By the law of terminal transformation to opposites, a part of the human race must be changed. In the day when the Lord gathers the nations in hot anger, he has promised: "I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord." The present world is trusting in the power of gold. The little nucleus whose doctrines oppose this power, are poor for a season because their aspirations are toward chastity, which corresponds to demonetization; they mourn with the stress of longing for deliverance from their sins; so they are afflicted, but their trust is in the name or the character of the Lord. They wait with earnest expectation to be changed into His image and likeness. When the inevitable conflict comes in this country, they know that the kingdom of righteousness will be set up through the manifestation of the Sons of God; therefore they direct their desires toward the expected end.

Every trust that is formed to subvert public good, must be transformed to another upon a grander scale that shall minister to public good. Think of a great coöperative system where the profits of all industries accrue directly to the people! Think of such a combination of interests as the steel trust contributing to the public treasury! The crystallization of opposition to the trust system shows that it has almost reached its limit, and the clash of arms is near. Public sentiment will bring war, but nothing short of the power of God will bring adjustment. His right hand will set up the Empire. The republican party will not control the new Imperial System.

The Uses and Abuses of Money.

The Perverted Money of Modern Civilization and Co-ordinate Social Conditions; the Root of Good and Evil; the Money of the New Era.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

MONEY GENUINE AND MONEY FALSE are comrades of two opposed systems of commerce. Coincidental in relationship, these are sequenced by two antithetical qualities of industry. In the era of righteousness genuine money, genuine commerce, and genuine industry will have succeeded the spurious or unrighteous qualities active in the world today. The perversion of money is deemed by the mass of thinkers to be the assignment of coin, or its representative, to unworthy uses. Proceeding from this basis are as many shades of opinion regarding what constitutes unworthy use, as there are degrees of mind to conceive opinion, or diverse inclination in the field of infidelity, morals, and religion. Indeed, it is a subject upon which neither philosopher, priest, nor potentate can erect a standard for observance and expect it, while the form of money exists, to essentially modify the thought or the conduct of men.

The Apostle declared that the love of money is the root of all evil. The church struggles for money, the world struggles for money. The church is presumed to lay up its treasure in heaven, that is, it claims to do so; but as between the effort of church and world to accumulate lucre, there is but this appreciable difference: the world's endeavor holds the balance of power in frankness; it invests less in cant, and directs its undivided forces more openly to the mark; while the church, like a general with a halved army, spends a fund of energy in endeavoring to convince itself and the world that it does not love money. Shades of Righteousness! should one laugh or weep at thought of that pope who sold indulgences to sin that the profit thereof might rear skyward a tribute to St. Peter—St. Peter's cathedral in Rome! Instead of Paul, it should have been Peter to declare against the love of money, and the travesty had been perfect. Peter must have writhed under that happening—writhed that his embodiments were not complete, that he could not yet stand forth to do battle with and vanquish the old dragon!

No man may buy or sell without the mark of the beast in his forehead (credit) or in his hand (cash). Money is made the sesame to light, warmth, food, and clothing. Its absence closes the door upon luxury, art, refinement, and friends; for "no friend is so true as a dollar or two." Modern civilization has made it a god; between man and his natural sensual life, it has upreared the false money of civilization as a savior.

Genuine money is the miser's impossibility, the divine prodigal's delight; the balm which heals the wounds of the world and brings laughter to the sons of sorrowing men. It is hopeless to the counterfeiter; it rests not in the banker's coffer; steel vaults may not prison it, nor the cold chisel free it—God's coinage suffers no restraints; in the abundance of its freedom it outpours in its ministries and its bounties; its joy-giving and its mercies are unconsidered by itself from whom self has been eliminated; its boon-giving is but its revelings in fields of unsullied ecstasy, expanding and expending as its crowning joy. Genuine money—the guard and criterion of commercial uses, the love of the performance of uses to the neighbor, God's Messenger proclaims thee, and a transformed world will welcome thee!

Do such doctrines and the practices emulated by and about to culminate in Koreshanity, unfit people for the relations of a world whose business stress has buried the Christ standard? Yes, and it is ripe time that a certain portion of humanity becomes unfitted for the combined modern methods. From such unfitting, proceeds the salvation of the race. "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." (Rev. xviii:4,5.) The people of this mention were banded under Moses, in preparation to keep the spoken law; they were the visible following to whom the Christ held up that self-same law as their only hope of eternal life. These people become grouped in Koreshanity, a grouping which verifies a double promise—God's promise to scatter Israel and to gather them. The Christ, returned and operative through his Messenger, will make it possible for them to keep the law, for the season of preparation is nearly complete. "And He that sat upon the throne said, behold, I make all things new." (Rev. xxi:5). The nuclei of Koreshanity comprise the instruments of this Master Builder—his instruments in process of completion.

The mystic or symbolic Babylon of Revelation, which St. John saw divided into three parts, is supremely and distinctively manifest in the antichristian force of spiritism, antichristian "christian science," and antichristian theosophy. At the head of this trio stands modern spiritism—the leading force of that opposition to the personal characteristic of Deity, so manifest in what is denominated progressive thought of modern times.

The first great natural work for the liberator from human thralldom, is to submit to the world the true and practical remedy for the removal of the curse of bondage under which, as the pronouncement of God, humanity groans.

Unsealing of the World's Greatest Book.

The Book of Human Life and the Language it Contains; Its Rolling Together is the World Involved; the Divine Word from Which all Language is Derived.

W. ROSS WALLACE.

THE WALLS OF PUBLIC HALLS and libraries of the world are adorned with quotations of beautiful sentiments in metaphor from those whose business it is to make books. Milton says: "As good almost kill a man as kill a good book; a good book is the precious life blood of a master spirit embalmed and treasured up on purpose, to a life beyond." Bacon wrote still better, but knew not what he wrote when he said: "Some books are to be tasted; others to be swallowed; and some few to be chewed and digested."

Language is but expression, and may be found in every domain of existence. Communication is carried on in humanity through the language of commerce, having three specific domains—sex, secular, and church. If we employ characters to form words, and thus communicate substance to posterity through thought in books, we may in like manner, though in another form of expression, transmit our life to posterity by living characters, the result of sex commerce. In the domain of secular commerce, we communicate our ideas and wants to the world through the exchange of the goods of life, which are the creation of our brains and hands, by the application of industry to natural resources; and again, on a still higher plane, the goods of life are communicated from age to age, and from dispensation to dispensation, by the character which constitutes the channel or door through which the aspirations and desires of a world or age are carried into the next age or dispensation. This latter is church commerce; and its functions and bearing on the twentieth century we wish to consider.

If we are enabled to read correctly, we may read the cause in every effect; and if we are linguist enough to translate from one domain to another, we may discern that all language is derived primarily from the same root. In order to intelligently discuss the relative worth of books, it is well that we consider what is involved in the use of the word book, for words are employed to convey meaning. Our word book is derived from the Anglo-Saxon word boc, the beech; and as the Teutonic race used the beech parchment or scroll upon which to inscribe their characters of language, we have, then, its use applied to a collection of characters on leaves.

The Hebrew and Christian Scriptures contain all that is expressed in the bibles of other peoples; and the people among whom the Bible is known, express the highest development of the races. In this book, which Christendom believes to be the Word of God, there is the hidden meaning of the above quotations regarding books. But nowhere within its covers is there proof that it is the Word of God; but rather, the evidence is there that the tangible, living personality of the God-man is the Logos or Word of God—the veritable universe rolled up as a scroll, the root from whence all language of creation has its origin; and into which all creation involves itself again. Thus we have the processes of evolution and involution coördinately related. Evolution alone leaves the world in darkness as to the origin and destiny of man.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men. * * He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not. * * And the Word [declared to be God, which was Spirit,] was made flesh and dwelt among us. John i: 1-14.

As humanity is the only habitation that God has ever had, or ever will have, God the Creator dwelt among men. He it is of whom Paul wrote: "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature; for by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him: and he is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the head of the body, the church." The God-man was a living fact; he was the Word of God.

The character of the Word must ultimately be revealed by science. Our word science is derived from the Latin scire, to know; the Greek for knowledge is γνῶσις, gnosis. If we take what the so called scientists call science for knowledge, we shall be woefully deficient in knowledge, for the "knowledge" of the scientists is that which they do not know, it being predicated on assumption. That which the scientists taught as truth yesterday, they renounce today, and then they guess again. Before knowledge can get into the heads of the people, it is necessary for humanity to have a Head in which there is truth; and as the twentieth century dawns, the aspirations and desires of the people of the age culminate in a wave of expectancy throughout all lands; the power of human mentality will not have been spent in vain, for it is substance. Deliverance will come; the day of rest, the seventh day of our progress, is at hand. It will come as other great epochs in humanity have come; a man has always appeared on the scene of human activity at the right time.

Nineteen hundred years ago, the Jewish world looked for a man to come and deliver them. At that time, the equinoctial colure on the great Zodiacal belt of the heavens, marked a period in the stage of human affairs, indicating the coming of a unique character, the archetype of a new genus. That man was Aries, the Lamb or Ram, embodying the principles of begetting power. He vitalized the church with his Spirit, and gave the world a stupendous impulse in the lines of progress. He was the Seed-man, the microcosm, or universe in its least form; he was planted in the church—he fell into the human soil. His church was the seed church, and it also had to succumb to inevitable apostasy that the harvest might come. Christianity was instituted by a Man; he was its Head; he was the living Word of God, or involved Book of Lives, for he had gathered into himself the lives of all the progressive spirits of the Jewish age.

The early church possessed all the characteristics of its Head, in its interior life, for His life went into it, and conjoined himself with it. That was the true religion, the conjunction of God and man. The church was communistic; it was a united church and state in the least form. It died with its Head; it passed into declension. We may plant a potato, but when we look for the new crop, we find the old potato decayed.

Christianity was pure at its source; it is now a stench in the nostrils of the people, because the end is here, the time of the establishment of the true church—the Kingdom of God in the earth.

The sign is now passing from Pisces into Aquarius, the water-carrier; and we may now look for the Man who will as surely appear, (not as a prodigy in the skies, but as a scientist who will stand at the head of the coming dispensation, the glory of all ages,) as that the universe is perpetuated from age to age by inexorable law. This is the fact to look for, the scroll rolled together, the involution of all the ages, which, in its unrolling, will influence the world for future ages. This is one of the books of which Bacon spoke—the Book to be digested.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

CENTRALIZATION OF POWER is one of the most manifest tendencies of the world of industry and commerce; it is even more than a tendency—it is an accomplished fact in the formation of the gigantic trusts of the great West. The trusts demonstrate the power of organic unity, where essential governing heads are recognized and obeyed. The forces which control industry are rapidly centralizing, and the tendency is to one culminating, gigantic monopoly which shall dominate the world of commerce. A perverted co-operation is involved in the conduct of great corporations—a co-operation without commonwealth, a co-operation which, through labor-saving machinery and inventions, benefits the men who control, while it impoverishes the men who produce wealth. In the face of these stupendous movements in the industrial and commercial world, the various reforms are powerless to suggest an effective remedy for the evils entailed, powerless to avert the consequences of that imperialism which now controls the economic affairs of the civilized world. In the field of reform there are two general schools, one of which is socialistic, and the other is communistic; the latter, for the most part, takes on the form of colonization. The principles of socialism as now advocated, and the principles of communism are considered antagonistic; the one is considered broad enough to embrace the affairs of government in the ownership of lands and the control of public utilities; while the other is looked upon as a narrow conception, destined to result in failure. If colonies have been failures, so have many socialistic schemes; yet the fact remains that the numerous communistic movements are significant, and cannot fail to have weight in the solution of social problems. It is a significant fact that the most successful communities have centered about a religious conception, in which the bond of unity is stronger by far than any mere commercial or social ties. Koreshanity is the only system extant which harmonizes socialism and communism; and because it unites the two in proper relation, and inculcates the deepest religious convictions and instills the strongest motives for world-wide co-operation, Koreshanity will succeed. It supplies the essential and scientific basis, not for the federation of all reform movements, but for the unity of all forces of true reform. The central orders of the Koreshan government are communistic; there the hub is formed, the center, the heart, the core from which a great social and political system is to develop, and upon which the future government of the world will depend. The great communistic center is to the coming scientific social organization, what the central sun is to the great circumference of the physical cosmos. The Koreshan communistic center is the nucleus of the concentration of power; it represents the Head of the New Order, the beginning of the great trust of righteousness, established upon, the basis of the commonwealth of the people, involving all that is true of modern socialism in unity with the essential scientific and religious factors of the Imperialism of the Golden Age.

The objection is often urged that the vocabulary of Koreshanity is too extensive for the average mind to comprehend. Every now and then, some one asks why the literature of Koreshanity contains so many difficult terms, and requests statements of truth in simpler language. In the first place, the Founder of Koreshanity is writing for a wiser generation to come, and is expressing his truth in the most concise and precise form; in the second place, Koreshanity is for those who are able to comprehend it as it is now authoritatively promulgated. It is not so much in the language that the difficulty in comprehending Koreshanity lies; it is rather in the inability of the modern mind to grasp the doctrines taught, and the unwillingness to receive it no matter in what form it is expressed. Think of the time and labor necessary to master common school branches; and how much more work is necessary to go through a course of study in a university. People do not often object to the tedious processes of acquiring a knowledge of that which is taught in modern educational institutions. Such education is for those who have the means, the time, and the ability to master the courses. The study of Koreshanity is an education in itself. Do not expect to learn in a short time, all about the universe, the science of which covers vastly more ground than all the departments of modern science combined! In view of these frequent objections to Koreshanity, we refer to a letter we publish in this issue, from a youth of fifteen years, who is endeavoring to digest the contents of Koreshan literature, and who purposes taking up a course of study under the supervision of the teachers of the Koreshan University. If a young man yet in his "teens" is able to recognize the truth of Koreshan Unversology, and is encouraged to continue his study of it, it occurs to us that adults should be able to comprehend the Koreshan vocabulary, in view of the fact that dictionaries are almost as plentiful as Bibles! It is our opinion that if Koreshanity were expressed in language so simple that no one would ever meet a word in its literature that he did not understand, our books would read something like Sunday school literature intended for the primary classes! But Koreshanity is making some bold strokes to find mental giants, and the tension of Koreshan thought is gauged accordingly.

We cannot pass by without comment, the scathing arraign ment of American civilization by Prof. Scarborough of Wilberforce college, in a recent issue of Leslie's Weekly. The growing hatred of the Negro by the whites of both North and South, is the subject of discussion; and the horrible work of numerous mobs within the past year, is the ground for the following statements which are startlingly true: "Every colored face is a signal for attack; peaceful homes are menaced, even destroyed; and the Negro, citizen or stranger, no matter what his rank or station, is molested if he finds himself within the area of the whirlwind. There seems to be a reaction against civilization setting in—a return to barbarism—the assertion of those murderous instincts that cause the savage to revel in fiendish deeds. The increasing frequency of these acts of violence toward the Negro race cannot be overlooked, for they are gathering strength and momentum with each repetition." Besides these statements, the prediction is made that "this low element will be a monster in action some day, that will be felt by those who disregard its workings today. New grievances, deeper hatreds, will lead to singling out, not of races alone, but of classes, for vengeance to wreak itself upon." There is a deadening of the moral sense, a low estimate placed upon human life, an alarming indifference for the welfare of others, and a startling manifestation of the desire for blood. Justice has not asked lewd and lawless mobs to protect virtue by executing suspected criminals at the stake; nor has righteousness placed the work of industrial reform in the hands of those who resort to mob violence in strikes and attacks upon life and property. The world may well fear the work of infuriated mobs. The vortex is approaching—a whirlwind, a revolution, which will be as much greater than the French Revolution, as the territory of civilization is greater than France!

Rev. Gregory considers the world lost in utter mental chaos, in conflicting theories and opinions; and the way out of the difficulty is a weighty problem with him. He describes in a daily paper his visit to a center of propaganda in Chicago, where publications of almost every "ism" in the civilized world are disposed of; and he asks if they are not all "will-o'-the-wisps, shining but to bewilder and deceive. Clearly, it was a propaganda, but a propaganda of what? Was there a definite program? Not that I was able to discover. Was there any fixed or settled aim? I hope to die if I could learn any such thing. It was confusion worse confounded; it was pandemonium turned loose! It was chaos and old night rolled into one! * * So many panaceas—and the world still sick! So many infallibles—and the world still perplexed with doubt! So many ways—and no one of them leading anywhere unless it be into a deeper morass or into a darker jungle. * * It is something to have discovered that there is a problem; and when in addition to this we come to learn that the problem is a difficult one, all the more earnestly should we buckle ourselves down to the task of solving it." Then what? Let the reverend gentleman undertake its solution—and he will add one more theory to the hundreds already existing;—and perhaps it will be as fallacious as the others. Is there to be no end to this muddle, this medley, this confusion and chaos in the mental world? Not until some man is able to grasp the entire situation and solve the world's problems by one master stroke of genius. Let the world look for such a man, and let it recognize his greatness and power when he is found! Above all things, the true Scientist will be able to demonstrate his conclusions; then, the will-o'-the-wisps of the modern mental miasma will disappear in the light of Day!

The daily press mirrors the condition of the world in the form of news. A glance at the headlines for a single day reveals a startling state of affairs: "British and Russian Troops lined up for Battle.—Boers and British in Sharp Fight.—Pretty Bride takes Poison.—Miners' Strike Authorized.—Castellane Wounds De Rodays in duel.—Teachers Defied by Corporations.—Thieves Gag and Rob.—London Papers Talk of War.—Japanese Crash Imminent.—Cases of Starvation in New York.—Dock Strike in France Spreads.—Negro Burned at the Stake.—Riots at Barcelona.—Turkish Atrocities in Uscob." Day after Day the great world-panorama passes, with its changing pictures and shifting scenes. The leaves of the daily press, as they appear, give a kinetoscope effect of the world's movements, sometimes with startling reality, sometimes exaggerated, and sometimes purposely obscured in the interests of responsible powers. The world's present conditions are not ideal; they are anomalous and abnormal. Society should be very different from what it is, with its inharmony and inhumanity; its cries and crimes; its hells and horrors; its sorrows and sufferings; its competition and corruption; its lust and lawlessness; its greed and gold; its perversions and punishments, and its wars and woes. But we look forward to the time when different panorama will greet the eye—when the world will be reduced to order, when peace and harmony will prevail, when selfishness is eradicated, and all evils are destroyed; then the world will rejoice in the Scientific Gospel of Koreshanity, in the promulgation of which we now have to contend with the elements of chaos.

Modern Christians oppose the doctrine of reincarnation, but they pretend to believe in the resurrection. The words resurrection and reincarnation are synonymous, referring to the same thing. Resurrection means a standing again, while reincarnation means to come again in the flesh. Reincarnation is one of the most emphatic doctrines of the Bible. Nicodemus was informed that he must be born again in order to enter the kingdom. Jesus was the resurrection, the reincarnation of a specific line of Messiahs, prophets, and priests, and embodied the spirits of thousands of people who lived during the Jewish dispensation. The Messiah is to come again in the flesh. Every spirit which denies that the Messiah comes in the flesh is antichristian. David was reincarnated in Jesus; to David the promise was made that he should become the Lord's first-born, and Jesus was the first born; thus the son of David became David's Lord. The promise was made to Abraham that he should become heir of the world; Jesus inherited all power in heaven and in earth—he inherited the universe. The Scriptures teach re-embodiment; the same people who recognized the Messiah in his advent nineteen hundred years ago, are the ones who stand in recognition of him in his coming at the end of the age. The redemption of the spirit is not complete salvation; those who were born of the spirit through the baptism from Jesus, were to continue to progress in the world until the time came for the redemption of the physical body—when their mortal bodies should become transformed to the immortal flesh.

The president of the great steel trust is preaching the gospel of poverty, where the foundation of the noblest characters is laid. While it is true that experience in adversity is absolutely essential to the making of great men, it is not to be supposed that the trusts are authorized to establish schools of experience in the hardships of poverty, nor that the millionaires are great men. Schwab points to himself and other wealthy men as examples of success, and asks: "What satisfaction can there be in piling up vast wealth for the sake of wealth itself? The only part that money plays in success, is its reward. Money is the standard of value. It is the equivalent of merit." There! Think of the estimate the millionaire places upon himself! He means that he is above his fellows, and that his merit is measured by his money. Money is but the measure of his greed; and his success in accumulating wealth is due to the opportunity which the competitive system affords, to steal the wealth of the masses. This is not true success, for it is not the success of the world; from the standpoint of economic science, the success of the millionaire is a stupendous failure!

The highest conception of some minds concerning what the kingdom of God in the earth will be, is summed up in the following quotation: "The kingdom of heaven on earth will simply be an enlargement of the present family relation, minus its tyranny, restrictions, and selfishness." It seems to us that a society minus these three things would be very unlike the present family relation. This reminds us of the statement of a student, that "a crab is a large red fish." "Correct," said the professor, "except that a crab is not large, nor is it red, neither is it a fish." The new kingdom will consist of a new race of men—the immortal Sons of God, from which the present family relations will be excluded; for in that kingdom there is neither marrying nor giving in marriage, because the Sons of God will be Sons of the resurrection.

The fact that the Israelites pitched the tabernacle 42 times from Sinai to Palestine, has a scientific significance and corresponds to the 42 generations of the Jewish age—from Abraham to Jesus. During this period, the Almighty was embodied 42 times in the central line of his progress; he went from tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another—from prophet to prophet, and from priest to priest, in a successive line of embodiments. There are 42 mental faculties in the human brain, and these 42 faculties correspond to the 42 ancient divisions of the physical heavens into constellations. The modern arrangement of the constellations is arbitrary and unscientific.

Occultists teach that the natural world is the expression of the spiritual—the exact "counterpart;" yet it is inconsistently held that the interior mind of every man is perfect, consisting of the eternal and immortal "I am." If the soul and spirit of man are immortal while his external is mortal, where is the complete expression of the inner in the outer? The fact is, man is that which lives, physically and mentally; the soul and spirit of the mortal man are as mortal as his body. The soul and spirit cannot put on immortality until the body does; then the real man appears in his perfection—God appears in his own flesh.

Koreshan pessimism is manifest in the true diagnosis of the social, moral, and mental afflictions of the modern world—in the revelation of the cause and consequences of existing evils. But the brightest optimism is in the effective Koreshan remedy for all the ills of the hells. We see the approaching storm, with its terrible sweep of vengeance; but we also see the calm beyond, the rising Sun, the age of peace, the New Era of human progress.

The editor of Harmony has been reading THE FLAMING SWORD, and from it has learned that there is such a thing as involution—the co-ordinate of evolution; but he does not yet comprehend the fact that the highest involution occurs in humanity;—that such an involution is the world of man involved in the natural. The involved product of humanity is the Seed or Messiah, the personality of Deity.

If there were three persons in the Godhead, Jesus would have been three persons instead of one. The fact that he was the fulness of the Godhead bodily, is proof that the Godhead consists of but one person.

If it were impossible to comprehend the laws of the universe, the universe itself could never be expressed from the world of mind.

The central law of life is the Messianic law of the perpetuity of God and man through dispensational propagation.

The Irish lament the fact that St. Patrick did not visit the Garden of Eden before the serpent tempted Eve.

True government is but the maintenance of order in the relations and affairs of humanity.

The Science of Koreshanity is religious, and the Religion of Koreshanity is scientific.

God and man are in complete conjunction in the perfect Seed of divine creation.

Modern mysticism is unscientific; there is no mystery in knowledge.

Outside of the Earth's Shell.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Now that I have publicly announced myself a firm believer in the beautiful Koreshan theory of the physical universe, I am surfeited with perplexing queries from my friends. Please tell me in definite terms, how I should answer these three questions, and thus silence a score of persistent inquirers:

(1) What is the thickness in miles, of the shell or crust of the hollow globe, within which we live? (2) Is the outer surface of this hollow globe diversified with inequalities, or does it present a smooth convexity? (3) Is there supposed to be an infinity of space in all directions outside of and surrounding our Cellular Universe, and what is its character? Is it a vacuum, a vast expanse of ether, or what? Respectfully submitted,—L. P. VENEN, A. M., Teacher of Latin, Greek, Mathematics, and Physical Science, Olympia, Wash.

One of the evidences of the progress of Koreshanity, is the fact that it is interesting numerous high school principals and teachers, and editors of the religious and secular press in various parts of the English speaking world. Koreshan Cosmogony is invading the educational institutions of America and Europe. Thinking minds are beginning to realize the utter weakness of the popular scientific fallacies. Koreshanity shines brighter by direct contrast; our position is impregnable, while the popular position is defenseless!

(1) By analogy alone, it is apparent that the earth's shell is thin in comparison with its diameter. The earth is nearly spherical; and in this respect, and also in comparative thickness of the shell, it is analogous to the turtle's egg. The earth is an egg, and therefore the analogy is scientific. But there are physical facts, from the basis of which we reach conclusions that are more specific. We ascertain the specific relation and emplacement of the substances which comprise the shell, by means of their specific gravity. The primary substances are arranged naturally in the earth, as they are related by specific weight. We know the volume of the atmosphere—its weight and depth; we compare the atmosphere with water—its specific gravity, and its mass. From this comparison we deduce a ratio of relative thickness to be applied to all other substances in the shell. By this process, which is quite elaborate, and too intricate to fully present and describe here, we determine that the aggregate thickness of the geologic, mineral, and metallic strata which comprise the shell, is about 100 miles.

(2) The metals constituting the firmament of the cosmos are evenly stratified; hence, the outside surface of the outermost layer (gold) is perfectly smooth. The only exception is the surface outside of the Zodiacal belt, or the alimentary canal of the physical cosmos. Here the strata of metals are thicker; and outside the gold stratum, along the line of the ecliptic, there are a number of thin layers of metals, including platinum, and substances having a greater specific gravity than gold; these layers form a sort of a ridge like a turgid vein, all around the convexity—but it is not rough; it is smooth like a polished surface.

(3) The universe is limited in form. Limitation is a property of form; and the limit of the form of the earth or the universe, is its outermost stratum of metal. The materials of the earth are in existence—in direct contrast with nothing. Extension is a property of form; hence, beyond the limit of the physical form there is no extension. As space is the measure of extension, space is necessarily confined and limited to the cosmos itself. All the room there is, is in the cosmos; it is one great room, and there is no more. Space is dimension, and is confined to existing things. Nothing has no space; therefore, space does not extend beyond the limit of the earth's physical environ. There is nothing outside; the universe occupies all the space there is. A vacuum implies space which is susceptible of being filled—empty space. But on the outside there is no room for empty space; therefore, there is no vacuum—no space unfilled or unoccupied.

Some minds have claimed that this is inconceivable. We assert that limitation is conceivable and thinkable, while the idea of infinite space is absolutely inconceivable; and this is a metaphysical proof that infinite space does not exist. The only metaphysical basis for the conception that space is infinite, is the undeveloped mentality of the modern world, which begins with assumption and reaches conclusions that are premature and indefinite.

Eiffel Tower Visible 110 Miles.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I enclose a clipping from the New York World, and a copy of a letter I am mailing to its editor. I do not know the height of the tower; probably you do. I wish you would publish in THE FLAMING SWORD an elaborate criticism of the World's facts and the Copernican theory, and send the editor a marked copy; he will probably take no notice of my letter.—D. E. S., Santa Ana, Cal.

New York turns on every night about 250,000,000 candle-power of lights. The figures themselves, though dazzling, fail to give any idea of their volume. A light of about 700,000 candle-power which was once displayed on the top of Eiffel tower, was visible for 110 miles. According to these figures, if all the lights of

New York were combined in a single flame it should be visible—but for the curvature of the earth and impurities of the atmosphere—for about 600 miles.—Extract from New York World.

Evidences that the surface on which we live is not convex, come from all parts of the world; the startling fact is apparent that these evidences demonstrate the scientific accuracy of the conclusions of KORESH, that the earth is a concave sphere, and corroborate the numerous experiments of the Koreshan Geodetic Staff and the reports of other observations which we have published in past issues of THE FLAMING SWORD. They are stubborn facts, which the advocates of the Copernican system will never be able to explain away.

The conclusion that the earth is a cell about 8000 miles in diameter, is demonstrated by every fact and phenomenon within the range of human investigation. There are no evidences that we live on the outside of a sphere moving through space at about 65,000 miles an hour. We have defied the so called astronomical authorities; we have challenged the world; and notwithstanding the fact that scores of critics have attacked the Koreshan Cosmogony, not a single one of them has ever offered any proof of the correctness of the premise of the popular system.

In order to understand the force of the fact that the light once displayed on Eiffel tower was visible at a distance of 110 miles, it is necessary to know the ratio of accredited convex curvature, and something of the geography of France. Eiffel tower is 980 feet in height, and its foundation is about 500 feet above sea level. An area of 110 miles radius from Paris embraces no mountain ranges. The nearest range to Paris is the Cote d'Or of the Vosges mountains—at a distance of about 150 miles. The surface of France north and west of these mountains is comparatively level. We quote from Smith's New Geography: "The surface of France is rather flat; soil, fertile; forests, extensive."

In view of these facts, let us see if Eiffel tower could be seen 110 miles from Paris, if the earth were convex. The horizon from an altitude of 980 feet, on the basis of the hypothesis that the earth is convex, would be 38 miles; and as the popular theory holds that the horizon is the simple summit of arc, we take the horizon as the point from which the earth would curve downward from the visual line or rays of light. The light was visible 72 miles beyond the horizon even from the top of Eiffel tower. The curvature for 72 miles would be about 3,500 feet; in other words, an observer would be two thirds of a mile below a ray of light or a line of vision extending from the top of the tower over the horizon arc. The highest mountains of France are about 5,000 feet above sea level, but these mountains are in the southern part, from 200 to 300 miles from Paris. The difficulty in the way of the modern astronomer, is to find a mountain with a summit 3,500 feet above the level at Paris, within the radius of 110 miles from the tower!

But we will give the other side all the advantage possible, and allow that the point at which the light was seen was 1,000 feet above sea level—500 feet higher than the level of Paris. This would place the horizon from point of observation about 27 miles away, leaving 83 miles of convex curvature from the horizon to the tower. The curvature for 83 miles is calculated to be about 4,700 feet, leaving the top of the tower over 3,700 feet below the line of vision. Deduct one seventh for refraction, to be fair, and the light would still be over one half mile out of sight!

Proposes Another Air Line.

A Philadelphian Suggests that the Principles of Koreshan Geodetic Survey are Scientific.

EDITOR Baltimore American:—I have followed with great interest the discussion in your columns regarding the shape of the earth, with allied theories regarding the character and dimensions of the universe. I have no new or startling theories to expound, but I earnestly desire light. The squid when attacked makes judicious use of a murky secretion with which it has been provided by kindly inclined mother Nature, and thus secures life, liberty, and the piscatorial pursuit of happiness, when otherwise it would in clear water succumb to superior force. I have read THE FLAMING SWORD for some weeks past; likewise a small sheet published in Chicago entitled Lucifer, which antagonizes the teachings of KORESH. In addition to the foregoing, I have carefully followed the discussion in your own columns. I do not wish to extend left-handed compliments, but elucidation is sadly lacking. Calling names, badinage, etc., are not conducive to the reasonable consideration of any problem, and positive, definite proof of the shape of the earth is certainly a problem of vast importance, as scientific problems go.

Why should not propositions emanating from the new Western Hub receive the same courtesies which have uniformly been accorded to those receiving their initial impulse in the bean-steeped intellectual atmosphere of Boston? Heretofore we have been guilty of regarding the Queen of the West as simply a pork-packing center. Now we know that there are published at that point at least two of the most unique of journals. DR. CYRUS R. TEED, otherwise styled KORESH, boldly informs his readers that all things seen and unseen are known to himself, and cordially invites acceptance and obedience from intelligent mankind. Possibly the true course for mankind to pursue is somewhat midway between the two positions thus broadly outlined. Coming down to the "milk of the cocoanut," KORESH claims that a perfectly straight line, projected at right angles with or from a plumb-line, will, if continued a sufficient distance, reach the surface of the earth instead of receding from it, as would unquestionably be the case were we living upon the outside of a sphere-shaped earth. Furthermore, he asserts that such line has been surveyed, with results corroborating his present and prior assertions.

If his assertions be founded upon truth, he has established a scientific fact of vast importance. I am not a partisan of KORESH, but I do favor fair play and common sense methods of demonstrating truth; this in any and every domain. Instead of jeering at DR. TEED, why not either admit that his survey proposition is well founded, or prove it worthless? I do not ask that scientific men commit themselves to the views held by KORESH, but I do ask that they give reasons why it is not possible or desirable to project a straight line at right angles from a plumb-line. I favor the experiment, and say let the chips fly where they will, when we see that the line and the surface of the earth either converge or diverge. Scientific experiments we undoubtedly have had, some inaugurated to prove that the earth is a sphere, and that we live upon its external surface. I would, however, ask: Are scientists averse to additional and most direct proof regarding the form of the earth?

I assert that the method outlined by DR. TEED is direct, positive, scientific. I do not indorse his conclusions, but I ask that scientists either admit that the method proposed is well founded, or give their valid reasons for opposing it. I respect scientific observers for their noble search after truth. Surely, they on their part will not be averse to considering new scientific methods. DR. TEED asserts that heretofore scientists have not projected absolutely straight lines of the character necessary to either prove or disprove his revolutionary claims. Bearing upon this point, I have written THE FLAMING SWORD and asked the following questions:

"Have not straight lines been projected by engineers? Is it not a fact, in the construction of long tunnels, that at times the work is carried on from both sides of the mountain, the tunnels meeting midway, the sides approximating with great accuracy? Is not this the driving of a straight line through solid rock as it were? If the tunnels be driven from equal altitudes above the sea level, and meet in the center, would the resulting tunnel under present engineering practice be straight, or would it curve in conformity with the curvature of the earth's surface? If straight, could a person using a powerful telescope at one end, directing its axis parallel with the sides of the tunnel, see through the tunnel?"

I have asked these questions in good faith, and trust that they will be answered in the same spirit. [These questions were answered in THE FLAMING SWORD, March 15, 1901.—EDITOR.] Will send you the answers as soon as they come to hand, and in the meantime would greatly appreciate any light on either these queries or the general scope of this communication. If the scientists of Baltimore will kindly aid me, I, on my part, will endeavor to outline in explicit, common sense detail a scientific experiment, which will bear directly on positive proofs regarding the contour of the earth's surface, and in addition will enable the carrying on of interesting experiments along other important lines of research. Yours truly, EDWARD STERN, Philadelphia, Pa.

Religion and Secular Commerce.

The Divorce of Church and State, and Consequent Prevailing Evils.

Trade is today the decisive factor in the destiny of the world. The great wars of past generations were often the result of personal ambition. The great struggles of the future are to be for the markets of the world. You may ask what this has to do with religion. I will tell you. Under the old system of agriculture a man could at least live from the products of the land. Today great classes of men are trained to do one thing, and one thing alone, not to make a whole shoe or a whole garment, but only a small part. Let the demand for the article he is making cease and he is thrown out of employment altogether, and his means of subsistence is utterly gone. Is it any wonder that there is

Lecture by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanism will deliver a Lecture on Koreshan Universology, Sunday, 3 p. m., March 24, 1901, at Koreshan Hall, 4th floor, 315-19 Englewood ave., Chicago.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in advanced thought.

rivalry for the markets of China? It means bread for great classes of men; it means work for thousands of men and women. If those men and women were forced to cease work, God knows what would happen.

The great questions of trade are religious questions, because they involve the very lives of multitudes of human beings, because they involve the very constitution and permanency of human society. The duty of the church is not only to teach true theology, but it is also to comprehend the suffering of the man who has no work for his hands to do, and whose children are crying for bread. The great tides of human life are surging to and fro upon the earth, and it is the duty of the church so to direct and control them that they will carry out the purposes of God. This is a problem which touches the future welfare of millions of our fellow beings in our own land as well as in others.

What relation exists then between trade and religion? How can the influence of the church be used to govern and control the vast industrial forces of the world? First of all, we must recognize the fundamental fact that trade and religion are not by nature alien and antagonistic. This parable of the talents is the most striking indorsement of the spirit of the Old Testament. The man who trades and who is successful in trade is the man who is blessed and honored. The man who digs in the earth and hides his money is the man who is unsparingly condemned.

If trade and commerce and manufacture are sanctioned by divine favor, if they are or may be holy occupations, how then has the idea ever come that there is anything discreditable about them? Why this fear of impending disaster to the world, because of the clashing interests of trade. Why do poverty and suffering so often grow out of trade? Simply and solely because trade and religion are divorced, religion and the religious idea left out of business on the false and dangerous theory that the two are alien and cannot go hand in hand. Leave religion out of trade and it becomes the most heartless, the most cruel, the most demoralizing thing which the world knows. War itself is not more heartless.

It is the feeling that men as a whole are seeking their own interests at the expense of all other individuals; it is the feeling that the manufacturer considers his men only as so much machinery; it is the feeling in the world at large that each nation is trying to crush all its rivals at no matter what cost of blood and tears; the feeling, in short, that the great world is governed wholly by selfishness and greed, that constitutes the dangerous element in the business world today.

In view of these facts what is the church to do? Of one thing we may be sure, the spirit of commercialism which sways the destinies of the world today will continue to be dominant. The church must begin, and it cannot begin too soon, to make its conquest of trade. Religion must in some way conquer secular tendencies or they will conquer us.—REV. N. M. HALL.

Greatness of the Messiah.

The Birth of Jesus Marked a New Epoch in History; His Religious System and Its Influence.

Viewed by the results that have followed it, the accomplishment in the stable at Bethlehem 1900 years ago was the most important event in all the world's history, transcending in importance any occurrence that had before or has since taken place. Here amid the humblest and meanest surroundings, within a simple manger where cattle fed at his cradle, was born one whose life and teachings have had larger influence in shaping the lives, destinies and conditions of mankind than all the kings and sovereigns, sages and seers, savants and philosophers who ever lived upon the earth. This was the humble advent of Jesus Christ, whose natal anniversary is now being celebrated throughout the world. What a marvelous transformation is this from a child, whose layette was the straw strewn litter of a cow shed, to the leader and teacher and guiding spirit of more than 500,000,000 people, representing the highest civilization, and living under the best conditions that have ever prevailed upon the earth!

Looked upon from a purely worldly point of view as a terrestrial phenomenon, it is marvelous beyond finite conception that one thus lowly born, who lived upon the earth but a brief span of 33 years, who taught a new and strange theory of life, who was condemned to death upon perjured testimony and before a prejudiced tribunal, and who was sentenced to the most humiliating and ignoble punishment, that of being pinioned to a cross between two convicts, should have become the greatest force in all the world. Brief as was His sojourn on earth, humble as was his life, ignominious as was his death, the time and circumstances sufficed for the planting of the seed of a new system of religion, of philosophy, or of ethics—call it what you will—which taught the hitherto unheard of principle of loving one's fellow as oneself, of repaying evil with good, of forgiving one's enemies, of regarding all mankind as one's brothers. Despite the innate selfishness and savagery of humankind the seed took root and, like the grain of mustard seed which waxed into a great tree, the high lessons he taught are being diffused throughout the world. They have purified art, ennobled literature, uplifted science, exalted industry, and made all mankind better and happier.—Selected.

Accepts Koreshan Science.

A Youth of Fifteen Years Able to Grasp the Fundamentals of Koreshanity.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I have just finished a month's study of your CELLULAR COSMOGONY, and, rack my brains as I may, I cannot find a single question worth consideration, that is not answered. Universology indeed! Never before have I picked up a "scientific" work but what I have had some fault to find with it—some question that the author did not and could not explain. The Koreshan premises and propositions are simply unanswerable.

I have now a complete library of Koreshan literature and am going to read the different treatises and pamphlets and try to digest their contents. I am a subscriber to THE FLAMING SWORD, and like it very much. One article is about as good as another, as a rule, and the standard of thought and language is the highest.

I have attended two of Rev. Castle's lectures, and in a short time hope to be a member and a student of the Koreshan University.

You say one person's opinion is as good as another's. The preceding is the opinion of a youth of fifteen years and eight months. Sincerely Yours,—H. CARLETON CASE, Springfield, Mass.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY

Founded by Koresh (Dr. Cyrus R. Teed),
A. D. 1870.

THE EARTH is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Sun, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantie Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth constituting the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we INhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, and the pattern of the new order of Human Society.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress; the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univocal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSEIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Fallacious Foundation of Modern Science.

Hypothesis is Admittedly the Basis of Prevailing Conclusions; the Scientific Methods of the Koreshan Universologist; a Practical Lesson on Perspective Foreshortening.

SAYS DARWIN, in "Animals and Plants," Vol. I, page 9: "In scientific investigations it is permitted to invent any hypothesis, and if it explains various large and independent classes of facts it rises to the rank of a well-grounded theory." It is to this absurd proposition that the most of our "scientific" theories, if not all of them, owe their existence. He further says, that "the undulations of ether and even its existence are hypothetical, yet every one now admits the undulatory theory of light." We agree with Darwin, that the undulatory theory of light is a mere hypothesis; that is, a mere guess, but we deny his statement that "every one now admits the undulatory theory of light." "The principle of natural selection," he says, "may be looked at as a mere hypothesis, but rendered in some degree probable by what we positively know of the variability of organic beings in a state of nature,—by what we positively know of the struggle for existence, and the consequent almost inevitable preservation of favorable variations,—and from the analogical formation of domestic races."

Darwinism, as Darwin himself affirms, is predicated entirely upon "scientific" guesses; and these, he declares, constitute the basis of all scientific claims. Speaking of natural selection, he says: "Now, this hypothesis may be tested—and this seems to me to be the only fair and legitimate manner of considering the whole question—by trying whether it explains several large and independent classes of facts; such as the geological succession of organic beings, their distribution in past and present times, and their mutual affinities and homologies. If the principle of natural selection does explain these and other large bodies of facts, it ought to be received."

"Please accept my theories," says the eminent

"scientist," "because I can explain many things upon my hypothesis." The Koreshan Scientist might beg the question and say, please accept our theory of Universology, because there is not one thing that we cannot explain scientifically upon our premise. But we ask no man to accept anything on the basis of a mere hypothesis. A knowledge of the construction of the universe and its functions, with the laws and principles of life depending upon such knowledge, is too important a matter to be left to mere conjecture—mere hypothesis. No conclusion is certain which is not founded upon and grounded in a positively demonstrated premise. It is for this reason that the Koreshan System stands out distinct and unique. It predicates nothing upon guesswork; its first step in the discussion of any proposition, is the correct establishment and proof of its premise. Darwinism is a fair sample of the processes by which modern scientific conclusions are invariably reached. When in conversation with Professor Harkness, of the United States Naval Observatory, we asked him if the Copernican system was not predicated upon assumption, he replied: "We have to assume something." We maintain that if a premise be assumed, then the conclusion is equally an assumption.

Fact and Phenomenon Differentiated.

Let us take the principle of optics in its application to the definition of the phenomenon of the rotundity of the earth, as an illustration of correct reasoning from an established premise, as followed by the logician of the Koreshan School of Science. We herewith accompany our argument with diagrammatic illustrations of the principles involved in the argument. Two lines may be extended parallel with each other, as in the case of the two rails of a railroad track. The diagrams represent certain known facts in optics, which we declare shall not be overruled, set aside, nor ignored for the purpose of sustaining an unwarrantable "scientific" theory. If any man is too lazy to reason, or too mean to investigate another's reasoning, we do not expect to make any impression; or if he is so wedded to a theory because his grandfather believed in it, that he will not change his opinion for the truth's sake, he will naturally pass this argument by; but for the honest man there is only one alternative.

The two lines, a f, extending the length of diagram 1, may be taken to represent the tracks of a railroad, five feet apart. In the major premise of this proposition are involved the facts as they are, not as they appear. The measurement of the space at both ends of the track shows that the rails at each end are just five feet apart. There is no element of assumption in this part of the premise. We wish to thoroughly impress upon the student the fact, that so far we have not had to "assume something." The rails are straight and parallel, and five feet apart. These are facts of practical and certain measurement. From B to c in either direction the track indicates one mile (the entire length of the diagram representing two miles); in observing the distance from B to c, either way, the track appears to narrow down to a vanishing point at c. This they appear to be at c. We are to distinguish the facts of reality from the facts of appearance, and show the character of the appearances, and how these appearances have led the short-sighted "scientists" into their aggregate of errors, which they delight to call by the title of science. Thus far there is no element of assumption; we assume nothing. We have shown that space is annihilated in appearance, by the law of distal perspective; that foreshortening is an inevitable law of optics, and we hold that these laws are totally ignored by every so called scientific astronomer. The pseudo scientists shall not continue to foist their fallacious systems of astronomy upon a deluded public, without a perpetual protest.

It will be remembered that diagram 1 represents the point of observation at B, from which the objective point is seen as at c, but which in reality is at F F. The line D D D, extending to c, is not what it appears to be from the outlook or visual point at B. The apparent line at c, which appears to be only a line, is the entire breadth of five feet—the distance across the track at F F. If a middle rail extend midway between the two rails of the track, it will be seen the entire length of the line, or nearly so, and seem to blend with the two other rails at c; the five feet have vanished to a mere appearance is the minor premise. Let it be remembered that the minor premise involves a fact, but that fact is an appearance involved in which are certain optical laws which we will apply logically in another part of this argument. Do not forget the fact that we are arguing from premises that are proven to be true, and that we differ from the ordinary "scientific" logician, in that we work from a demonstrated premise—not from an assumption.

Principles of Perspective and the Vanishing Point.

The purpose of this part of the argument is to show the reason for an appearance, which is in direct opposition to the fact. Why does the space five feet wide at F F, appear as a point at c? Note the dotted lines beginning at S S, and extending to the arrow; they make a comparatively long picture upon the surface indicated by the arrow. Now, note the dotted lines beginning at F F, and extending to the surface marked retina. These lines vanish at the point upon the surface thus marked; for this reason they appear to come to a point at c. If we take this appearance as a fact, we are led into an interminable labyrinth of difficulties. The "scientist" establishes his assumptions upon these appearances, ignoring the facts and laws of optics. The objects e d are in fact at e d, as represented in diagram 1, but point, at c, therefore a space five feet wide appears like a mere line. The broader the space in perspective, the more rapidly it vanishes by distal extense, as shown in comparison with the middle rail; and the narrower the space, the less rapidly it vanishes by distal extense. This principle belongs more exclusively to the effect on the retina itself. A balloon in passing out of visual range, appears to diminish rapidly for the first few miles, after which it remains in view for a long time as a mere speck. These facts will have their application during the course of this argument.

Perspective and Geodetic Observations.

We subjoin a second diagram. Here we have two lines as in diagram 1, but we will employ them to represent parallel lines, one above the other instead of side by side, as in the first instance. The line A A appears to rise to B B, and the line C C appears to drop to B B, if viewed from the point D. The points A A and C C are visible, but they are seen as if at B B. Now, is there any man capable of thinking, who will be such an obstinate ass as to take this appearance as the fact, after the phenomenon has been pointed out to him? We have studied the phenomena of appearance in these principles of optics, and will now proceed to make an application of them to geodetic observation, keeping logically to the premise, never swerving from the established law of Koreshanity; namely, that assumption is no basis for the establishment of truth.

We subjoin the third diagram. In this we take the lower line of the second diagram, A A; we observe the points A A from the point D, but the principle of perspective or distal foreshortening causes the objects to appear at the points B B. This is not due to refraction, but it is due to distal foreshortening; the space from A to K has contracted and foreshortened to the point B. This law is operative, and applies to all space whether in the atmosphere, ethereal, or on the surface of the earth, terrestrial. If the line A A in diagram 3 represented a flat surface, a convex surface, or a concave surface, the phenomenon would be practically the same; a convexity or concavity of only eight inches to the mile would not appreciably affect the optical illusion. If the so called scientist is asked the question, Why does the earth viewed from a balloon look like a bowl? he will tell you it is because of atmospheric refraction.

Diagram 2.—Showing Same Perspective Effect with One Rail Above the Other.

If the laws of refraction will operate in an atmosphere of a uniform density, to distort the vision, what may we not expect regarding phenomena related to objects claimed to be outside our atmosphere? If the point D, in diagram 3, is two feet above the line A A, at the distance of less than a mile the object at A on the lower line will be seen at B, in either direction. The law is the same whether the altitude be two feet and a half, five hundred feet, three miles, or any distance. A less or greater altitude could not change the principle nor alter the character of the phenomenon. The cross-piece at P is seen at A, but appears to be at B, because the standard, A P, is foreshortened down the two feet and a half. We have thus far shown certain facts, and optical phenomena connected with these facts. We have assumed nothing regarding the facts or the phenomena. We have interpreted the phenomena by defining the laws upon which they depend, and we challenge all the scientific men in the world to point out one inaccuracy either in the facts as presented and pertaining to the reality of the relation of the lines, or the facts of the optical phenomena.

Specific Statement of Minor Proposition.

We are now prepared to state a minor proposition. Lines or surfaces separated by narrow or broad spaces, —extended parallel with each other and viewed in perspective,—will appear to approach each other proportionate to their distance from each other and length of perspective. Let the surface of the earth be taken as one of these surfaces, and extend a line over this surface, that is, a visual or optical line. If we stand twenty feet above the surface of the earth and look toward the horizon, the horizon is seen on a level with the eye. If a roof could be extended parallel to the surface of the earth twenty feet above our lookout (forty feet above the earth), the two surfaces would appear to approach each other; the lower surface would seem to rise to a level with the eye, and the upper surface would appear to drop to a level with the eye,—that is, providing the two planes are extended the necessary distance. Now, if we remove the upper surface or plane, the lower plane will appear to rise to a level with the eye, just the same as when the upper plane occupied its position. It would not be occasioned either by refraction or convexity, but would be due to the operation of the principle of foreshortening. How a man can observe this phenomenon and attribute it to anything but its true cause, and call himself scientific, is one of the enigmas of this so called enlightened age.

We have practically shown that the apparent roundity or convexity of the earth is due to the optical illusion created by foreshortening. When it is assumed that the earth is convex, and in this assumption the simplest laws of optics are set aside and ignored, shall we quietly submit to the imposition and allow the world to continue in ignorance of the laws of cosmogonic form, or shall we place the facts in opposition to the assumptions as they obtain and are made to constitute the basis of scientific conclusions?

If a man stands by the side of one of the rails of a railroad track, say two feet from the rail, his line of vision will meet the rail at a point determined by the distance in perspective. This we need only state, for it is a well-known fact. No man will pretend to deny this, unless he be an absolute ignoramus. Then why should anyone deny the phenomenon as applied to the extense of any other line or plane? If the earth were concave, eight inches to the mile, which would be a practical level and an apparent straight plane, and we should apply the law of optics as described, in looking along a geolinear surface the earth would appear to rise in perspective much more rapidly than the eight inches to the mile would indicate. If we were twenty feet above the surface of the earth, the earth would rise to meet the line of vision and would appear to be convex. The scientific and honest man, before he projects a theory on the basis of appearance, would submit the appearance to a rigid analysis; he would prove his premise by the facts, and not ignore the most common principles and laws of optics as applied to geodesy. Let us demonstrate our premise, then reason logically, and we are certain of the truth. Let us assume our premise from mere appearance and then make our theory fit the premise, and we have just what the scientific world is attempting to cram down the throats of the credulous and unthinking public.

Geolinear Foreshortening and Mathematical Application.

Our sub-major proposition is, that a rigid mathematical calculation, founded upon the mathematical determination of the amount of foreshortening of the space between any two given parallel lines or planes in perspective, when applied to the surface of the earth, will determine the amount and direction of deviation which the surface of the earth describes, from a line extended from the point of observation to the vanishing point. Let two lines be separated by a definite space, and extended parallel to a distance sufficient to obliterate the space by distal foreshortening. Extend these lines one mile parallel, a definite space intervening, then apply the same distance in length with the same space to any other two lines, and the same results would obtain. The truth of this statement is obvious to any candid person. If we make an observation along the side of a line which we suppose to deviate a few inches one way or the other, from a rectiline, and calculate the difference between the definite foreshortening of the known lines and space, and the space of the indefinite line, the difference is the amount of the deviation of the unknown line. This will also determine its direction. Let this principle be applied to the surface of the earth, and the demonstration will determine whether the earth is flat, convex, or concave; also the amount of deviation, if any, from a plane. The claim that the earth is convex, is made upon the mere appearance from optical effects, without any consideration of the laws of foreshortening, and the whole system of cosmogony is made to fit this absurdity.

Optics Wholly Ignored by the Astronomer.

We have pursued this argument from a known fact, and have applied a knowledge of the laws of optics as related to these facts, to the appearance of the surface of the earth as under the operation of these laws. We have shown that the laws of optics prevail and operate in the one case as in the other. We have shown that the laws of optics are totally ignored by the "scientist" in his consideration, and that he attributes an appearance to the application of an imaginary and impossible operation. It is also demonstrated in this discussion, that the principle of refraction is used as an argument by the so called scientist, where the principle of refraction does not enter into the proposition. We have accounted for the appearance of rotundity on the basis of the known principles of foreshortening in perspective, which every sensible and conscientious man will admit to be obviously true. We have shown, then, that if the earth were an extended plane for ten thousand miles, a view from any altitude would give the earth the appearance of a rotund form, in dimension proportionate to the altitude; the greater the altitude, the larger the appearance. We have shown what every honest "scientist" admits; namely, that the whole system of the Copernican astronomy is predicated upon an assumption which has no tenable foundation; therefore we are justified in our challenge of the accuracy of the system of astronomy which now flourishes under the title of "science." We also assure our readers that the time has come which the eminent astronomer, Professor Woodhouse, of Cambridge, England, feared would meet the so called astronomical profession. He said: "However perfect our theory may appear, in our estimation, and however satisfactorily the Newtonian hypothesis may seem to account for all celestial phenomena, yet we are compelled to admit the astounding truth, that if our premise be disputed and our facts challenged, the whole range of astronomy does not contain the proofs of its own accuracy. Startling as this announcement may appear, it is nevertheless true; and astronomy would indeed be helpless, were it not for the implied approval of those whose authority is considered a guarantee of its truth. Should this sole refuge fail us, all our arguments, all our observations, all our boasted accuracy would be useless, and the whole science of modern astronomy must fall to the ground." We have shown that the principles of optics have been left entirely out of consideration in the establishment of the Copernican hypothesis, and that therefore it is not worth one thought as constituting a basis for cosmogonic conviction.

We now state our general proposition: The astronomers of note admit that the whole fabric of hypothesis called astronomy, is built upon an assumed premise of appearance. When a premise is assumed, the conclusion is necessarily an assumption. It is easy to fit a large aggregation of facts to any hypothesis; but this does not prove any proposition. An "hypothesis does not rise to the rank of a well-grounded theory," and never can so long as that hypothesis is predicated upon a premise that is itself not proven. The earth is of some definite form; this form is absolute, but it has never been fixed in the mind of the thinker, for the reason that, up to the present time, the "scientific" world is looking for some positive proof of the earth's rotundity, its revolution on its axis, and its orbital motion. These have never, so far, been regarded as settled facts. Because of this uncertainty we claim the right to demand some better reasons than have ever been adduced, for the acceptance of the Copernican system of astronomy, and an examination into the reasons we have promulgated for a disavowal of present "scientific" claims.

Religion Expressed in Art and Nature.

The Persistent Factor of Dispensational Progress and Universal Perpetuity; the Spirit of Art and its Language; Religion Inherent in the Nature of Man.

PROF. U. G. MORROW.

RELIGION is the most persistent and potent factor of dispensational progress and universal perpetuity. Its principles inhere in Being itself, and its laws are as eternal as the universe. It is the strongest tie in the sphere of human relations; it expresses the warmest, the purest, and the highest love; and it inspires man to reach the highest altitudes in the scale of existence. Religion is universal; it is the essential bond of unity, because it is the most central love. This is true, no matter whether a religion be true or false. The true religion ties man back to Deity; a false religion ties man by nature to the kingdom of hades.

There are minds which would exclude religion from the world. Such an attitude toward religion as a principle, manifests the most astounding ignorance of the principles and laws, not only of dispensational progress and of ethnology, but also of the simplest processes of propagation of life. It would be as consistent to talk of abolishing the human race itself, as to undertake to remove from man the most central principles of his being—principles which have obtained in the successive generations, dispensations, and ages of humanity for billions of cycles of the great and immeasurable past!

It is not enough to say that there are false religions. Counterfeits demonstrate the existence of the genuine; imitations prove the real, and perversions are palpable evidences of the fact that there must be a true religion. This conclusion is absolutely scientific, because, in accordance with the great law of antithesis, there can be no thought, no form, no function, no condition or state, that has not its opposite.

We note the general trend of events of history; generations succeed each other through the laws of propagation of life and thought; nations rise and fall; forms of government come and go; conceptions change, and peoples manifest specific characteristics as a result of relations and associations, common ambitions and desires. These successive changes cannot be accounted for on the basis of mere drift of mind. There is something that impels the thought and desire of races in given directions—something that produces effects which extend through the centuries. What gives specific character to the people of an age? Whence come the impulses which cause civilization to move along given zones in the great cell of existence? What is the strongest tie which makes the people of a nation akin—if it be not religion?

Something operates in the interior life and mind of man—something guards and guides central lines of progress, on exactly the same principles and in accordance with the same laws that the central line of persistence in a plant leads thousands of corpuscles beyond the narrow limits of the experience of individual cells to final unity in the seed. Whatever that is which gives direction to human momentum and makes history and destiny, it expresses itself in the spheres of religious thought, desires, and aspirations. There is such a thing as dispensational propagation—propagation of life and mentality on a higher and more interior plane than that which creates life in mortal embodiments. It extends not simply from generation to generation, but from dispensation to dispensation, through a stupendous impulse from the involved product of humanity—the Seed-man, the foundation of dispensational order, the root of dispensational progress.

Koreshanity maintains that whatever is expressed in the world of existence comes in accordance with immutable law. The most conservative agnostic must admit that whatever we observe in the three kingdoms beneath man is natural, and belongs to the sphere of universal economy. The existence of a thing makes it a veritable fact, whether one likes it or not; that which operates in Nature does not consult human caprice and ignorance concerning what it shall produce in the various natural kingdoms. We cannot say there is anything in these kingdoms that is absolutely useless; things are here, puzzling as they are to the scientific world, and their existence cannot be denied; neither can the fact that they, as effects, are the result of cause which operates according to immutable and eternal law.

Who would think of endeavoring to abolish physical forces and elements, whether destructive or not? Someone might feel prejudiced against fire, because it burned a child; or against the sea, because it swallows up helpless lives; or someone feel prejudiced against religion, because modern sects are productive of evil. It is a wise economy that makes deterioration, vitiation, and fermentation possible; and it is a wise economy that admits of the apostasy of religion; it is as essential as the workings of the elements of progress. Retrogression is the eternal coördinate of progression. Storms and tidal waves are as natural as the calm; winter is as essential as the freshness of spring; and death itself is as necessary in the economy of existence as life. If all these things occur in Nature in accordance with law, it is neither reasonable nor rational to conclude that that which is the product of mental activity, and which involves the potent factors of life itself, may be set aside because certain minds have become disgusted with the teachings of an apostate church, and have not mental capacity to read the symbols of art, Nature, and the Bible!

The arts have not come by chance. All true art is full of soul and spirit; that is not art which does not express great principles of life; without these, no matter what be the combination of colors or of forms, there is no art. The very highest and most central thought of art of all ages is religion. The sculptor embodies religious principles in clay and marble; great religious conceptions are spread on the canvas; all true music vibrates in the interior, religious soul of man; and the architecture expresses national and racial religious character. The highest and most central principle expressed in all these arts is religion.

Do the arts count for naught in their testimony concerning the greatness of true religious conceptions? Is art so false to humanity as to choose only a transient and false thing as its very soul and spirit? Is that which moves men, which rolls the centuries, which opens and closes dispensations with unvarying regularity, so untrue to Nature; is that which guards and guides the central lines of progress, so ignorant of the purpose of existence as to make a stupendous mistake concerning religion, and to finally invite, by force of necessity, the advice of agnostics concerning what should and what should not be eliminated from the economy of the universe? Let the modern mind be consistent, even if mistaken; then let it accept as a great fact, that because of its eternal persistence, religion is absolutely essential to the well-being, happiness, and perpetuity of humanity and of the universe!

The Tendency of Governments to Despotism.

Causes and Consequences of the French Revolution; Results of America's Adoption of England's Financial System; the Enthronement of the Money Power.

PROF. O. F. L'AMOREAUX, A. M., PH. D.

The freest government, if it could exist, would not be long acceptable if the tendency of the laws were to create a rapid accumulation of property in few hands, and to render the great mass of the population dependent and penniless.—DANIEL WEBSTER.

THE REPUBLIC OF FRANCE seems to furnish a striking example of the soundness of the above principle. At the close of the Revolution of 1793, that great upheaval of the oppressed masses against the soulless greed of priest, noble, and king, large numbers of the great landed estates were divided into small holdings and sold to what had been the disinherited poor. These soon formed a large class of independent farmers who now, despite the constant plottings of monarchists, aristocrats, and priests, make free government possible. French law, that forces the nearly equal division of estates among legal heirs, serves greatly to preserve something like equality among citizens; still further to prevent the greed of usurers from absorbing the lands into few hands by means of their cutthroat mortgages, the government provides special facilities for farmers to get money, which they must sometimes have to make their farms remunerative.

This is something like an enlightened endeavor, so far as it goes, to maintain free institutions, and is in striking contrast with the reckless policy of other countries, that even boast of their freedom, and yet put no curb upon the greed and cunning that in numberless ways are grasping every foot of earth, and every bounty of Nature and work of man, and monopolizing them for the benefit of the few at the expense of the many. When this short-sighted policy has brought forth its legitimate fruits,—the few wallowing in boundless wealth and the vices which it breeds, and the great masses struggling in hopeless poverty and the vices, ignorance, and crimes which are its invariable attendants,—then the favored rich, fearing for the permanency of the tenure by which they hold their ill gotten gains, begin to clamor for a strong government—as they vainly fancy that of monarchy to be.

Adopting England's pernicious financial policy, our country has made more rapid strides toward the conditions that ultimately result in despotic government than the world has ever seen. If present tendencies are suffered to bring their legitimate fruit,—which providentially for us they will not be,—nothing can save this country from ultimating in a despotism worse than that which in the end destroyed free Rome. The destructive power of usury has nowhere been so unrestrained as here, and its deadly work was never more certain than at the present time.

The money-changer now sits enthroned, and all governments and the great masses of men are his willing or unwilling slaves, having neither the intelligence nor will to break their fetters; yet those fetters will be broken, and the oppressed will go free. This beneficent change will not come through any church or political party of the present. All alike are subjects of, and partakers with the money-changer. So great is the corrupting power of gold at present, that no party nor combination of men is proof against it; and yet it will be destroyed—and that in the not distant future.

As an object lesson, showing what He would accomplish when he came again according to his promise, Jesus cast out the money-changers from God's typical temple, and poured their money into the street, stigmatizing their calling as robbery,—which every intelligent man knows to be true. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." This is the time which the prophet Isaiah referred to when he said: "And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey; and the Lord saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment."

As a result of His observation, seeing no arm to deliver, God himself resolved to restore justice and bring salvation to lost and ruined men, not spirits, which he will soon accomplish in a perfectly natural way, yet unknown to the reputed wise men of the world. When the human battery which he is now forming is perfected, and its power is manifest, it will then appear that "the kingdoms of this world [age] are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever," Greek, for an age of ages.

In the new kingdom to be set up here in earth, there will be no injustice, no monopoly, no despotic, absolute rule of men. It will then appear that God has vindicated his righteous law, which declares that "the land shall not be sold forever; for the land is mine," and provides that every man born into the world shall have a portion of it, of which no usurer nor tax-gatherer can deprive him; and which he himself cannot alienate so that it will not come back to him in the jubilee. Under this law, the accumulation of all property in few hands, with its consequent despotism, will be impossible.

"MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN makes countless thousands mourn." The manifest perversion of human loves is apparent throughout the wide world; and the facts of the universally prevailing conditions of society and government disprove the popular idea of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. Man as he exists today, is not the offspring of Deity—men are not now Sons of God; if they were, they would manifest that supreme love, interest, regard, and concern for the welfare of their kind, which characterize Deity. The prevailing conception in this age of the world is on a par with the idea which prevailed among the Jews nineteen hundred years ago; while each full-blooded Jew could trace his lineage directly to Abraham, Jesus denied that the people of his time were the true children of the great ethnological head of Judaism, and reminded them of the fact that if they were the children of Abraham they would perform his works, and would not ask to be made free. Their condition of bondage disproved their claim; likewise today, the fact that men are under the curse of death, with all its concomitant states, evinces the startling truth that men are not brothers nor sons of the Eternal. If there were such a thing as a righteous brotherhood of man today, there would be no selfishness nor sorrow; no inhumanity nor inharmony; no usurpation nor oppression; no wars nor woes. We see the utter disregard of the modern man for his fellows. A low estimate is placed upon human life; the interests of the coming generation are not considered. Offspring are begotten in lust, and come into existence almost by chance, under the most corrupt conditions of mind and body. The perverted love of money in the three great domains of commerce, the passions of man, the sensuality of the world, make no provision for the happiness of the millions of the future; men eat and drink, and are made merry only in indulgence and gratification of their appetites. There is no superficial reform that can ever reach the roots of evil; and until the roots of evil are reached, the roots of life itself are a mystery. There is no true reform in legislation; no change of environment will purify the heart of man. Reform must begin where the evil originates; there is no other way, and the sooner modern reformers learn this great lesson, the sooner they will be able to perceive the truth of the great system of world-renovation and world-reformation which is promulgated through the literature of Koreshanity. It removes false conceptions of life from the mind; and through the power of intellectual comprehension of scientific law, it will remove evil from the human heart. Let the mind reach the conception that the present generation goes into the coming one, and that when man makes provision for the welfare of the coming generation, he is but making desirable future environments for himself and contributing to the forces of world-progress. The making of all things new involves the recreation and reconstruction, not only of the forms of society and government, but of man. A humane race must appear, to abolish inhumanity and inharmony—a race that shall constitute the true brotherhood, whose Father is Deity. The coming of this new genus is the coming of the new Kingdom, the introduction of a new era of human relations; and then, man's humanity to man will make countless thousands rejoice in the life, light, and love of the Golden Age!

President Hadley, of Yale college, in his recent speech at San Francisco, dealt with the problem of the trusts, and with the questions of democratic government. The remedy he offers for the trust evil is the arousing of public sentiment through education of the masses—a remedy which is as impotent as the abolition of the liquor traffic through moral persuasion—or, for that matter, through such legislation as has been directed against the manufacture and sale of intoxicants in a number of states. Powers that rise above and control legislation are not to be prohibited by any ordinary legal or educational processes. The education of the masses along the line of the trusts and other evils of the cursed competitive system, must be in the school of adverse experience, where tuition is paid in terms of value of the vast amount of wealth which the people produce but never enjoy. Prof. Hadley observes that "There are two theories of democratic government: The individualistic, which relies on the self-interest of the various citizens acting independently; and the socialistic, which relies mainly on the votes of thousands of citizens acting in a body. Neither has proved entirely satisfactory. * * A democratic government is subject to special difficulties in exercising its power. It lacks the compelling force behind it which is felt in a monarchy or aristocracy—for what is everybody's business is nobody's business; and laws which were passed with enthusiasm often go unenforced." This must be because there is something wrong with the fundamentals of democracy. We observe that there is little difficulty standing in the way of the present commercial and industrial imperialism exercising its power; it is thoroughly organized; it has the compelling force, before which democracy in its weakness has yielded. The American nation is not governed by the people, for the reason that they are incapable of governing themselves. The competitive system is producing its ultimate fruit; the imperialism of the trusts is here—and revolution is at hand! The reign of righteousness must supplant the rule of the money gods!

Astronomer Holden writes on the subject of "What We Know About Mars," in March McClures; but our conclusion is, that what the astronomer does not know about Mars is vastly more important than that which he assumes to know; in other words, truth is greater than opinion. It was assumed years ago that Mars was inhabited; that the people were engaged in agricultural pursuits, while the capitalists were engaged in an extensive and unparalleled canal business for irrigation and navigation; that the reddish portions of the Martian surface were land, while the bluish or greenish in color were thought to be water—oceans and seas. But later investigations indicate to equally fanciful minds, that the reverse is true. This conclusion is reached by Prof. Barnard and his associates. Such a conclusion places the Martian canals—at first instituted in hypothesis for irrigation and navigation—away out in the oceans and seas on the planet! Indicative of the kind of science which today fills the world, Prof. Holden refers to the scientific methods of Roentgen: "When Prof. Roentgen discovered the action of his wonderful 'rays,' he was in doubt about their nature. In a truly scientific fashion, he named them 'X rays,' that is to say, rays whose nature we do not yet comprehend!" Speculations about things which the modern mind does not comprehend, make up the changing fashions, fallacies, and fads of the opening century!

A feeling of insecurity pervades the most powerful nations of the world; and the great Russian dynasty is not exempt from disturbing influences, and even danger. In every great nation there are subtle forces at work, threatening to undermine government; they are forces and elements of disintegration. Thrones of modern empires have no firm foundation. Russia is honeycombed with Nihilism; the spirit of anarchy has not been suppressed by the extreme vigilance of the Russian secret service. Alarming reports come from St. Petersburg, that Russia is on the verge of revolution. But revolutionists will find the power of Russia a vigorous and formidable one to attack; an empire which embraces one seventh of the habitable world, filled with the spirit of expansion, will not pass away in a day; but successive convulsions are significant. The cry of peace fulfils prophecy. There will be no permanent peace on the basis of the world's present relations; the interests of the powers conflict; war is imminent, and the final crash is inevitable.

There is considerable discussion in astronomical circles regarding the planet Mars, the question of its habitability, and the possibility of intercommunication of the people of the earth and the Martians. Koreshans would have no interest in this discussion, but for the fact that it manifests the most consummate ignorance of the astronomers concerning the form and character of the universe. Scientists of the Martian school advocate the possibility of signaling to inhabitants of the sky; this school includes such men as Flammarion, Lowell, Tesla, and others; while another class includes astronomers of high standing and rank in the scientific world, who assert that it is impossible to communicate with distant planets. Upon this question, as well as upon all other problems suggested to the modern mind, the scientists are divided; and it is as true today as when Airy flourished, that "the whole thing [modern astronomy] is left in a most delightful state of uncertainty, and we should be glad if some one can be found to help us out of it"!

The Coast Seamen's Journal says: "Trade unionism in any locality will never amount to much more than a potentiality until every organization is affiliated in the local chartered central body. Organizations that remain outside of the central bodies are a weakness in themselves and a menace to others;" while the Advance asserts that "To dethrone them [the capitalists] we will need the strongest organization, the ablest direction, and the widest propaganda." Democratic reformers have discovered the fact that leadership and organization are absolutely essential to success; and they must ultimately discover, by force of circumstances, that the needed "ablest direction" must come from the absolutely true science of world-reformation. This is what Koreshanity has advocated for thirty years—a universal reform trust, with a central power of organization and concentration of forces under the leadership of some supreme genius, a social architect who comprehends the principles and laws of universal construction.

A correspondent in the Baltimore World quotes our editorial concerning the Chicago bureau of charities, in issue of THE FLAMING SWORD of March 15; and remarks: "THE FLAMING SWORD seeks the utter abolition of every existing church, and the sequestration of every priest and minister. Give us one paper like it in every city of the country, and the churches will either go, or the editors will be hung by the clergy." In other words, when a man reaches a truly safe position on subjects of greatest human interest and welfare, he is in danger of martyrdom at the hands of the leaders of the old order; thus it is sometimes dangerous to be safe! The leaders of the old church had to do with the crucifixion of Jesus the Messiah, who dared to tell the truth about the social, moral, and religious conditions of the people nineteen hundred years ago. The people have not materially changed in their nature; and truth today is no less severe and exacting than it was when Jesus aroused the hatred of the priesthood.

The superintendent of Chicago public schools has concluded that it is desirable to introduce a scheme of practical education, and advocates a plan of teaching business, of establishing a commercial high school. It is desired that the children learn the tricks of trade, that they may grow up in familiarity with the principles of money-making, fully armed with all the competitive weapons of offense against the neighbor. This is in keeping with the order of things. There are schools where men learn the principles of warfare; where men learn how to act in the pulpit, and where men are taught how to administer poison to the people who are sick. Let the rising generation be trained in the arts of robbery; keep the people in ignorance of the principles of righteousness, that the world may not progress beyond the conceptions and the customs of the past century; but for our part, we advocate a radical change in both motives and methods.

The fact that there are but 7 planets is indicated by the number of letters in the word planets—just 7. Take the planets in their order—Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune—and note that the names of the first, middle, and last planet have each 7 letters. The number of letters in the 7 names is 42, corresponding to the 42 generations in a dispensation; the 42 mental faculties; and the 42 original constellations in the physical heavens. The number of letters in the two major planets—Venus and Jupiter—is 12, corresponding to the 12 constellations of the Zodiac; while the numerical value of the names of the 7 planets, reduced to the lowest terms by successive additions and sums of the figures employed, is 7; and the letters in the names of the 7 Messiahs, and also in the names of the 12 constellations of the Zodiac, are correspondingly reduced to the final 7.

The question, "Will the Trust Prevent Panics?" is being widely discussed. Without a doubt, thorough organization will secure immunity against flurries in the money market. Commercial power is centralizing for the purpose of preventing disaster to its concerns, and it may succeed for a time in averting panics, because it has control of the factors which produce them; but the forces which are thus kept in check must ultimately break out and produce an appalling catastrophe in the modern world. Revolution is inevitable; and the longer the energies are pent up, the greater will be the force of the final outbreak, and the more terrible the work of destruction of modern institutions. These forces are in the people; and who can check the power of an enraged public when it determines to rebel against the existing tyrannical money power?

It is announced that Carnegie purposes giving $5,000,000 to his old employees; and for this he is applauded as a philanthropist. He has simply concluded that for every $30 that labor has given him, he will give back the sum of $1. Suppose that 20,000 people have, through years of labor, contributed to Carnegie's wealth. If he should distribute $5,000,000 among this number, each one would receive only $250; whereas, if the 20,000 persons had received and wisely used all that has been stolen from them, each one would possess the sum of $7,500, instead of being in poverty as he is today. This is said to be a government by the people and for the people; but that is not true. The many are the slaves; the few are the rulers in the domains that have to do with the very life and existence of man.

The Bible teaches that opportunity for salvation, for escape from hell, will be given to all people when they have advanced to the stage of recognition of the Messiah. When Jesus came nineteen hundred years ago, the poor and despised classes were the fortunate ones from the standpoint of the Messianic personality; but he did not forever debar the people who rejected him. He said to them: "The publicans and harlots go into the kingdom of God before you." There would be no sense in these words unless at some period of the world's progress, the hypocrites, after graduation in the school of experience, should follow those who went into the kingdom before them.

There is a vast difference between the Koreshan conception of the humanity of Deity and the fallacious idea, the godhood of modern humanity. Koreshans point to the perfect man Jesus as the manifest personality of God, as distinct from the mortal stock of the chaotic world; while numerous would-be teachers are endeavoring to persuade the masses that they are divine in their selfishness; pure in their corruption; chaste in their sensuality; just in their barbarism; refined in their coarseness; happy in their discontent; harmonious in their discord; thoroughly alive in their death, and saved in their sins!

The President of Yale college asserts that the "American people are gentlemen, and therefore capable of self-government."

In contrast with this statement we note a newly organized society for the suppression of numerous ungentlemanly nuisances and unbearable bores, in Chicago—a great industrial, commercial, and educational center of civilization, where the people should be morally, socially, and politically pure, but in reality where a wholesale protest against the conduct of unrefined and uncultured citizens is necessary.

The Chicago board of trade has secured legislation against bucket shop concerns, after a bitter war for a number of years. It is found necessary to keep successful robbery within certain limits. Bucket-shops are but boards of trade on a small scale; there is practically no difference in the methods of the smaller and the larger concerns, for the business of the board of trade is to regulate prices, not on the basis of justice, but for the special benefit of the members who have experience in commercial manipulation.

American commercial imperialism has all the specific characteristics of an empire; it has its landlords; its money kings; its cotton and cattle kings; its corn kings, and its coal barons; and the people are marrying princes, counts, and dukes into the royal aristocracy of the West. The titled kings and barons of America rank higher and exercise greater power than men of corresponding titles in the feudalism of medieval times!

Evolutionists must admit that the trusts have evolved from the conditions of modern competition.

Occultists imagine that by going into the silence they can hear the voice of the seven thunders.

A strike is a labor panic.

The Messiah and His Miracles.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Concerning the Bible, I would like to ask: (1) Are the narrative and historical portions of the Scriptures to be received as reliable statements of actual occurrences and facts? (2) Did Jesus and his apostles actually do the things and say the words attributed to them? Were they all real characters in history, or were some or all of them fictitious, like those in Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," used to illustrate principles, doctrines, characters, etc.? (3) Are the accounts of the miracles of the Christ and his apostles to be received as accurate statements of fact? For example; did Jesus actually feed the multitudes with a few loaves and fishes; walk on the sea; raise the dead; direct the fishes of the deep; create in the fish's mouth the tribute money, etc.? If he did, can such things be scientifically explained? If they can, please explain them. Is it possible that some other than the almighty power of God could do such things?—GEO. F. H., Ft. Worth, Tex.

(1) The books of the Bible constitute one great record of the experience and progress of Deity in humanity. These books are written in the language of symbolism mainly; and many of the narratives are records of what occurred in the domain of human life, while, according to the uninterpreted language of symbolism, they appear to have occurred in the physical world. All of the books of the Bible do not express truth in the same degree; and therefore, to correctly comprehend their contents, there must be exercised a scientific discrimination. All that is contained in the Bible is reliable and true; its history is correct; its statements are accurate; its authority is reliable; and its truth is eternal.

(2) The New Testament records of the work of Jesus and his apostles are records of facts. Jesus was a real man in the flesh, the Son of God, the actual manifestation and personality of Deity. His disciples were real men and women; he taught them, and prepared them to receive the baptism of his life when he should disappear as a visible presence. All the names of the Bible refer to personalities, and the meaning of the names is the key to the character of the personalities. Every great movement originates with a personality; and the fact of the existence of the Christian church, is proof that some man lived and founded it. No one doubts that Mohammed and Buddha lived—they founded great religions. Jesus lived and established the new church, which succeeded the Jewish church; he stood at the head of the new dispensation; and the great religious impulse which has given character to the dispensation, is a powerful and age-long testimony to the great fact that Jesus existed as a man, and taught a tangible following.

(3) A miracle is simply a wonder. Jesus did many things which the people could not understand; to them, the things which he did were wonders—miracles. None of the miracles wrought by Jesus were in violation of any natural or spiritual law. He was able to perform his wonderful works because he understood law and was able to conform to it. The miracles of Jesus and the apostles actually occurred; and they can be and are all scientifically explained in Koreshanity; none of them are mysterious when understood. Many of the wonderful things in the scientific world of the present were miracles when first announced. Every genius is a miracle-worker; Jesus was a miracle-worker of a very high order; and when he went into his disciples he continued to work through them until the church began to decline.

Jesus possessed in perfection, all the pneumatic and psychic gifts and powers which today are perverted and feebly expressed in mediums of various types. He understood the relation of mind and matter, and understood the law of transmission of energy, and the law of transmutation of matter; hence he was able to perform many mental and physiological wonders, and finally transmuted himself, and transmitted his life to his following. He was the Logos (which was spirit) made flesh; he was the Bread from heaven; he was God tabernacling among men. He was born in Bethlehem, which means the House of Bread; he came as the Bread to thousands, and it was fitting in the order of things, that such a character should symbolize his mission by some great external sign—and this he did by feeding the multitudes on a few occasions, with only a few loaves and fishes at the beginning of the distribution. This miracle cannot possibly be comprehended from the basis of chemistry. Unless spirit and matter are interconvertible, not only would such a miracle be absolutely impossible, but also there could be no light, no heat, no sensation, no activity, no motion, no thought, nor any life. The great mass of food which Jesus gave the multitudes at the time of the miracle of the loaves and the fishes, was materialized from his own mind.

The Messiah was able to walk on the water through the generation of an energy which disintegrated gravity. This energy was the result of the agitation of the spleen, through the operation of which his body had no weight so long as gravity was neutralized in him. He raised the dead by imparting life to the dead forms by powerful pneumo-psychic processes—by the impartation of mental substances, through which the functions and activities of the body and mind were resumed. He knew, psychologically, on which side of the ship the fish were located; and it should seem as easy for the Messiah to psychologize fish as for mediums to attract human perverts today; and the fact that by the same processes he could locate the fish which had failed to swallow the coin, is not more strange than the processes by which mediums today recover lost articles or hidden treasures.

Miracles were a sign of Messiahship nineteen hundred years ago; but Jesus foresaw that at the end of this dispensation, many who are antichristian and without the divine truth, should be able to accomplish many such wonders as he wrought. The powers of the heavens are reflexed in the hells; the devil imitates the power of God, and thus deceives—by doctrines and miracles. There is a number of things, however, which the devil cannot do, and these are among the greater things which Jesus said would be done by those who followed him in the regeneration. The devil is the Almighty's dark reflex, God's antithet; and he is able at the close of dispensations, to counterfeit the doctrines and works of the divine Messenger.

The Limitation of Form.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Will you please explain where the discrepancy is in the following mathematical problem, wherein your axiom is employed? Form is the proof of existence; limitation lines or boundary lines are the proofs of the particulars and superficial contents or area of forms.

The limitation line in a 7-inch circle is about 22 inches; its area is about 38.5 square inches. The same limitation line forced into a square form, contains but 30.5 square inches. As we cannot conceive of a form without a limitation or boundary line, and the size of said form is absolutely determined by its limits, does it not seem that to follow it indefinitely to its extremes, we could conceive of a minute circular form with the smallest possible area; and it being susceptible of loss by being formed into a square, it would take with it the limitations, and pass out of our conception of its area, limit, form, and existence? I do not claim to be a mathematician, but simply a practical mechanic; and I am in a quandary as to the above.—J. T. M., Springfield, Mo.

Geometry is the science of the properties and relations of magnitudes; it treats of the measurement of solids, surfaces, lines, and angles, and applies to the smallest as well as to the largest forms. There could be no geometry if every form were not limited and definite, no matter what shape it may be. When we declare that limitation is a property of form, we declare the very essential and fundamental principles of the geometry of existence. If geometry is true, it is true universally; and therefore the universe is limited. The Koreshan geometrical axioms and postulates are not assumptions; they are true in fundamentals and rational in application and conclusion.

The discrepancy in the above is primarily in the misconception as to what constitutes limitation; or, at least, it is in the conception that a circular line 22 inches in length represents the same limitation as the four sides of a square aggregating 22 inches in length. This would be dealing with lines to the exclusion of areas. If the line were a wire, it would not change the limitation of the wire to bend it into any shape; but the same wire would bound different areas if considered as the boundary of figures representing surfaces, for every new form, arc, or angle made. In the above, 8 square inches are taken away from the original circle 7 inches in diameter, and the limitation of the square figure is less than the circle. Limitations cannot be equal unless they bound equal areas or enclose equal spaces.

A circle and a square have the same limitation if they contain the same area. A sphere and a cube of solid gold have the same limitation if they have the same weight; it is the same limitation expressed in different forms; the superficial areas differ, but the contents are the same, and the forms are exact co ordinates. The co-ordinate of the square is the circle; the co-ordinate of the cube is the sphere; the co ordinate of a rectangle is the ellipse. We must consider an object as occupying a given space; the measures of that space are the measures of its limitation.

If we conceive of a minute circle of the smallest possible area, there would be no loss of space if the circle were made to assume any form having the same number of square units; but if such a minute circle were forced to pass beyond the smallest possible area, it would pass out of our conception; it would have no area, no form, no existence; in other words, there could be no going beyond the smallest form or area without a transformation, because the vanishing point would be reached.

Take an atom, for instance; suppose it to be spherical—matter of a given kind, reduced to the smallest possible form in which it can exist. If the matter be reduced to such a point, and it should be represented in our mind by the smallest conceivable circle, the very next vibration would dematerialize the atom; its form would be destroyed, and the substance of the material atom would be reduced to energy. When an atom has reached the terminal point of its existence, it has reached its fourth dimension—a geometrical limitation differing in quality from the three dimensions of length, breadth, and thickness, and obtaining only at the terminal points of existence of matter—at the points of materialization and dematerialization.

The Precession of the Equinoxes.

Astrological Evidences that the World is Entering the Aquarian Age.

The Signs and Constellations.

There are two Zodiacs which bear the same name. The Zodiac of constellations is called "fixed," while the Zodiac of the signs is "movable." The equinoctial points of the movable Zodiac have a retrograde motion around the Zodiac of constellations. Although the constellations are called "fixed," they have their motion. The circle of the Zodiac has a great cross in the center, upon which revolves the sun. To this sun upon the cross must we look for life; and if it were destroyed, all things upon our planet would perish. The four points of the cross reach out to the ecliptic, and form four other crosses where the intersection takes place. The Zodiac is a great circle in the heavens, and contains the twelve signs of the Zodiac, each sign containing thirty degrees each. The points of the equinox have a retrograde motion along the ecliptic, called "the recession of the equinoxes."

For the last 2,154 years, the constellation Pisces has been upon the vernal equinox, but the recession of the equinoxes has brought the point of the vernal equinox into the constellation Aquarius, the Water-bearer. There is a question among students in astrology and the occult sciences, as to when the sun will enter the constellation at the spring equinox.

Probable Source of Totten's Cryptogram.

In order to explain matters, we look to the astrology of the Scriptures. In chapter IV. of Revelation, is a plan of the heavens, as follows: The throne in the center is the glorious sun; the rainbow about the throne is the starry constellations around the heavens. The four and twenty seats are the twenty-four divisions of the movable Zodiac, or the periods of time of 25,448 years. [The factor of foreshortening of time, which astrologers and astronomers do not understand, makes the Zodiacal cycle 24,000 years in length, and each dispensation 2,000 years, instead of 2,154.—EDITOR.] The four and twenty elders are the constellations as they fill the twenty-four hours of time in the Zodiac. The crowns are the names of the Zodiac. The seven lamps of fire about the throne, are the seven heavenly bodies that were known to the ancients, and the seven Spirits of God denote the magnetic influence of the planets. The sea of glass like unto crystal is the transparent atmosphere, from which we draw oxygen, or the breath of life.

The four beasts full of eyes before and behind are the four constellations; viz., Taurus, the bull; Leo, the lion; Sagittarius, the archer, and Aquila, the eagle. The eyes before and behind are centuries, years, months, weeks, days, hours, minutes, seconds, etc. This denotes time, that sees all things, that was and is to be. The six wings of each beast denote the six periods of time, or six cycles of time, allotted to a quarter of the Zodiac. Each beast represents a period of time, or 6,462 years, or three times of cycles of 2,154.

Four Great Nations Symbolized.

The Scriptures speak of the four corners of the earth, and it denotes that there are to be four great empires upon the earth, or the countries that are to become the four great republics. The beast with the face of a lion is Leo the lion, and has dominion over that part of the earth that is to be under the rule of the nation which has a lion for its emblem, or England. The beast with the face of a calf is Taurus, and has dominion over that part of the earth that is to be ruled by the nation under Taurus, or Russia.

The beast with the face of a man is Sagittarius, the archer, and has dominion over that part of the earth that is to be ruled by the nation which is to be under Sagittarius, or Spain. Spain has been cut off for a time for her injustice to her subjects, but she will regenerate under another speaking tongue, when her period of time is due, and will become a republic. The fourth and last beast like a flying eagle is Aquila, the eagle that lies above Aquarius in the Zodiac. The eagle has dominion over that part of the earth that is to come under the rule of the nation who has an eagle for its emblem, or the United States.

At present, under the new cycle of time of Aquarius, great changes are taking place. The Lion of England is treading upon different parts of the earth, and is gaining territory. The Bull of Russia is about to devour the dragon of China, and will gain territory. Sagittarius, the horse and archer, being far below the autumnal equinox, shows the fallen condition of Spain. Like the horse, she has won in the race, but now resembles a broken-down nag, drawing a cart with a heavy load.

The eagle of freedom, or emblem of the United States, is spreading its wings over the seas and islands, and they now reach from Porto Rico to the Philippine Islands. Probably its head will in time be at the North Pole, and the feathers of its tail at Cape Horn.

The woman in the Scriptures with a crown of stars over her head is Columbia, the mother of freedom. The male child, who shall rule the world with a rod of iron, represents liberty and freedom, and is influencing the destiny of every true man and woman. I would add, that in time, the English-speaking tongue will rule the world; for where that language is used the nations become amalgamated.

General Disturbance and Disintegration.

The whole world at present appears to be under some exciting and disturbing influence, which is affecting empires, countries, and the mental qualities of humanity, because we are coming under a new cycle and a new influence. For the last 2,154 years we have been under the influence of the constellation of Pisces, a watery sign, but the recession of the equinoxes has

Lecture by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanism will deliver a Lecture on Koreshan Universology, Sunday, 3 p. m., April 7, 1901, at Koreshan Hall, 4th floor, 315-19 Englewood ave., Chicago.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in advanced thought.

brought the vernal equinox into the constellation of Aquarius, the Water-bearer.

The Scriptures say, there was the noise of a cry from the first fish-gate, and a howling from the second. The second fish-gate was passed during 1899, and the result has been floods, shipwrecks, and many deaths by water, and we will feel the effects for some time to come. During the cycle of Pisces, the waters have been sailed over, and navigation has made great strides, and we have developed the powers of the waters and steam to the utmost.

Aquarius, at the vernal equinox, will bring in the electrical age, and many wonderful inventions and great discoveries will be made, and the powers of the air will become developed. Aquarius will bring about great changes; old things will pass away, and new things will be ushered in, for the next cycle of Aquarius of 2,154 years will bring in a new religion; the sixth sense will be developed, and become a mental gift to humanity, and we will all be intuitive and magnetic.

The poles of the equinoxes retrograde along the ecliptic about 2½ seconds of a degree per year. The points of the equinoxes make a recession of one degree in 71½ years, or one whole sign in 2,154 years.

The Signs and Dispensational History.

In the Scriptures, the constellation of Pisces ends with the "times of the Gentiles." These began when Nabopolassar assumed the crown of Babylon. His accession took place in the year 3377, A. M. the "times of the Gentiles" ended 2,520 years after, or in March of 5897, A. M., or the spring of 1899, A. D., when Aquarius was at the vernal equinox. According to some astrological calculations, it gave Sunday, Feb. 12, 1899, as the period for the cycle of Aquarius to begin.

When Leo was at the vernal equinox, about 12,944 years ago, the Egyptians probably carved the Sphinx—Virgo and Leo, represented by the body of a lion and the face of a woman. When Aries the Ram was at the spring equinox, Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt, and he slaughtered a male lamb to commemorate that cycle of time. The children of Israel were not inclined to worship a new religion, and relapsed back into the Taurus worship, by making a golden calf and worshipping it.

Revelation says that "the blood shall flow to the horse bridles." The constellation Pegasus is the horse that is in the heavens above Aquarius. From this prophecy, the cycle of Aquarius will be filled with wars, or terrible accidents that will destroy life. [Bather, it will begin with revolution.—ED.] "As ye enter into the city, there will meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water." This relates to the Passover into Aquarius.

The Vernal Equinox Entering Aquarius.

We will leave to future generations the result of what Aquarius will produce. May the great pyramids and the Sphinx be preserved for future ages, when Leo and Virgo again return to the vernal equinox. At the time the constellation Argo Navis was at the vernal equinox, the flood occurred; and when the star "Naos," in the oar-lock of the ship, was on a line with the equinox, Noah entered the ark. This is probably the period of time when Atlantis sank, leaving the peaks of its mountains above the sea, which mountain peaks are now known as the Azores.

The point of the vernal equinox is truly the finger of time, and it signifies what has been and what is to be. About 16,078 years ago, when the scientific constellation Virgo was at the vernal equinox, there must have been a great civilization on the earth; and when Leo was at the vernal equinox the astrologers foresaw that some great calamity would overtake the world by water.

Then comes the period of Noah, and from this the history of the world dates. The cycles of time give us Noah, Moses, Christ, Mahomet, Christopher Columbus, Gustavus Adolphus, Luther, Washington, and others will follow, such as Edison, who opens the way to the electrical or Aquarius age.—CHARLES HATFIELD, in the Sphinx, Jan. 1901.

The Astronomers Baffled Again.

"The world is round and it goes round, Uncle Rastus," said the small grandson of the old colored man's former owner. "Don't you understand about it?"

"No, honey, I can't say I does," admitted Uncle Rastus, surveying the well varnished apple with which his little guest had illustrated his argument. "W'at holds de world up? Dat's wa't I'd like to know, chile."

"Why, it goes round the sun, Uncle Rastus," said the boy eagerly, "and the sun holds it up by the law of attraction."

"Uh, honey, I reckon you ain't gone quite far 'nough in yo' reasoning yet," said the old man, with a smile of patronizing good nature. "In dat case, w'at would keep de world up when de sun's done gone down, Answer me dat, chile."—Youth's Companion.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

The Cosmopolitan.—What constitutes the ideal wife, is discussed in an able article by Lavinia Hart, in the April Cosmopolitan; the position taken is that the ideal wife has it in her power to make the ideal husband; harmony of temperament and equal social status are considered important in the marital relations. An interesting feature of this number is the publication of an article on The British Aristocracy, found among the papers of the late Grant Allen. The subject is handled without gloves. It is probable that he did not care to place himself before the English reading public in the position of entire frankness which he had assumed while writing this article, and that consequently it was held until after his death, for publication. The editor, Mr. John Brisbane Walker, discusses the position which the Pierpont-Morgan trust holds with reference to the business and political world. The title of the article is, The World's Greatest Revolution. The picture drawn will doubtless surprise a great majority of people who have not given the subject thoughtful attention. 10 cents per copy. At news-stands.

Cram's Magazine.—In its issue for March, Cram's Magazine reaches us unusually well provided with acceptable illustrations which lend interest to the following articles, among others: Queen Victoria, by Milton Reeves; the Pan American Exposition, by Dr. Murray-Aaron; Louisa, Queen of Prussia, by James Q. Howard, A. M.; and a Child's Visit to an Ostrich Farm. The departments of Books of the Hour, the World's Doings, In Washington Corridors, etc., appear as usual, with other matter of special interest for those who desire to keep in touch with the broader facts of the world's movements. 25 cents per copy. Geo. F. Cram, 61-63 Plymouth Place, Chicago.

American Monthly Review of Reviews.—Industrial topics are prominent in the editorial discussion, which occupies the opening pages of the April Review of Reviews. The editor's comments on the formation of the billion dollar steel trust, coal strikes, railroad consolidations, and modern transportation problems in general, are pointed and instructive. Sketches of the lives of Gen. Harrison and Wm. M. Evarts appear. France on the Wrong Track, is by Baron de Coubertin, who says that socialism is the greatest danger that threatens France today. 25 cents per copy. 13 Astor Place, New York City.

The Arena.—We were much interested in reading the opening article in the April number, entitled The Passing of the Declaration, by Prof. L. C. Prince, of Dickinson college, Carlisle, Pa.; he declares the Declaration of Independence to be an obsolete document and full of false principles; it is a thoughtful review of the history of the American government from the founding to the present time. Another article discusses modern science; and still another reviews the life and character of Tolstoi. The Arena is progressive and covers a wide field in the scope of its reviews. $2.50 per year. Alliance publishing Co., New York City.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.—A special feature of the April number is Mr. Curtis Brown's description of the inauguration of King Edward VII, accompanied by illustrations from sketches and photographs. Another interesting feature is an entertaining article concerning the Lake Front island discovered and claimed by Capt. Streeter, at Chicago. The processes of shooting oil wells are described and beautifully illustrated. The fiction of this number is specially good and meritorious. 10 cents per copy; at news-stands.

Twentieth Century Wraps.

These novel Wraps are becoming very popular, and the demand for them still continues. They are made of Shetland flax, hand-crocheted by our own people, and are light, airy, and beautiful.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY

Founded by Koresh (Dr. Cyrus R. Teed),
A. D. 1870.

THE EARTH is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Sun, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth constituting the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell: we INhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, and the pattern of the new order of Human Society.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of universal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism—the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Waters of the Great Sea of Humanity.

An Important Key to the Interpretation of the Scriptures; Progress and Decline of the Church; the Great Religious Babylon; the Voice of Authority and Warnings of Judgment.

AND HE SAITH UNTO ME, THE WATERS WHICH THOU SAWEST, WHERE THE WHORE SITTETH, ARE PEOPLES, AND MULTITUDES, AND NATIONS, AND TONGUES. Rev. xvii:15.

THIS DECLARATION OF THE ANGEL TO JOHN is one of the keys to the revelation of the mysteries of John's Apocalypse. It is even more than a mere key to the mysteries of the book of Revelation; it is one of the important keys to the arcana of the entire Scriptures. "The waters which thou sawest * * * are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." It will be remembered that John was in the spirit when his visions were given, and that the things he saw were correspondences of things in the natural world. It will be observed that when he saw what appeared to him as waters, it required the interpretation of the angel to define what his vision signified. He saw the inhabitants of the earth in their future conditions and stages of advance or decline.

The observations of the Revelator were concerning the future career of the church in the earth, in its progress of declension and resurrection. Waters signify inhabitants. This is not the language of figure, or a figure of speech; it is, however, the language of symbolism, and is identical with the language employed in Genesis, where it is declared that the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and God said let there be light, and there was light. This condition occurred at the beginning of the Christian dispensation, when the Holy Spirit moved upon the church, that is, upon the waters, and said, let there be intelligence (light), and there was illumination or light in the minds of the people. God called the light day. The Lord Christ was the Light of the world; therefore, he is the Day of the world. The light of intelligence is the prior thing, while the natural light of the world is the posterior. Natural or physical light is the product of intellectual light.

The whore which John saw sitting upon many waters, is supposed by the Protestant churches to have direct reference to the Roman Catholic church. The Roman church is the "Holy See," by which is meant the sea. The Roman Catholic church is the mother of harlots, and the Protestant churches are the harlots of which she is the mother. The many waters upon which this sea sits constitute the entire Protestant world. The most distinguishing feature of their relationship, is their unity of belief in the tri-personality of the Godhead. It is a doctrine of paganism, and was derived from paganism by the Roman church and committed to her daughters, the Protestant churches, by the old harlot, who is the mother of harlots; that is, the mother of the Protestant churches, distinguished as her own by the character of their central and fundamental belief.

There can be no question but that the church was to fall away; this was one of the unmistakable predictions of the Lord and his Apostles. It is assumed by the church of Rome, that the church was not to decline; that the fall of the church is a falling away, or an apostasy from the old church by those who were once its adherents, but that the old church maintains its integrity until the end. This doctrine is contrary to the Scriptures, and contrary to the records of history. The great apostasy foretold, is an apostasy of the church itself. The great whore is the great Babylon, and this Babylon is predicated of the confusion of the spiritual tongues, or the division of religious sentiment prevailing throughout Christianity, regarding many doctrines of the Christian system.

Romanism will assert that the Christ promised to be with the church until the end of the world. God just as unmistakably promised to be with the Jewish church until the end of the world, and he fulfilled his promise. He conjoined himself with Abraham, and followed the development of the dispensation through all the declensions of Jewish progress and failure, until the end of the dispensation, that is, until the end of the world, when the regular church had so declined as to have made the law of God of none effect by its traditions—an example followed literally by the Roman and Protestant churches.

God the Lord was with the Jewish church until the end of the Jewish dispensation, at which time he was resurrected as the Son and Christ of God. But while He was with his church he was so distinctively separate from it, that the church did not know the Lord whom it pretended to worship and with violent hands murdered, as it had been predicted the church would do. The Lord comes at the end of the age, the end of the world; but the church does not know him, thus again fulfilling the predictions of the Christ and his Apostles. The church, the old dragon, has fallen away, beginning at the head, the old harlot of Rome, and ending with the tail, the very fruit of Protestantism—the harlots of whom the Roman Catholic church is the mother. The Protestant churches are the daughters of old Rome; they are therefore daughters of the Roman harlot, of whom it is said, she is the mother of harlots. This has no other reference than to the churches springing from the old Roman church, having the central fallacy of Romanism, namely, the doctrine of the tri-personality of the Godhead, of which there is not even a suggestion in the Scriptures. The time has come when this abomination of desolation shall be removed, according to the declarations that have been made concerning her.

The church is called a harlot, because she has adulterated the truths and goods of the church, and, because of falsification, has made the doctrines non-effective as to life. It is declared that the old heavens and the old earth shall pass away. This means that the old church and the old state will be destroyed, and there will be new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. There will come a new church and a new state. Modern Christianity is but the adulteration of the church of Christ with the fallacies of paganism; and though she has been the bride of God, she is divorced and is no more the treasured love of the Lord. It is a bitter pill for the church to swallow, but she will have to take her medicine, for she is wrapped in her iniquities.

It may be concluded that wheresoever waters are mentioned in Revelation, there is some reference to conscious entities—in some phase of their relationship—as constituting aggregations of people. In the natural or physical heaven (that which we have denominated the alchemico-organic), rain is produced by the union of two gases, or rather the energies of two gases; namely, oxygen and hydrogen. They unite in the alchemico-organic field, and by their condensation, alchemical mixture, they produce the cloud and then the rainfall. This finally results in the aggregation called the sea, which is the only product of the natural clouds, and is the only Christ that will ever come in the clouds of the physical heavens. Nevertheless, the Lord will come as predicted, in the clouds of heaven; but he will come in the correspondential clouds. He will come in the literal degree of human life, through a spiritual union of the interior of man and God, thus bringing the Godhead out into the externals of human manifestation. The Scriptures say: "The wicked are clouds without water." What would we naturally regard the righteous to be, if not clouds with water?

We are authorized to tell the church that the time is at hand for the final judgment; that its conceptions of religion are entirely false; that it has no regard for that which is righteous and just, and that there comes a new church, which from now henceforth will show to the world the difference between that which is false and that which is true. As we reach the end of the old order, there will be fulfilled the saying, there will be no more sea. As the waters which John saw were peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues; and as peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues are, as to their sensual production, the product of the operation of the propagative law, it follows that propagation will cease with such as will be subject to the higher law and life. That there will be no more sea, literally signifies that there shall be no more cohabitation on the sensual plane; that the propagative desire shall cease on the physical plane of life, for it is said that they who are accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage.

Constitutional Power of the Majority.

The People's Unmistakable Endorsement of the Gold Standard, the Administration, and Its Philippine Policy; Treasonable Course of Opponents; America's Title to Its Colonial Possessions.

ONE OF THE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES of the government of the United States, is the right of the majority to rule the affairs of the nation. When men or principles, submitted to the test of popular opinion, gain the endorsement of a majority of the people, there is no legitimate course but to submit to the rule of public sentiment. If the party in power has not a right to the support of all the people while in office, and while fulfilling the will of the party represented, then there is no justice in the principles of a democratic or republican form of government. In the last national election, the majority of the voters of the United States unmistakably and unequivocally showed that they demanded the centralization of the money power, and that they were pleased with the principles of the Administration as regarding the extension of territory to the islands of the sea.

The main issues in the last presidential campaign, were the single or double standard, the Philippine war, and the acquisition of the Philippine Islands. Mr. Bryan said, "If the republican party wins, the war in the Philippines will continue; if I win, the Filipinos will be independent." In the one case, Mr. McKinley represented the republican party; while in the other the democratic party was, in Mr. Bryan's estimation, to represent Mr. Bryan. The democratic party was defeated on these issues. The Filipinos were under Spanish rule, by the same law that the Indians of North America or the United States are under the supremacy of our government. The Philippine Islands were owned by Spain, precisely as the land of this country is owned by the people of the United States. If we did not steal the entire country, we purchased it of those who did steal it. There is not a foot of land owned by a country, corporation, or an individual that is not stolen property. We not only obtained the Philippine Islands by the universally recognized rights of civilization to conquer and to possess, but we purchased it of the power that had the right to convey the title according to the laws of a spurious civilization. The fact that the payment of the $20,000,000 was made to the Lombard and Wall street creditors of the Spanish government, does not affect the principle. If our representatives paid to the creditors of Spain $20,000,000 of our money, in order to conciliate the money power, it was only in the line of our endorsement of the money power which we have fostered, and which we now love so well that we have expressed an avowal of our subordination to the gold power and a desire for it to control all our interests. The public sentiment of the country is in favor of our retention of those islands, which we first obtained by legitimate conquest, then purchased by public consent.

While the presidential campaign was waging, we made the statement in THE SWORD that the campaign speakers of the democratic party, when advocating the remonetization of silver and the independence of the Filipinos, were making votes for the party in power. One of the strongest arguments against the ability of the Filipinos to govern themselves, is presented in the fact that the man chosen by such as desired an independent government, was not fit to represent a free people. He lacks all of the characteristics of a true hero. He has shown some skill, but very great indiscretion, as a public leader, and either a great amount of cowardice, or treachery, or both; or he may have honestly repented of his past errors, and honestly changed his convictions. The conversion of Aguinaldo to American fealty, under the fear of punishment and the promise of a great and lucrative office, if this be true, looks about as suspicious as the conversion of a man to the Christian faith through fear of being tormented in hell. But whatsoever the republican party does regarding the war in the Philippines, it does under the endorsement of the popular voice until the termination of this Administration's career.

We are in favor of the rights of the majority to rule, so long as our government remains under its republican form; and we regard as nothing less than treason, the course pursued by that class of men who are crippling the Administration in its efforts to restore peace to that distracted country. There are many good reasons why the United States should retain possession of the Philippine Islands; one of the most cogent being that if they are not held by the United States, they will be conquered by a less liberal country, unless their independence be secured and perpetuated by the United States. This would involve complications that our government could not be responsible for, nor afford to assume.

A government conducted under the competitive system, as a republic, furnishes some striking anomalies. The right of the majority to rule or to administer the affairs of the government, is universally conceded; this means that the minority must submit to the voice of the majority. Is this a correct version of the principles of such a government as ours? Have the representatives of the majority a right to administer the government according to the requirements of the majority? And if so, how far is the minority justified in retarding the progress of the administration? Is it a law of the country that the minority submit to the majority rule? If this is not the law of the land, then what is? Where may we draw the line of demarkation between the rights of the majority and submission of the minority? And where shall the country define the limit of the rights of the opposition? The final overthrow of the Philippine rebellion has, from the first, been a foregone conclusion; and insomuch as this is the determination of a majority of the people, common sense would dictate the absurdity and uselessness of kicking against the pricks. If the course pursued by the opposition to the Administration were to obtain, the wheels of civilization would revolve backward a thousand years.

The cause of civilization will progress through conflict of opinion and the conflict of arms, until the purposes of the great Jehovah are fulfilled in the discipline of those who will become the Sons of God. It is a mistaken Christianity, or a perverted sentiment, that predicts universal peace before the final catastrophe of war. It is as evil to cry peace, peace, when there are no conditions of peace, and when war is inevitable, as it is to cry war when peace is in order.

It will be a long time before the people forget the achievements of the last five years of republican administration; not because of their virtues, but because in the line of public sentiment. If the democratic party could rise to the dignity of a statesmanship that could define and declare a legislation that could provide for an equitable distribution of the wealth which the great masses of the people have created, but which has been stolen and hoarded by the prosperous thieves, and which is denominated capital by the rich and acknowledged by the wealth creator, it would start out with a rejuvenated vitality. We have iterated and reiterated the assertion, that the two great parties have failed—in forty years of legislative control—to enact one statute for the masses of the people. The electors of this government have been manipulated by the rich in the interests of the men who are expert in their organized robberies, but under the guise of the capitalists' love for the poor working-man.

But why should we expect anything from a party, republican or democratic, which constantly poses as Jekyll and Hyde, with private promises to the money power and public pledges to the people, to be violated when the party has gained its ends? Our country seems to be prosperous, and the people are made to believe they are rich. Wherein are the masses benefited by the great show of wealth claimed to be in the treasury of the United States? There is not a dollar in the United States treasury that we are not paying interest on to help the money power to enslave us. Our laws are made by the rich, and for their interests. If Lombard street controls our legislation, will we suppose for an instant that the bankers of the world will devote themselves to the interests of the comfort and luxury of the people? The rich are not exploiting the commercial world for the "common people."

In the great city of Chicago we have an illustration of the operations of the politics of the two parties. The campaign should have been fought by either the democratic or the republican party, on the issue of a regulation of the income of the city. It should have been contested on the basis of compelling the rich to pay their share of the taxes with which to run the city government, that the poor might be benefited through relief in taxation. All our municipal governments are conducted by expert politicians, for no other purpose than to manipulate the poor tax-payer and to compel the poor to support the rich. The rich should be made to defray the expenses of our great cities; but on the contrary, the campaign as conducted on the one side was, "Is it Hanecy or Hennesey?" (It proved to be "Dinnis.") On the other it was, "How bad can we make our city to appear in the estimation of the outside world, under the democratic administration?"

The questions of Hanecy's defeat and Harrison's victory have not been answered. Hanecy was defeated because he was a pusillanimous puppy, working in the interests of the money power—and the electors knew it. Mayor Harrison was elected because, though mistaken as to motives, he was honest on the one question—the saving of the streets of Chicago from the railroad corporations, and because the scum of the city knew it was comparatively safe under him. With our present political system, Harrison is the best man for the place—and the people have so decided. There can never be any improvement in the politics of the country under the competitive system. There must and will be a radical revolution, and we reiterate, it will not come without blood.

The Genuine Science of Being.

The Knowledge of Deity and the Laws of His Existence is the Supreme Science; How Koreshanity Solves the Problems of Creation; Science and Mysticism in Contradistinction.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

A UNIVERSAL SYSTEM which includes all sciences, must begin with that of being as the first in order and importance. It is first in order because it is the most interior and central, relating to the throne and altar of God, the conscious nucleus of the universe. It is first in importance, because in it all other sciences originate.

What is being? What philosopher shall tell us? If all the learned disquisitions ever written upon the subject of the esse and existere were extant, the world itself would hardly contain them. There would surely be enough to build a tower of confusion reaching to the sky. Each author put forth a different conjecture, and brought to a focus energies from a sphere of chaos.

True science is affirmative, not conjectural. The Messenger of Truth teaches as one having authority, and not as the Scribes. Being is not a state of passivity; it implies action. God, the divine essence is biune. Love and wisdom, the ultimate principles of sex, unite in him in a pure flame, and this flame is creation. To create in its first significance, is to beget. When God creates he does not form worlds out of nothing; He begets offspring and reproduces Himself. The esse then is God in his most interior degree, where he is conscious, personal, in the form of a Man, the Grand Man, amplified into 144,000 perfect Spirits, the Elohim, though still the One, "E Pluribus Unum."

The esse becomes the existere. God stands forth in visible human shape, a man among men. Then the Messiah is in the material world, but only the eye of discernment will know him. The majesty and the grace which invest him are not apparent to most men. They see only the carpenter's son, but the Elohim constitute his interior mind. His material brain is the seat of their activity, and he is the beginning of the creation of God. He teaches the science of being, and every word which he speaks is an entity, an angel from a higher spiritual sphere coming to seek a dwelling-place.

The true science or knowledge of being is not mysticism. It reaches down to the material world and explains all phenomena. The law by which God, the esse becomes the existere, is alchemical and pertains equally to every physical atom. It is the law of transmutation by which spirit is converted to matter and matter to spirit. Continuity is the expression of the divine veracity,—a wonderful and a beautiful illustration of the divine methods.

Too much emphasis cannot be given to the fact that Koreshanity is opposed to every form of mysticism. It is practical and unselfish in its application to all departments of life. The ascetic in his cell, the stylite upon his pillar, made personal salvation his object. Koreshanity says: "Live for the reconstruction of society and the performance of use to the neighbor."

The science of being as it descends toward the circumference, shows that men and women as seen in their various stages of experience, find their origin in the involuntary activity of the Lord. "I form the light and create darkness: I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these things." As the spiritual entities or the words of truth go forth from the lips of the Lord, opposite words and thoughts of error, find lodgment in some human brain, whence they descend into the body to find reincarnation through the lines of natural reproduction. By reflex action, the ranks of ordinary life are constantly reinforced.

A knowledge of being renders the coördination of society possible. Social conditions in the natural world are the outermost expression of the mental chaos which produced the sophistries of the schoolmen and the metaphysical subtleties of the dialecticians. Kant very pertinently used the term dialectic to mean the logic of illusion—poor Kant, who never suspected how his own works were contributing to swell the same class of literature. Some one else has called dialectic the art of determining the value of opinions; but opinions are worthless. The philosophers spent centuries quibbling over the value of zero.

It requires a mind that embraces all knowledge to bring society into harmonious relations. The announcement of the doctrine of the humanity of the Lord is the first step toward order.

In the Great Clamor for Leadership.

The Medley of Messianic Claimants; Prophecy Fulfilled in the Multiplicity of False Prophets and Christs; the Law of Antithesis; the True Messiah and His Message.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

THE MESSIANIC FUNCTION manifest at the close of one dispensation and the beginning of another, like a responsible bank, is instance for the counterfeiter. In every-day life, among all sorts and conditions of people, and in relation to all aspirations, professions, and industries, a phase of the spurious messianic office is subject for observation. Wherever two people engage in argument, each with evident disposition to waive his opponent's opinions, evidences, and rights, in a small way there outcrops the perverted desire for leadership. In its supreme and ultimate struggle, this desire of many for supremacy, heads up in one as a belief that he, the vidual of this aggregation, is a vital necessity to the further endurance and progress of his kind, and he puts forth his claim to the supreme leadership of men—their messiah.

Now, in the day wherein the appointed Messenger fulfils the Deific will in the earth, and just preceding the harvest whereof the Sons of God are the fruit, these self-appointed spring up like mushrooms, fill their little cycle with undemonstrated assertion, and eventuate in oblivion. And this necessary experience for the vidual in particular and for the world in general, is as true a prophecy of the advent of a genuine Messiah as are any recorded promises from speech of the Almighty.

These antithetical manifestations are legitimate in the sense that all manifestations are sequential of law. These little walking plague-spots are spoken into existence by the same Power that speaks the true Messenger. Herein we appreciate the exemplification of the involuntary power of the Finite—the finished Being. This attribute may be more readily comprehended by calling to mind the qualities expressed by the words light, heat, good, etc., and carefully noting the result. It will be found that the word light suggests not alone its own quality of substance, but the opposite quality or darkness, and so on through the list. The infinite or unfinished mind does not so clearly conceive the antithetical quality, but there is some faint conception which corresponds to the involuntary power of the Individual or Perfected. This basis reconciles God's declaration that he forms the light and creates darkness: makes peace and creates evil. He voluntarily speaks into existence his true Messenger, while his involuntary power ripens the spurious messengers.

The close of the age teems with aspirations to leadership in the avenues of church, state, politics, commercial and national activity. A recent news column relates a tragedy in Berea, West Virginia, springing from rivalry between the Seventh-Day Adventists and the Seventh-Day Baptists, resulting in three lying at death's door, while the fourth has bounded quite through the portal into the arms of the Saviour for whom he fought, bled, and died! His compeers of course, regard him as subject of royal welcome by Him who commanded Peter to put up his sword, and healed the wound of its infliction.

Our city, pending municipal election, seethes with political leaders ready to entertain any plan which promises to seat certain candidates and oust from position certain incumbents. The voters who espouse this cause are "manly, unsullied, patriotic men;" the voters upon the other side are "subject to corruption,"—and either story is good until the other is heard. Gamblers contend for all sorts of stakes, and in the walks of commerce, which represents the center of vidual and universal existence, competition for advantages and leadership is approaching the climax.

With suspicion evidently born of some self-knowledge, "Christian" nation watches "Christian" nation lynx-eyed, ready to plunge into the vortex of war, or, already in that red bell, cast their lives upon the die of butchering those other sons of the same All Father. The false messiah will multiply under these conditions, which will know no surcease until, through his Appointment, God has turned back the tide of the river of death and brought into externals the army of the ransomed of the earth, the promised true Messiahs, the genuine Saviours, the Sons of the living God.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE SEMI ANNUAL FESTIVAL of the Koreshan System has an important astrological significance, and marks two great points in the Koreshan year; the Lunar Festival being celebrated April 10th, the Solar Festival October 18th. Aries and Libra, two great co-ordinate poles of the anthropotic Zodiac, are the terminal points of the axis of human destiny. The placing of the semi-annual Festival in these signs is not from mere arbitrary choice; the choice has back of it scientific principles, astronomical law, and two natal days, the dates of which fall in the equinoctial signs. There is a natural fitness in the Koreshan System; factors of destiny have conspired to make Koreshan events great landmarks of progress. The FOUNDER OF KORESHANITY was born under the sign Libra, October 18, 1839, at the beginning of the great Advent movement of the nineteenth century; counting lunar time, 1839 was the end of the great prophetic period of 2,300 days, upon which the Adventists relied, but concerning which they were disappointed because they could not comprehend the character of the event foreseen by the prophets. VICTORIA GRATIA, Pre-Eminent of the Koreshan Unity, was born under the sign Aries, April 10, 1844; this date, calculated on solar time, was thought to mark the end of the prophetic period, and this was the great date fixed by William Miller, as a result of his computations from the basis of prophecy. Aries signifies the love of begetting, while Libra signifies the science of begetting—it is the symbol of the great balancing power of human life. The scientific law of balance or equilibrium, applied in the three domains of commerce, will adjust the sex, religious, and commercial relations of humanity. Law provides, in the institution of celibacy, a natural restraint of the propagative instinct of the world, and prevents disastrous results of over-population. The Koreshan natal days fix the beginning of the sacred and civil years of the new era, corresponding to the years observed under the Jewish economy. The April Lunar Festival is the Koreshan Easter, in the true sense of the term. Easter as now observed, was appropriated by Catholicism from Roman mythology, although employed to celebrate the triumph of the Messiah over his enemies at Jerusalem. The term Easter is derived from the Saxon Ostara or Eostre, the Goddess of Spring. Koreshanity is the true religion of the Sun; it has come to establish human equilibrium—universal harmony in humanity. Jesus appeared as Aries, the Lamb or Ram; and his function was to beget and regenerate through the matrix of the church, the divine offspring. The science of that begetting is Koreshanity; and the time of its proclamation, the time of the beginning of the new age, is unmistakably marked by the sign Aries on the great dial of the Zodiac of the physical cosmos. In the celebration of April 10, Koreshans honor the unique feminine character which the powers of destiny have selected as the Pre-Eminent Head of all the orders of the Koreshan government.

The subject of cellular life is being widely discussed in the scientific world; but on this as on all other subjects pertaining to life, the scientists are ignorant of first principles—they have not the slightest clue to the solution of the problems which the cell presents. Cellular life is the only kind of life that exists; and as long as the modern scientific world does not comprehend the laws which operate in the organic cell, they have not the slightest conception of what life itself is. The following quotation from the Revue Encyclopedique indicates somewhat of the dense stupidity of modern biologists: "The existence of a nucleus in every living cell has always been regarded by naturalists with interest. Experiments in merotomy or cell-division, have shown that it is indispensable to cell life, and therefore to the life of the organism, since this is built up of cells. The exact relationship between the nucleus and its surrounding protoplasm, has been the subject of many interesting psychological investigations." Prof. Kunstler, a French scientist, concludes that the cell nucleus is related morphologically to certain spores, and adds: "If this is really so, our knowledge has received a very important addition. Is the cellular nucleus nothing else than the result of the transformation of a bud, adapted to a new role? Is it the vestige of a reproductive process, diverted from its primitive purpose? Such an hypothesis has the advantage of explaining the intense vitality of the nucleus; it gives a rational explanation of the appearance of the element which has hitherto seemed to owe its origin to no precursor." Koreshanity has the advantage of all other schools of thought today, because it begins with the fundamental principles of cellular life. It has come to teach the world that all life is cellular; and that a cell is a living organism, analogous to the form of the universe itself. The scientists have yet to learn that every cell has a heart and lung, and that the cell nucleus is the very center of the circulation of the cell. If the scientists would turn their attention from their vacuum to the Cellular Cosmogony, they would see their problems solved, and the mysteries of life revealed.

The editor of the Saturday Evening Post published in a recent number of that paper, an editorial on "The Exaggerations of Reform," and says: "The Spectator some time ago remarked that one of the greatest obstacles of political reform in America, was the tendency of its friends to exaggerate the evils with which they fight;" and it is suggested, by way of reference to the anti-slavery movement, that it is to be regretted that leaders, especially such men as Garrison and Phillips, spared no pains to overstate their case. In calm deliberation, we do not believe that the leaders of modern social reform nor the masses appreciate the truth concerning the gigantic evils which exist not only in America, but throughout the civilized world; and in our judgment, the conditions of modern society have not been exaggerated; but we do believe that the exaggeration lies with many, in their estimation of the value of their remedies, some of which are absolutely worthless. The exaggerations made by aggressive anti-slavery men are not apparent in the pictures they drew in the then existing conditions; but the sequel proves that the reform in itself was not complete. The evils which the men were fighting were as bad, if not worse, than they pictured; but the remedy was not so successful as they expected. The worst things ever said about humanity were uttered by Jesus the Messiah nineteen hundred years ago; and the exact truth concerning the conditions of human society today, may be stated in the same terms. The true remedy for existing evils cannot be applied effectively until the evils are scientifically analyzed and revealed in their awfulness. Just how bad the world has been through successive generations, will be made apparent in the ultimate effect of humanity's meanness—in the woes of that terrible revolution which was foretold by the Christ, and now declared by Koreshans to be at hand!

There is a reaction against classical education in several nations of Europe. It is not considered important to study dead people and dead languages; and the world is asked to turn its attention to modern literature, peoples, and tongues. The only trouble is that the modern world does not comprehend what is involved in the teachings of the ancients. There are certain elements of knowledge involved in the conceptions and languages of the Hebrews, Greeks, Romans, and other ancient peoples, that are absolutely essential to a correct understanding of modern languages. Through classical education the ancients have impressed the world with their greatness. It may be safely said that the conceptions of the modern world will not long survive the impending revolution. What is there in the modern mental world, as manifest in popular conceptions, that is destined to live through the ages? Where are the great men that will stand before the world to come, as mental giants? The spirit of the ancients has been transmitted from generation to generation; the ancients have been honored, and the knowledge they have imparted through root words, mythologies, philosophies, and religions, has served a necessary purpose in the progress of the world. Let the modern world repudiate what has been transmitted from ancient times down to the present; that repudiation must be taken as evidence that the spirit of the ancients has withdrawn from the masses, and has become involved in the great System which has come to restore to the world that knowledge which the ancients possessed; and with that knowledge must come the great characters and glorious civilization which existed in the remote light ages of the world's existence.

The pope of Rome advocates a Christian democracy, while claiming to represent the King of kings and Lord of lords. The idea of a Christian democracy is more in keeping with the spirit of the times, to which the church of Rome, true to its old-time policy, is endeavoring to adapt itself. There was a time when the Catholic church was united with the state—with an empire; then, Christ's kingdom was proclaimed. There was no democracy then, and the principles of democracy were not advocated by the church. In the disintegration of Rome, the church granted kings the "divine right" to rule. Observe how exultingly the pope crowned Charlemagne who, through over fifty campaigns, endeavored to restore the Roman empire. On Christmas day, A. D. 800, the pope placed the golden crown of the empire upon the head of Charlemagne, while the people shouted, "Long life and victory to Charles Augustus, crowned by God, the great and pacific emperor of the Romans." The powerful spirit of the great conqueror, under the sanction of the church, was not sufficient to reduce to order the barbaric society of western Europe; but events of history prove the attitude of the church on the question of imperialism from the medieval period to the ascendancy of the democracy of the West. The "infallible" church has changed its complexion many times during the past thousand years. It fought the Copernican system of astronomy at the time of its founding; it now accepts the system in its entirety. The authoritative advocacy of a Christian democracy manifests a tendency to another radical change in the attitude of Catholicism toward secular government.

The scientific world is a little exercised over repeated reports that the city of Bristol, England, is visible during the greater part of the year, from Muir Glacier, Alaska—a distance of about 5,000 miles; and an expedition of scientists is proposed to investigate the phenomenon during the coming summer season. Already scientific writers are endeavoring to explain it, although in doing so they must accept as possible that which was laughed at some years ago, when the advocates of the "flat earth" referred to apparently well authenticated reports that the Allegheny mountains in America were seen by a party of Portuguese scientists, in 1864, from the Peak of Teneriffe, on one of the Canary Islands—over 2,500 miles from the Alleghenies. Of course, such phenomena are to be explained on the basis of the mirage, with great magnification, because at such great distances a city of only a few square miles would be beyond the perspective vanishing point in direct lines of vision; but Prof. Serviss freely admits that "the phenomenon known as the mirage is one of the least understood of the optical properties of the atmosphere, although it has been known for ages." An explanation is proper only when the explanation itself can be understood, and its basis demonstrated; otherwise the explanation is as great a mystery as the original problem. When it comes to explaining how a city may be seen at a distance of 5,000 miles, the demonstrated premise of the hollow globe of Koreshan Astronomy must be called into requisition—for it has the decided advantage over the popular conclusion of the earth's convexity!

Edward Howard Griggs remarks that "the time is ripe for a new prophet, who shall call the world back to the simple realities of human life;" but so far from the truth is his conception of the mission of the Messenger of truth, that he spoils his hope by endeavoring to lay down the lines of action to which he thinks the new prophet must conform. He concludes that the coming prophet should found no order nor establish an institution; he must forego authority, and disclaim unusual election; he must find the ideal by transfiguration of the commonplace, and he must see and teach the divinity of common things. Indeed! What would a prophet be without authority? He would be devoid of a knowledge of the laws of organic unity did he not establish an organic society, and his ideals would be low and crude if he could see divinity in the peoples and customs of modern civilization. The world is full of unauthorized prophets already. What the world needs, is a Prophet who will teach a conception of Deity that belongs to a higher natural kingdom than that which now exists; who will possess sufficient authority and power to establish, on the basis of scientific law, an organic society and government that will prevail universally; and whose gospel will be unique and as distinct in character and degree from the gospel of nineteen hundred years ago, as the gospel of Jesus was distinct from Judaism. The old gospel, the old church, and the old order revamped will not reform the world. The time has come for a new System that will involve all the elements of liberty and life, of human progress and power.

The scientists continue to speculate concerning the location of the Garden of Eden; but so far, Paradise has eluded their most careful research. It has been supposed that it was in Mexico, in Yucatan, in South America, in Atlantis, at the North Pole, and in Smyrna; and now comes Prof. Burton, who concludes that Adam and Eve were Chinese, and that their primitive home was in China. Columbus thought to find the Garden of Eden in the East Indies; and his expedition was for the purpose of discovering its location. Notwithstanding the fact that nearly all these modern conceptions of the location of the Garden are reflexes of the truth, Koreshanity is the only system which scientifically locates God's Garden, in both the past and the future. Nineteen hundred years ago, the Garden of Eden was in Palestine; the real Garden was the church in which the Almighty planted his Seed. The future Paradise will be in America—the specific point of its location will be in Florida. If the readers of THE FLAMING SWORD will look over their files, they will find, if they do not remember, our reference to the remarkable likeness between the shore-lines of eastern Asia and eastern North America, with the adjacent islands; and the similarity of the Malay and Florida peninsulas. In this reference we pointed out, in advance of Prof. Burton, some geographical evidences that the center of the world's civilization at some remote period of the world's existence, was located in eastern Asia.

The old creeds are a constant source of trouble to the religious denominations; and from time to time attempts are made to revise their articles of faith. The greatest commotion in this line for years past has been in the Presbyterian church, the leaders of which now admit that the church has been in error regarding its conceptions of Deity and his relation to the world of man. The modern mind revolts against the creeds formulated in medieval times. Dr. Curtis, of Chicago, thus sums up the situation: "The church has too much ecclesiastical machinery. A board once organized is not predestined to everlasting life. We must strip off some superfluous offices. The church is too conservative. We are weighted down with a confession of faith that no longer represents the sense of the Presbyterian church. Now, just before the General Assembly, is the time for action. I do not think that Calvin, the Westminster father, looking down from above, is concerned that we should think as he thought and theologized, but rather, our loyalty to truth as we see it." The Presbyterian church, in its departure from its first false principles, has no longer any excuse for existence. It acknowledges that theological errors are taught in its body; and that the church cannot guarantee to the world that any new conceptions which its clergymen may have, are any nearer the truth than the conceptions entertained by Calvin.

St. Ambrose declared that "Where Peter is there is the church." This statement is true, because to Peter were given the keys of the kingdom of heaven. The Apostle Peter was the first to officially enunciate the doctrines of the gospel, after the ascension of Jesus; and Peter, in the line of the true Apostolic succession, must complete the work and mature the fruit of the Christian dispensation, and head the great order of the new dispensation. Let the church look for Peter in his final embodiment, as the authoritative Messenger of the new church, the Prophet of the new age. Through a long line of experience in the processes of generation during the Jewish dispensation, Abraham became the Christ; and correspondingly, Peter rises to his perfection through a line of experience in the processes of regeneration, during the Piscatorial age. There is no record anywhere of Peter's having delivered the keys to another; he therefore retains possession of them, and must ultimately apply them in unlocking the treasures of truth and revealing the mysteries of the universe.

Everything is considered fair in love and war; and this accounts for the laudation and promotion of Funston, of the American forces in the Philippines, to the office of brigadier-general. Funston captured Aguinaldo by trickery; he came with a band of Filipinos before the Filipino chieftain, under the role of a prisoner of war, as though captured by Aguinaldo's soldiers; then Aguinaldo was overpowered and taken to Manila. But the promotion of Funston will not be without its good effects; it is a rebuke to such men as Admiral Sampson and many officers of the regular army, because of their attitude toward under-officers who are not "socially refined," or who have not come through the regular channels of education in military tactics. The common idea is that great men must be made by machinery; but the facts are notoriously in evidence, that men who have made their mark in the world have risen through development in the school of experience.

That which seems to be failure may contain the germs of success; there is even fortune in adversity. Martyrdom is a terrible ordeal, but great movements spring out of tragedy. Persecution cements hearts together in unity, and a secret conspiracy may be instrumental in discovering to the world the merit of that which is attacked. Thirteen persons reclined at the Passover supper in the upper room at Jerusalem; there were two central figures—characters which were antithetical. The fortunate side of the question may be seen by considering Jesus as the thirteenth person; while if Judas is taken as the thirteenth, we may see the unfortunate side—especially for himself and for the powers operating in and through him. Judas and the Jewish nation did not long survive the moral effect of the tragedy of the cross, but Jesus triumphed completely, and a new church began, with its powerful impulse for dispensational progress.

The highest conception of the resurrection that the modern church has is that of Jesus' coming forth from the tomb of Joseph; it has no conception of the real resurrection of the Messiah. Jesus said, before his martyrdom, "I am the resurrection and the life." Of whom or of what was he the resurrection? He was the resurrection from the tomb of mortal humanity, of all the progressive spirits of the Jewish people including the central line of Messiahs, prophets, priests, and kings. Jesus' victory over death was a great event; the church has perpetuated the memory of it by its annual celebration of Easter; but false conclusions of the import of that event have blinded millions to the truth of the great resurrection which is to come as the fruit of the present dispensation of divine progress.

The number 7 figures conspicuously in many important names and words connected with the history of Koreshanity and the great subjects in the field of its discussion. The Founder of Koreshanity was born in New York, a name which has 7 letters; Chicago, the name of the city in which the center of the Koreshan propaganda is located, has 7 letters; also Florida, the name of the peninsula on which the New Jerusalem will be located, contains 7 letters; it is noteworthy that the names America, England, and Germany have each 7 letters. There are likewise 7 letters in the names and words Abraham, Ephraim, prophet, kingdom, society, alchemy, biology, Pacific, Creator, Messiah, and Jehovah—each of which will reach their completeness and perfection in the new age.

The shame of Christendom is exposed by Leslie's Weekly in its reference to the treatment of the Chinese native Christians by the allied Christian powers. The native Christians materially assisted the legations during the Boxer siege, and Conger admits that without their aid, the legations would have succumbed to the Boxers. Those who rendered such timely aid, or at least the families of those who sacrificed their homes and lives in behalf of the foreigners, are compelled to go without compensation, and are now homeless. We have heard that humanity is a great brotherhood; but we do not see the spirit of brotherhood manifest in the masses, nor even in the ranks of modern Christians!

"Liberty brooks no restrictions," says one. The liberty and harmony of the solar and stellar systems of the physical universe depend upon the restrictions of eternal law; every planet has perfect liberty and freedom to move in its orbit, but it has no liberty to move out of its orbit. There is no true liberty for the masses without the restrictions which the laws of order impose. Unless there are restrictions and restraints upon men, at any period of the world's history, the rights of the neighbor are infringed and liberty made as impossible as it is today under existing chaos.

A Chicago clergyman deprecates the existence of modern religious fads; he calls them the vaudeville of religion, and attributes their origin to the tendency to specialism in religious circles. The variety show is not confined to mental science fads; the religious comedy, the spectacular farce, in which the devil is the star actor and supreme jester, has been in continuous performance in the religious world ever since the Reformation, when the church began to break up into sects.

Ultimate effect can never be greater than first cause—they are equal and in unity; therefore, there is no such thing as continuous evolution without co-ordinating involution, which embraces in least form, all that was previously evolved. The acorn and the oak are equal, because the oak is the acorn evolved. The Creator of the universe is the involved product of all universal activities, planes, and kingdoms.

Koreshanity is the only whole and perfect system of Science. No modern man will ever suggest a problem that it does not solve, nor discover a fact that it does not explain; and moreover, no fragment of truth will ever be found that is not now contained in Koreshan Universology.

The tree whose heart is rotten must soon die; the dispensational tree has born its fruit, and must pass away.

When gold moves the soul of man, it is the sole mover of the world.

Truth discovered is the universe unveiled.

The spirit of truth seeks the truth-seeker.

Editorial Discussions and Miscellany.

THE EDITOR.

Koreshanity Cannot be Revised.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I have been a careful reader of your valuable paper for some time; also your other publications. But there are a number of points on which I want more light—so many that I hardly know where to begin; but I will ask a few questions relative to the Cellular Cosmogony:

(1) You claim that the earth's shell consists of metallic, mineral, and geologic strata; that there are 7 metallic strata, of which gold is the outermost. I would like to ask what you do with platinum, the heaviest of all; also with the other metals, such as aluminum, nickel, etc. It seems to me that your classification needs revision.

(2) You say that the moon is a reflection of the earth's crust—the whole surface. Now that is impossible. How can we see reflected on a single disc, both hemispheres at once? Your lunology also requires revision.

(3) You say that there is nothing on the outside of the earth's shell. Do you mean by nothing that it is vacuum? I can exhaust the air from a bell jar and produce a vacuum. If this is all you mean, by nothing, I see nothing absurd in saying that that vacuum may extend infinitely. If I were to go down and down until I passed through the outermost shell, I would be occupying space that before was vacuum. Where one cell exists, I would expect others. It would be more scientific and logical to hold that outside of our universe there are similar ones, or a larger one encasing ours. We know not; but to affirm that our little universe is the only one in existence; that there is no empty space even, no vacuum, where anything might exist, is to affirm what is both illogical and unscientific. Had you not better revise this?

(4) It was stated in THE FLAMING SWORD sometime ago, that the darkness which prevailed during our Savior's crucifixion was caused by an eclipse of the sun. Now an eclipse of the sun always occurs at new moon. Jesus was crucified at the Passover season, which always occurs about the 15th of the Jewish month Nisan. The moon at that time would be full, as the months were lunar. Therefore, the darkness could not have been caused by an eclipse; it must have been supernatural.—E. B. S., Marquette, Man.

(1) The absolute truth cannot be revised, any more than eternal law can be changed. That which needs revision, however, is the misconception some minds have of Koreshanity before its principles are thoroughly mastered, and before old fallacies are completely eradicated from the mind. Where the mind is filled with the conclusions of the chemist, it is impossible to grasp Koreshan Alchemy. The chemist reduces matter by analysis, to what is called elements; he has discovered no process of going beyond the elements, and he therefore concludes that the 65 or 70 so called elements are the primary states of all matter. The chemist has no conception of the change and progress of atoms. The 7 metallic strata are comprised of the 7 noble or primary metals. There must be just 7 primary metals, and no more.

We decompose a solar ray through a prism, and on the spectrum we see the 7 primary colors. We know the arrangement of colors from violet to red, through repeated experiments, as well as from the law of the co-ordinating sevens in Nature. Suppose some one who had never seen the colors on the spectrum, should ask if this natural arrangement does not need revision, and what is to be done with all the other colors. All other colors are derived from the 7 primary colors; and likewise, all other metals found in the conglomerate geologic matter near the earth's surface, are the product of the 7 noble or primary metals which constitute the very foundations of the universe. In our issue of March 22, we noticed the arrangement of metals which have a greater specific gravity than gold; they lie in thin layers in a belt under the Zodiac in the earth; but they do not constitute a spherical shell, but a zone; the outermost solid shell or sphere is gold.

(2) To say that the whole surface of the earth cannot be pictured by natural processes on the face of the moon, is equal to saying that it is impossible to represent the whole surface of the earth on any basis of geographical projection; however, there are Mercator's, the circular, the oblong, the conical, and the fan projections of the earth's surface, all of which conform to certain geometrical principles employed by geographers. Is not Nature capable of doing at least as much in geographical projection business as the geographer? Mercator's projection is a transposed expansion, through mental and mechanical processes, of the whole surface of the earth; the geographer reflects the earth's surface on paper; but it is not a direct reflection of light, one must admit. The moon is formed by a storage process. The visible moon is but a focal point, involving all that is impressed on a great sphere of force which surrounds the physical heavens, and is in the zenith of every part of the earth; hence, the visible moon is a transposed expansion, by reflection, of all the earth's surface which is pictured on the lunar sphere of force.

The science of the moon is more intricate than any other branch of the Koreshan Cosmogony. It is as complex as the functions of the female in humanity. Before a student gains a full knowledge of the Koreshan Cosmogony, his conceptions have to be revised many times. Let the student revise his conclusions; the Teacher is able to determine when his conclusions are correct. A student who admits that he does not know, should be patient with his inability to immediately reach a proper conception of things; he is not in position to make broad and sweeping suggestions to a teacher of Universology.

(3) Nature so thoroughly abhors a vacuum, that it is impossible for a vacuum to exist. The air is not the only substance that pervades the space it occupies; there are ten thousand other substances which can never be removed from a receiver by means of the air-pump. No physicist has ever produced a vacuum, and never will. There is no vacuum outside of the universe; there is nothing beyond the limit of existence. It is absurd to suppose that one could go where existence is impossible. The universe is something, outside of it there is not something, but nothing. There is only one universe, one great Cause, one Creator. The Creator expresses himself perfectly in the one great cell, and hence cannot express himself at all in any other; he involves that cell and all that is in it in the perfect Man—in his own personal Godhead and Godhood.

If there were a multiplicity of Gods with a multiplicity of cells, they would be so related as to be referable to some one primary source or Cause, and the systems they might create would all have to be evolved from one; and therefore would ultimately be involved in the one. The word universe implies only one great system of existence, which turns in itself. If there were two systems of existence, neither would be the universe; neither would be perfect nor complete, and hence could not be eternal. It is logical and scientific to take the word universe according to its meaning; it is illogical and unscientific to speculate without a proven premise. Minds yet imbued with many Copernican fallacies may need to roam a little longer in infinity; but the final rest-point, the equipose of mind, is in the true Koreshan conclusions which we promulgate.

(4) If one assumes that the moon is the direct cause of a solar eclipse, then of course, an eclipse of the sun would not be possible when the moon is full. Jesus was crucified when the moon was full, and in opposition to the sun; but the sun was darkened, its light cut off; and eclipse means to cut off. Hence, the phenomenon attending the crucifixion of Jesus was an eclipse in the true sense of the term. It so happens, however, that the Copernican explanation of a solar eclipse is not correct; but it is true that ordinary eclipses of the sun occur when the moon is new, and when the lunar node is within three degrees of the sun's place on the ecliptic.

The eclipse which occurred at the time of Jesus' crucifixion was a natural phenomenon; it was not supernatural, but it was extraordinary, having for its remote cause an extraordinary cause in the human world, and for its direct cause an extraordinary eclipsor; it belonged to an order of eclipses which recur at least once in every great cycle of 24,000 years. It was caused by a reflex in the heavens, of a large dark disc of mercury in the earth. The dark reflex sustained the same relation to the sun at that time, that Judas sustained to Jesus. The Messiah was "cut off" (eclipsed) as was prophesied; and the relation between the physical and anthropotic worlds is so complete, that at the very time the Messiah was cut off there was a corresponding extraordinary cutting-off or eclipse of the sun—the duration of which was three hours. Astronomers have never been able to explain this extraordinary eclipse; and Christians must learn that to say a thing is produced by supernatural causes, is no explanation at all.

A Clergyman's Questions Answered.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I would be glad to learn the position you hold with reference (1) to the marriage question, sexual indulgence, and divorce; (2) with reference to the inspiration of the Bible, and (3) to baptism. (4) I would like to know if you have established a colony in good working order; also what one must do to become a member. Any literature or information that you may supply to me, bearing on these subjects, will be most thankfully received.—REV. C. J. B., Ashaway, R. I.

(1) The position taken by Koreshans regarding marriage, is that marriage as it obtains throughout the world today, is nothing more than legalized prostitution, in which the energies of life are wasted in sensual gratification. In the common marriage bonds, lust instead of love exists, and the contracting parties are under the curse. Notwithstanding the pretensions of the church, the millions of modern marriages have no divine sanction. Sexual relations in marriage have but one legitimate purpose, and that is the production of offspring; anything beyond this is in violation of physiological law, for which the masses of mankind today suffer all forms of disease.

Koreshanity has not come to abolish marriage, but to purify it; we have no sympathy with any form of free-lovism. Sensuality cannot be destroyed by the abolition of the present marriage bonds, nor by repealing the laws which legalize the ties. Neither would it help matters any under present conditions, to abolish divorce laws. If two incompatibles discover their mistake they should separate; and divorce should be granted for the same reason that Moses permitted divorce—that if possible the parties to the contract may be enabled to continue the search for harmony, even in sensualism. However impure may be the present marriage relation it is better, with its restrictions, than promiscuous consortism.

Reform in society must come from an entirely different source than that expected by the various faddists and ignorant advocates of unnatural and unwholesome ideas concerning sex relations. Koreshanity alone holds the key to the situation; it will teach the world the proper use of the functions of procreation, and abolish the evils which curse the human family. The Science of Astro-anthroposophy will not only determine what characters are adapted for marital relations, but also make it possible to predetermine the character and sex of offspring. The time will come when there will be no divorce, nor the necessity for any; for under the application of scientific law there will be no mistakes in the first steps toward the married state.

Koreshanity advocates celibacy for those who desire to attain to immortality. Celibacy is the true stepping-stone to the highest form of marriage known to man—the marriage of God and man. This is the kind of marriage that existed "in the beginning," for the original, perfect man was male and female in one form. Immortality is impossible for those who cannot break the common mortal ties and rise above their perverted loves. It is in the order of scientific evolution and progress, that no life can ascend from one plane to a higher as long as it is propagated on the lower plane. The central orders of Koreshanity are celibate and communistic; more external orders are marital. The society and government of Koreshanity have places for minds in all stages of progress; and because it is a Universology it will ultimately prevail universally.

(2) The Bible is a compilation of books inspired from the mind of Deity; these books were written by men, in the language of universal symbolism, and their correct interpretation is possible only through a knowledge of the meaning of the symbols employed. The Bible is not the Word of God—it is the best written expression of the Word, which is God, and which was made flesh and dwelt among men. The astronomy, alchemy, and ethnology of the Bible are scientifically correct, in agreement with the Science of Koreshanity, but in direct opposition to all so called sciences of the world today. God Almighty was in the men who wrote the Bible; and it requires the same mind to interpret what the divine Mind has expressed. The writers of the Bible were inspired in much the same way that artists and poets are inspired; but the mental spheres from which they derived their impulses were divine.

(3) The primary baptism of the Christian church was the outpouring of the life and mentality of Jesus the Christ. Jesus was translated or theocrasised after his coming forth from the tomb of Joseph; He entered his Apostles first; thence into the 120; thence into 3,000 on the day of Pentecost, and so on, until the whole Spirit (the Holy Spirit) was transmitted and disseminated during the first century. The Holy Spirit was a direct result of the burning of the body of Jesus; and it was with this Spirit that the Apostles were commanded to baptize believers, and they did so by impartation of mental substance, while in the act of performing the great symbol of that period—baptism in water. This baptism was neither sprinkling, nor pouring, nor immersion of the body in water; it was simply the immersion of the feet. The baptizer and the baptized waded into the stream until the feet were covered, and then the Apostle baptized the candidate with the Holy Spirit. That symbol accompanied the baptism of nineteen hundred years ago; it has no application today. The symbols and rites of the new Church established by Koreshanity will differ as much from those of primitive Christianity, as the symbols and rites of the early church differed from those of pure Judaism.

(4) Koreshanity has two colonies in operation—one in Chicago, and one at Estero, Florida. The Koreshan body in Chicago at present consists of two Homes; its members are engaged in various industrial pursuits, and their relations are communistic and co-operative. The Koreshan communities are not experiments; the central organization in Chicago has been in existence for a period of over ten years, and it has progressed steadily from the first.

Any person of good morals can become a member of the investigative Court of the Society Arch-Triumphant of the Koreshan Unity, through application to the Secretary, VIRGINIA H. ANDREWS, 6310 Harvard avenue, Chicago. If, after investigation, the doctrines of Koreshanity are accepted, steps may be taken to enter its other orders; the Institutions of Koreshanity cannot be entered except through the Society. The central bond of Koreshanity is religious; and the highest privileges come from acceptance of its principles, and obedience to the scientific laws which it reveals.

Lecture by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanity will deliver a Lecture on Koreshan Universology, Sunday, 3:30 p. m., April 14, 1901, at Koreshan Hall, 4th floor, 315-19 Englewood ave., Chicago.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in advanced thought.

Koreshan Astronomy in England.

A Liverpool Student of Koreshanity on Cosmogony Before a Scientific Society.

What is Cellular Cosmogony? It refers to a new theory in astronomy which is, perhaps, not widely known here, except to those who are deeply interested in modern scientific discoveries with regard to the earth and the planets. But the members of the Bootle Eclectic Society have provided an opportunity for the public to become better acquainted with the subject; and under the auspices of the society a lecture was delivered on Friday evening at the Stanley Hall, by Mr. W. H. Chapman, which was an able and comprehensive treatise on this new scientific discovery of DR. CYRUS R. TEED, of Chicago, and which is styled "The Cellular Cosmogony, or Koreshan Astronomy." Mr. G. H. Bibbings, president of the society, occupied the chair, and briefly opened the proceedings.

The lecturer, in introducing his subject, said it was unique in this country, being unknown except to a few. He had studied it for about three years, but before proceeding with his address he wished to state that he merely explained the theory; he did not say he accepted it, nor did he know that the popular theory as to the earth's formation was true. He had been brought up to accept the statement that the earth was convex; but some years ago his attention was called to the hollow theory, which he would explain. Mr. Chapman then read the following statement which appeared in THE FLAMING SWORD, published in Chicago, and as it so concisely explains the leading features of DR. TEED's discovery, we give it in full from the publication:

"The earth is a stationary concave cell about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, suns, moons, planets, and stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical universe in existence. It is an alchemico-organic structure, a gigantic electro-magnetic battery, the central sun being the positive pole, and the earth the negative elements of the cell. The universe involves the laws and functions of its own perpetuity, and is eternal. All life is cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the earth. Koreshan Cosmogony comports with all facts of astronomical, geographical, geological, and alchemical research, and international Geodetic survey, experimentation, and navigation. It interprets all ancient legends, mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all reason and science, the premise of the true theology, theocracy, and social economy."

By means of diagrams, the lecturer then proceeded to explain the earth's crust, which was stated to be 100 miles in thickness, consisting of the geologic strata, the mineral strata, and the metallic strata. It is not an easy matter to convey a correct impression in a necessarily brief resume of the subject, and without the aid of diagrams, of the physical character of this presumed concave sphere; but, among other drawings and illustrations, the lecturer produced for inspection a sketch of this great cosmic shell divided into hemispheres and giving a general view of the world we inhabit, a brief description of which will enable anyone to form some idea of the new theory. Imagine a huge shell shaped something like a cocoanut; the white kernel of the nut clinging to the outer shell representing the earth, with its vast continents and oceans, and in the hollow of the nut are the heavens.

The idea that the surface of the earth upon which we live is concave, constitutes the fundamental premise of a new system of science altogether opposed to the teaching of astronomers, which, as children, we have been taught to believe, namely, that the earth, shaped as an orange, revolves round the sun, whilst the inhabitants exist on its surface, and not on the inner side of its crust. The planets, said Mr. Chapman, are merely discs of light, and the sun and earth combined produce myriads of lights or stars.

Mr. Chapman subsequently dealt with some of the reasons given in support of the theory that we live on the surface of the globe, mentioning the case of the receding ship. He said the question of what caused the hull of the ship to disappear first was important. It had to do with the laws of optics, and he explained that the sight at long distances converged to the center, and the masts of a ship being so much higher than the hull out of water, they are seen after it is lost to the naked eye, but with the use of a strong telescope the hull again comes in sight.

An interesting discussion followed the delivery of the lecture, which was initiated by a few remarks upon the subject of Mr. Chapman's able discourse by the chairman. Mr. Hammond, of the National S.S., followed; and in the course of his criticism asked how the Koreshan astronomers knew that the earth was the only sphere in the universe, because he supposed Mr. Chapman would not deny that there was an outside to the world's crust. Referring to the ship question, the speaker said if anyone having lost sight of the hull went to the summit of a hill he would find that it would re-appear in view, a fact which seemed to weaken the lecturer's argument.

The discussion was continued by Mr. Giles. Mr. Bennett, Mr. Stone, Mr. McMillen, and other gentlemen, and Mr. Chapman having replied, an interesting and educational meeting was brought to a close by a cordial vote of thanks being passed to the lecturer for providing so pleasant an evening.—Booth Times, Liverpool, Feb. 9, 1901.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

The Outcasts: A Tale of the Northwest.—The publishers of the Saturday Evening Post announces early publication in that weekly, of a stirring serial by W. A. Frazer, author of Mooswa and Others, entitled The Outcasts. Mr. Frazer has adopted a somewhat strange idea in literature—his heroes are animals; and the new story is something of the same general character as the Mooswa. The Outcasts are an old Buffalo and a wolf-dog, and the greater part of the story is about their strange comradeship; on the whole the story is very entertaining.

The Interpreter.—Koreshans should obtain copies of the April number; the serial, The Angel of Reincarnation, is proving interesting; two chapters of the April number refer to KORESH and his work. We think the plan of the story is quite good and instructive. The Interpreter has been enlarged to 24 pages, and the subscription is still free. Copies can be obtained by addressing Major Ogden Whitlock, Editor, 30 Granite Building, Denver, Colo.

The Mind.—The April Mind contains excellent contributions from a number of prominent new-thought writers; among them is The Training of Thought as a Life Force, by Rev. R. Heber Newton. Mental Influences is a suggestive article by the Editor. Another good article is What is Truth? and still another, Are We Free? 20 cents per copy. Alliance Publishing Co., Life Building, New York.

The Interpreter.—This is a publication distinct from the Denver Interpreter; it is edited by Rev. George Chainey, and is devoted to Chainey's occult ideas of interpretation of the Bible; his idea is that the progressive may see living visions of the spiritual world without loss of consciousness of the objective world. 40 pages, monthly; $1.00 per year. 1021 Masonic Temple, Chicago.

The Psychic Digest.—Subtitle is Occult Review of Reviews. Begins third volume with colored covers; devoted to psychological subjects, and gathers its matter from over a hundred publications. Reference is made in the April number to Koreshanism as a religious system; also to the new designs appearing on THE FLAMING SWORD.—$1.00 per year; 10 cents per copy. Columbus, O.

Twentieth Century Wraps.

These novel Wraps are becoming very popular, and the demand for them still continues. They are made of Shetland flax, hand-crocheted by our own people, and are light, airy, and beautiful.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

Uncovers the Mystery of Ages.

THE LIBRARY of the Koreshan System contains brief expositions of the Universology of KORESH, in its unique interpretation of the Laws, Phenomena, Forms, and Relations of Being and Existence, and in the scientific revelation of the character of God and Man and their relations. This Unique Literature is specially adapted to meet the demands of the truth-seeker and to satisfy the commendable curiosity of the modern mind.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Koreshanity's Work of World-Redemption.

A Powerful Religio-Scientific System that Progresses in the Face of the Persecution of its Enemies; the Great Physician and Maker of Destiny.

THE KORESHAN UNITY has passed the stage of what the world might call its phase of experiment. So far as our own knowledge is concerned, there has been no time of empiricism. From the first of our effort we have known the final results of our work. The Koreshan Unity—including its Orders—is of God. It is the outcome of the Christian dispensation, as surely as the Christian dispensation was the outcome of the Jewish age. We have met the opposition of the modern system of adultery, called the Christian religion, in its persecutions; we have met the opposition of the commercial world, in its infernal competitiveness; we have had the experience of working in conflict with the conventionalisms of the social world, and have been victorious. Koreshanity is flourishing; its field of operation is enlarging; its literature is being disseminated throughout the world, to almost every people under the sun. Its enemies are futile in their attempts to destroy us, or to defeat the purpose or injure the influence of Koreshanity.

We have been through the various phases of persecution from the newspaper world. The great dailies have maligned, and ridiculed, and snubbed us; they have agreed to ignore us, and have lied enough about us to consign them to the tortures of the ordinary orthodox hades, founded on the Spanish Inquisition; but we still flourish in the great city of Chicago, which, according to the judgment of the party of great moral ideas,—a party which claims an honest majority of the population of this city of two millions of people,—is the wickedest city in the world. According to the leaders of the republican party, as set forth by its newspaper representatives, Chicago is the focal point of hell. We do not know, from our own experience, that these papers do not tell the truth. If what the republican papers say of the democrats, and what the democratic papers say of the republicans be true, we ought to do some work right here in Chicago;—and the point of reformation needed, is in the development of an improved moral atmosphere with the rank and file of the newspaper fraternity.

There is no power in earth to retard the progress, or to divert the course of the pure river of water of life which flows from the fountain-head of the Koreshan Science. One of the principal functions of the organic Unity of the Koreshan System, is to heal the body. We wish it to be distinctly understood, however, that the healing which the Koreshan System purposes, is not merely the ordinary restoration of the mortal structure to the common physiological state. Mortality is the common lot of the human race; men die because they are in a state of ignorance of the laws of life. The processes of healing by faith-cure, by what is called christian science, or mental science, are the result of the same force, merely a suggestion. We do not deny the power of mind over mind, or of mind over matter; we do deny, however, that the cures performed by these methods are by the power of the Christ. We maintain also, that the function of the Christ in this age of the world, is not to perform the acts of nineteen hundred years ago. "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father." The things that were to be done in part, were the things which the Apostles did after the Lord's departure; and the greater works are the things now to be done.

The Flaming Sword.

The Lord healed the sick and restored them to their physiological state in mortality, because they were only ripe enough to receive what he then bestowed upon them. He himself had attained a higher plane of being; he was the immortal man, the only one who had attained that condition in his day. His power over the afflicted was preparatory to the work in hand at the end of the dispensation. Now is the time for the "greater works." What is that performance of use to men? It is, primarily, to heal the mortal body by changing the mortal to the immortal condition. This corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality. Any man who makes the statement, after reading—or as he may say, after studying—our literature, that Koresh confesses that he cannot heal the sick, either willfully lies, or shows his ignorance of the teachings of Koreshanity.

The first function of the Science of Koreshanity is to restore the race from its mortal to its immortal state. We are showing to the world that the only process of accomplishing this purpose, is to teach the world how to keep the commandments. No statement, whether found in the Bible or elsewhere, is more absolutely true than the following: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." Eccles. xii: 13. This is in corroboration of the doctrines of the Lord Jesus and his Apostles. "Blessed are they that DO his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Koreshanity contends that there is no life, nor can there be until that life is brought to men through the office of the High Priest of the conjunctive order, the Priesthood that conjoins man with God. KORESH will heal the world. It will be done through the applied science of life—the science which will transform the mortal to the immortal man.

The firstfruit of the resurrection is the manifestation of the Sons of God. The Great Physician of both soul and body will perform something more than an attempt to ape the work of 1900 years ago. The work of Koreshanity will not counterfeit the work of the Christ of the Christian dispensation. This is another age; its works will be of another character. Those systems of pretended Christianity ("christian science") and of mental science, founded in atheism, are not the firstfruits of the age. They are merely reflexes of the true system of immortality to come in the flesh. Koreshanity will restore the race to its immortal state, not by christian science, nor by mental science, nor through Dowie's processes of pretended faith-cure, but by the enforcement of the laws of life.

Immortal men in the flesh, right here in this world, will constitute the fruit of the age. To bring immortality into the world from the mortal humanity, is not the only purpose of Koreshanity. The field of Koreshian operations is the universe; the basis of that field being the earth itself. The equitable adjustment of all human conditions, as dependent upon the perfection of the firstfruits of the age, is the further function of Koreshanity, which alone holds the key to the establishment of organic order. The knowledge of the laws of the structure and functions of the alchemico-organic (physical) universe, gives to Koreshanity the power of laying the foundations of the Temple of God in humanity, and of the emplacement of its superstructure. "The needed reform" in society can only come through another baptism, ten thousandfold greater than the one that marked the inauguration of the Piscatorial dispensation. God will baptize the world anew; he will perform this through his appointed Messenger, the Messenger of the Covenant, whose office it is to lay the foundation of the Temple and to build it.

If men would read and study the Koreshian literature with profit, they must get their eyes and ears open. They cannot read blindly, and profit by the effort. Koreshanity is the profoundest thing in the world to-day. It holds the keys to the solution of the problems of life; it is God appointed, and will effectually perform the service for which it is created, and the work whereunto it is sent.

The new age will be inaugurated by a baptism of fire (divine love), through which will be insured man's transformation from the present sensual and animal life to one of unselfishness, which must characterize those who comprise the membership of the new and divine Order.

Love of the neighbor, applied to the economics of government, must inevitably reduce the form of government to a commonwealth, or a community of interests.

By the science of any given department of active life, we mean the knowledge of the principles and laws inherent in, and governing the domain in question, Imperial Edict of the Pre-Eminent.

Remarkable Document Read by Victoria Gratia, Pre-Eminent of the Koreshan Unity, at the Semi-Annual Festival of the Koreshans, April 10, 1901.

WE ARE CELEBRATING our semi-annual Festival. While the day is marked as the anniversary of the birth of your authorized Sovereign, its purpose as a day of festivity is to contribute to the pleasures of her people. It is too early in the history and development of orders in our body, to make of this day all that it is intended to enact as a day of special glorification. It is one of the times set apart in which appointments and promotions are to be made, and, if necessary, when members may be humiliated, and unworthy officials degraded. It is to be hoped, however, that our people are so imbued with the importance of our relations to the humanity we are here to redeem, that no one will be so unfortunate as to incur the displeasure of the high functions of our Institutions, and to compel the enforcement of the principles of excommunication from the exercise of an office to which any has been appointed and elected.

It is ordained as a special function of today's exercises, that a new Order be instituted; an Order in which certain qualifications for advancement in degrees of the various Orders may be facilitated. You know that our body is composed of distinctive Orders, as have already been defined in our Constitution, and with which you are somewhat familiar. Upon a thorough organization of the Koreshan System, every Order will have its degrees specifically defined, indicating practical stages of progress in the attainment of the laws and operations of life. Our work must be a practical one; so distinctively practical as to distinguish us from all other bodies of people. We are to be "a peculiar people." Nothing could so constitute us "a peculiar people," as that we are found to carry out in practical application the theories of life which we have enunciated, and to which we subscribe.

We embrace this occasion to execute the creation of an Order into which applicants may be admitted who have reached the point wherein they renounce certain ties which have heretofore enslaved them, and to which they avow their purpose not to be further enthralled. The power of our Institutions must reside in the application of our laws. The classification now in consideration, will include such as will subscribe to certain conditions. This endorsement must be without reserve, and with a full regard to all its consequences. It will be denominated, The Order of the Golden Bowl. It will be held in special reverence, composed of males and females endowed with rights, privileges, and considerations beyond those of the ordinary members of the body. It is from this fountain of Living Oil that the great Master must imbibe, that he may possess the potential prerequisites for the flame of conflagration that is to rejuvenate the race.

The entrance to this Order shall be governed by two Guards, whose office shall be to record the career of any who shall have entered the Court of Effort—the entrance Court to this Order. The construction of the Temple of the Living God is a work assigned to the Koreshan System of science, and in order to make it a fit place for the habitation of Deity, its construction must comprise the work of the highest art. God cannot dwell in an impure temple; and before he can take up his abode with and in men, his House must be purified for the occasion. Hence, under the Master's direction, we are to prepare for Him his glorious tenement. In many respects, the building of the House of God is like Masonry. Modern Masonry is the condition into which the archaic Masonry had its decline. Modern Masonry is not merely the result of the establishment of an order in connection with the building of Solomon's temple, but a declension of the Order of Melchizedek into the mere form of a human brotherhood. Masonry is from everlasting to everlasting. The genuine Masonry of today can only be found in the Universology of Koreshanity. Its office is the construction of the House and Habitation of Deity.

It is written, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." It is important, then, to attain the righteousness of Deity. There can be no more fitting time than this, our semi-annual Festival, to renew our pledges for a greater effort to apply our principles to practical life.

Any person may enter the Court of Effort who has acknowledged the true office of the Messenger of the Covenant, and is free from the habit and practice of profanity, the use of tobacco in any form, the use of beer, wine, and all other intoxicants as beverages. No person can enter the Court of Effort, who is not imbued with the spirit of religion as defined by Koreshanity. After a mature deliberation, and a decision founded upon such deliberation, any one may take the vow of this Court. The vow is: "I am prepared to accept the conditions which this step to the Court of Effort imposes, and hereby express my determination to present myself as a candidate for such honor. Upon my honor, and having in mind the great importance of the step I am to take, I offer myself, unworthy."

The first step in the Court of Effort is the relinquishment of personal liberty. There can be no liberty which is not the liberty of the entire body. We cannot cooperate as a Unity, until unity is established. Hence the necessity for the unit of liberty pervading the organic function of the body as a whole. It will be remembered that the Court of Effort is but one step toward the Order of the Golden Bowl. It is not the Order, but a Court of the Order. In this Court there can be no personal ownership of the funds of the Community. Every person having left the world and entered the Community, belongs—with all he or she may possess, wholly and exclusively to the Unity. Everything privately possessed is the property of the whole, not the property of the individual. This does not imply that there may not be individual and exclusive use of all the things of individual and personal necessity, such as wearing apparel, rooms, furniture, etc. These may be provided first as to necessity, second as to comfort, and then as to luxury when as a body we have attained affluence.

Every department of the educational and industrial activities of the Unity shall have an Official Board for the regulation of furloughs and leave-of-absence from the regular duties of the member. Every leave-of-absence shall come from the request of the member to the Superintendent of the department, who shall decide according to the necessities of the occasion and to the merits of the request. When the request is granted, it shall be signed by the Superintendent, when it shall pass to the next in authority for endorsement, then in an orderly way to the head of the department. By this is meant, through every successive subordinate. If the Superintendent rejects the request, an appeal may be had to a body of three members of the department, who shall have been previously appointed and assigned to this duty. This shall include the Superintendent, and two of the Board shall decide the case. In the absence of the Superintendent, any one of the three can grant the permit of the applicant for absence. In order to regulate the absence of official members of the body, it shall be provided that each official member shall be subordinate to a number of officials in a Board of officials, any member of which may endorse a request of any member of the Board to be absent otherwise than on the regular duties of the office.

It is not the purpose to make of this Court of entrance so much an object of restraint from essential freedom, as to make the individual a specially recognized part of the body as a whole. The Order of the Golden Bowl provides a number of sacrifices, among which is the sacrifice of the family love and claim. No one can enter this Order without the sacrifice of all the family ties. No person can enter the Order of the Golden Bowl except through this Court.

We shall, from this day, reorganize the Concilium. From this reorganization there shall be a business Board appointed, which shall meet every day at a time specified by this Board, to discuss the business propositions of the hour, the conditions of the business, and plans of operation. This business Board shall include the Pre-Eminent of the Koreshan Unity, though she shall not be obligated to be present except at her own option. The Pre-Eminent of the Koreshan Unity shall not be the President of this Board.

We are a communistic and coöperative body. The ego is the least part of this Institution; and with a well-defined conception of communism, the use of the I will be excluded, where relation is had to the uses of the body. We own our property in common. We, not I, perform the offices of the Community. It is our Institution, not mine, and we will conduct ourselves accordingly. Your Pre-Eminent will, at an early date, call a special meeting for the purpose of enacting the functions herein set forth.

You have been educated into the laws of organic unity, and can at least appreciate somewhat the necessity for military or disciplinary regulation. In our Order, we have called this the Disciplinary System. It is not merely the regulation of this present little group, but a preparation for the coming influx which cannot be managed but by strict attention to the details of discipline.

It is a well-understood law of our Unity, that the property of the Unity, whatsoever we may possess, does not belong to the individual, but to the whole; therefore no person has the right to say, when going out of the Community, what things or substance previously owned shall be withdrawn from the organization. For this reason it shall be understood, that all persons bringing tools or instruments into the Unity, loses individual and personal ownership of such property. All mechanics while in the Institution may have the care and use of tools, instruments, and paraphernalia belonging to the department of their uses; they do not personally own anything. A person cannot belong to the Unity who does not subscribe to this provision of the Order. It will, therefore, become necessary to appoint a Board to look after departing members, so that hereafter no person can leave the Institution with property that does not belong to him, or her, as the case may be. Such inspection cannot harm the innocent, and the guilty should be made to suffer the penalty of dishonesty. These things may seem of minor importance, but when we consider that there is to be an organic Imperialism before the final kingdom is established, the reason will be obvious for the enforcement of these details.

There can be no question of the greatness of Koreshanity, and the power it will exert throughout the world. There is no doubt of its final and sure success. It will be financially successful long before the Master's personal work is completed; therefore, let our body not only live in the conviction of our great success on commercial lines, but devote our energies to the accomplishment of that achievement. The sacrifices made, the privations endured, and the hardships to which we have subjected ourselves for the Kingdom's sake, will not go unrewarded.

We know that the end is here; that Koreshanity is the fruit of the dispensation; and that for which we strive will meet its fruition in the perfect fulness of time, which we will hasten to its conclusion. God, in whom we trust, speed the hour of our triumph, the day of our glorification, and the establishment of his Kingdom! He will speedily show to the world the glory of his reconstructed Temple. May we become perfect in our Unity, that the world may pass through its chaos into the uses of its cosmos.

We have entered together, for weal or woe, for joy or sorrow, upon the work of the age-ending consummation. Koreshanity fulfils the expectation of the ages. The inauguration of our bond of fellowship is the creation of that Brotherhood of which the world has dreamed, but which can only mature its fulfilment in the new birth, the resurrection of the dead. There is no hope of fraternal evolution but in the rejuvenation of the soul itself. Men may prate of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and cry peace, peace, when war is in the heart; but there can be no fellowship of love in the mass until the vital heart is made alive with the glow of desire for the Glory of God and the uses of men, from the very Fountain of Life itself. Man will walk uprightly when he loves the light. He cannot walk justly, conscientiously, only as the spirit of illumination through the rational faculties guides his footsteps; hence the necessity for the genuine Light of Science, the Guiding Star which directs our pathway to the field of our glorification. We rejoice in that together we have endured hardships, privations, and fellowships. We rejoice that we have been subject to persecutions, and that these persecutions have helped to cement the bond of unity and fellowship which actuates our body, and which is a guarantee of its everlasting perpetuity. We have suffered as one; we will triumph and rejoice together.

The Functions of the Anthropostic Seed and Sun.

Essential Unity of the Divine Ego in Humanity; Interdependence of God and Man; the Cellular Cosmogony; the Great Atonement and the Elixir of Life.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

MAN, THE SUPREME increate being of the universe, is primarily and essentially one, the unique, perfect expression of the supreme Ego. This One, the universe incubated, is the involution of universal being, in whom all fulness dwells, the biune Ego—Father-Mother of all being. This Unit unfolds during a given cycle for the reproduction of his kind from the implantation of himself. In this evolutionary process, this Unit of being precipitates—as does all developing seed—elements which will in time become the basis or soil from which to develop by later implantations of seed, future reproductions of kind with which to unify or identify himself, thus perpetuating his eternal life. These precipitations from the Man of God, because precipitated from God's Manhood, are called men in the hells where they dwell, by virtue of being the basis, the quality of soil from which divine or true manhood is re-created.

The perfect fruition of universal creative function, man—the image and likeness of Deity, is an unknown product at the present time. At the termination of the Jewish era and of the cycle of Mazzaroth, the God-Man, the High Priest and Seed of his order, was manifest. He was planted in prepared soil—men from beneath, denominated by Jehovah, the children of the devil. All who constituted receptive soil at the beginning of our era, the time of planting, are now—at the end of the age, the time of harvesting—in anticipation of being quickened to newness of life, and “caught up” or highly exalted, to be born from above as reproductions of that planting. It requires all the absorbing energies from above, the energies of the sun, wind, and rain, to ripen the harvests which the earth puts forth from beneath. Without that focalization of the energies of each domain called its sun, or source of being, all the potencies of the earth beneath would remain forever latent.

A brief study of the science of the laws of the universe, as revealed by the cosmogony of the physical universe, would satisfy any rational mind of the truth of the interdependence of all things, not excepting God and man. God, the focalization of all ascending mental energies, is related to all things under (beneath) him, as the primary creative spirit of their Creator and preserver—his holy Seed. God holds the same relation to the world of men, in the intellectual and affectional domain of existence, as does the physical sun to the world of matter.

Only that quality of being can be legitimately called Man, which has attained dominion—through obedience—to the laws of divine being, over all the forces generated by the universal substance. The legitimate purpose of universal existence is to honor and glorify Man, its Creator and preserver—the embodied fulness of the Godhead. No being is now manifest who has attained to this completeness.

A great cloud of witnesses, the Church Militant and the Church Triumphant, attest the records of prophets and Apostles, which reveal the Man, Christ Jesus, as the fulfilment of the law of divine being. In Him creative potency attained its destiny of perfect self-expression. This Man therefore has been highly exalted and given a name above every name—the name Jehovah Jesus. This apex of Deity, in unity with the apex of humanity, is the at-one-ment. In Him, the unity of God and man, we see perfect spirit becoming perfect matter, and perfect matter being transmuted to the energies of perfect mind. He was the manifestation of the applied science of divine being, a revelation of absolute equity, of love fulfilling the law.

The present evil world practically ignores the right of universal dominion, attained to by the Lord Jesus. Hydra-headed evils dominate every sphere of human activity. The science of the law and the love of its Godly origin are banished from the minds of men, and their thoughts on all lines are almost universally antichristian. Antichristian humanity is illegitimately called men, and legitimately called children of the devil. Being mortal—body, soul, and spirit, they are devils in hades. In the dominions of Pluto, they form a plutocracy. In the darkness of their ignorance, they make gods of the treasures of the under world, corruptible riches which serve only to induce their own moral corruption, produce their physical rottenness, and reduce them to chaos, and make truth an occult mystery.

Out of this formless world of unorganized masses, ascend the energies which awaken the God in man. In one man, the Day Star of Hope, he arises. As a Ser, he perceives that the harvest of the Vine of the earth is ripe, and becomes its husbandman, the treader of the wine-press, making of the blood of grapes the pure river of the water of life, the Elixir with power to transform mortality to immortality, and corruptibility to incorruption. This Elixir is the restorer of the lost divine manhood—God's image and likeness. It is the science of the laws of the being of the only begotten Son of God, the Unit of universal being, an increate, integral Man.

Jesus the Messiah manifested to mortals the immortality of Godliness, displaying its dominion over all the forces of life and death. He taught mortals the hitherto "occult mysteries," "the secret doctrine," the doctrine of intelligently controlling all the secreted or hidden forces of his being, and so polarizing them in his Deific mind that the light of truth directed all his steps in obedience to the law of love. This obedience destroyed the sting of death, and gave to Life the victory.

Mortality has yielded its soil to the energies of this supremely divine immortal life, for the cycle of its reproduction; from it has been brought forth the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, and the Tree of Life. All who would become as Gods, knowing good and evil, must appropriate the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. From those who do appropriate it, will men be raised up in the form of godliness, into whom the Gods will breathe the breath of their lives, making of them their image and likeness.

The mortal bipeds called by mortals, men and women, are but the graves of men. They are constituents of the wilderness of sin, in which the Gods perpetuate that knowledge of good and evil which gives them their discriminating control of all things according to their pleasure. When Canaan is reached—the body of their resurrection in divine image and likeness—the wilderness state becomes as a forgotten shade in which they rested from their work; for the God-Men sleep, and while they sleep the devil works.

We who had begotten in us the living hope by the Spirit of the Lord Jesus—the living hope that we should know him and the power of his resurrection, hear the rattling "in the valley of dry bones," and know that the whole house of Israel is awakened and assembling in Mt. Zion, to sing again the song of Moses and the Lamb. The Horse and his Rider will be cast into the sea of multitudes, peoples, nations, and tongues. The sea will give up its dead; the dead in Christ will rise first, and the dead in trespasses and sins will be as ashes under their saintly feet. The Gods will walk in earth with men, as their image and likeness, and the whole creation will rejoice under the touch of their life-giving radiations.

The Crime of Usurpation of Power.

A Review of European History; the Claim of Absolute Monarchs to Divine Right to Rule; the Holy Alliance and its Work; the Purpose of Corrupt Governments.

PROP. C. F. L'AMOREAUX, A. M., PH. D.

THE FOLLOWING UTTERANCES of the so called Holy Alliance, formed in 1815, between the emperors of Russia and Austria, and the king of Prussia, are taken from Daniel Webster's great speech on the Greek Revolution. "In 1821, they say 'that useful and necessary changes in legislation and administration ought only to emanate from the free will and intelligent conviction of those whom God has rendered responsible for power. * * * That the powers had an undoubted right to take a hostile attitude in regard to those states in which the overthrow of the governments may operate as an example.'"

We quote the following from a conversation of the Russian emperor, reported by M. de Chateaubriand, in a speech in the French chamber of deputies: "It was for me first to show myself convinced of the principles upon which I founded the Alliance; an occasion offered itself in Greece. Nothing certainly could occur more for my interests, for the interests of my people; nothing more acceptable to my country than a religious war in Turkey. But I have thought I perceived in the troubles in the Morca the signs of revolution, and have held back."

The "unspeakable Turk" has camped for six centuries in the heart of the eastern hemisphere, waging war much of the time with the surrounding nations, robbing and plundering, and often slaughtering by wholesale the unfortunate peoples who fall under his ruthless sway. Having attained in the meantime the status of an established government, and become one of those whom, according to this Holy Alliance, "God has made responsible for power," and using that supposedly God-given power, not to furnish "useful and necessary changes of legislation and administration," but to plunder and destroy his hapless subjects, his fellow God-appointed guardians of the human race fold their arms and serenely look on, lest forsooth—if they should interfere to stop the robbery, and bloodshed, and murder—this colossal power of lust, and luxury, and plunder, and murder, miscalled a regular government, should be overturned, and an example furnished that might render their own hold on power over their fellow men less secure.

If God holds these men responsible for power, he must have given it to them. What evidence do such holders of absolute power give to satisfy the world that it was a God of justice who bestowed upon them the power they thus fail to use for the good of their fellow men? When the blood of the first murdered victim fell to the ground, and God called Cain to account for it, he began excusing himself on the plea that he was not his brother's keeper; but these professed, God-appointed keepers (real robbers and murderers of their hapless fellows) imagine that they are guiltless since, if they used their power, which they insist is God-given, to save and prevent murder, it would be endangered.

When these absolute monarchs (would-be guardians of the human race, from whom only—self-prompted—should come all the blessings men need) find a poor people struggling to maintain their liberties, whose overthrow is not likely to furnish an example dangerous to absolute government, these God-appointed dispensers of power do not hesitate to put forth their greedy hands to overthrow established governments and divide the spoil among themselves, as in the cases of Poland and Finland, the liberties of the latter of which Russia is now taking away, thus reducing its unfortunate citizens to the dead level of the poverty of Russian peasants. These peasants are sometimes, especially in the case of short crops, so mercilessly robbed by Russian tax-gatherers that their very seed grain is taken from them; and as a result, thousands starve to death, simply that these God-appointed rulers of men may carry on destructive wars, live in nameless luxury, and when they die be buried in golden coffins—as in the case of the last heir apparent to the Russian crown.

Where the evidence exists that God appoints these absolute, world robbers as agents for dispensing his bounty to men, it would be interesting to know. It is not found in any record He has given to the world. In the only government He ever established for men, they were not included. It was only when God's people rebelled against his government and would not have it, that he suffered them to become subject to kings, for their correction, warning them in advance of the robbery of their substance, and the personal abuse and oppression to which their desired kings would subject them.

The wise man says: "For the transgression of a land many are the princes thereof." How many "useful and necessary changes in legislation and administration" could be expected "to emanate from the free will and intelligent conviction" of that vast number of sovereigns of the Stewart type of Charles the second of England, who care for nothing except to get money enough out of their oppressed subjects to gratify their own depraved tastes, vicious appetites, and passions, or to carry on murderous and destructive wars, as Frederick of Prussia said he did, to make themselves talked about? It must be that it is the god who has the power of death, that is, the god of this world (age), the devil, and not the God of justice, who gives to kings such power to harm their fellow men.

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

THE GREATNESS OF A HERO depends upon his power to reach the innermost heart of the world, and touch the finer sensibilities and sympathies of the human race, with his character and his deeds. A hero would be nothing if he were not the center of a great field of activity, the prominent and central figure of some great crisis, where conflicting forces find their poles in the victor and the vanquished. If there were no such thing as mental polarity there could be no heroes; if individual minds were independent of the great world of mentality, no man could ascend to the state and place where he could touch the powers of Destiny and become honored by a nation, by a race, or by the world. Men who have lived longest in the memory of man, have risen above the people of a single nation in their conceptions, above races in their loves; they are men who perform deeds in the interest of the entire world of humanity. The man and the opportunity appear together; it may be in the saving of a life from imminent danger in fire or flood—such men may be heroes in a single community. National heroes achieve great things for single nations in crises which are confined to certain peoples; they are honored for a few centuries, and their memory becomes a mere record of history, and not of feeling. But world-heroes write their names indelibly upon human hearts, because they perform great works in the world of mind and soul. Martyrs impulse men to move along given lines; and the character of their influence is contingent upon the character and dimensions of the sphere in which they have become factors of progress. The world's greatest heroes are religious characters. Mythological characters were living men, and their deeds have been written in the language of universal symbolism, because their work had to do with the progress of life itself; they expressed great principles, comprehended great laws, and performed the works of the Gods. A hero is seen in his greatness when he is understood; a hero is greater than his clothing of imagery. No false conception of truth is adequate to measure the greatness and the glory of the personality of the Martyr of the Cross, whose power has swept the world for nineteen centuries. Heroes are ideal men, men whose memory is revered, and to whom homage is paid. They are embodiments of great forces, the resurrection of great powers. There is nothing in the world of conception that does not become real and tangible in time; there is not a thought that may not stand out in relief in material pediment. Deity himself, by virtue of religious momentum in the mind of humanity, becomes tangible in his own personality, and becomes a Hero in fact, in accordance with the meaning of his name—Eloah. The greatest hero is God—the tangible Man who has power to vibrate, through intense mental activity and desire, the very soul of man, in the highest octave; and whose influence may extend to all planes of the human world through impulses of successive notes of the scale of universal harmony.

Archeologists have done a great deal in the way of proving the authenticity and antiquity of the books of the Bible. The finding of the tombs of Abraham and a number of the prophets; the discovery in Egypt of the slavery of the Israelites; the excavations of hieroglyphics from the ruins of old Babylon; the testimony of tablets in tombs and temples; and other evidences too numerous to be considered thoroughly in one embodiment, demonstrate the fact that the Bible was written by men who lived amid the scenes which they described.

But it is not enough to merely prove that the Bible is comprised of ancient books—its truth must be demonstrated. However, the fact that the Scriptures have existed for thousands of years, and have come down to us safely through the storms of history, in which thousands of other works have been destroyed, suggests that the great factors of destiny have preserved the ancient Scriptures. This may be said of all other sacred books of the world—they all express truth in different degrees; but the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures have come down to us through the central line of divine progress—in the line of the actual facts of divine manifestations and activity. All evidences of the truth of the Bible may be considered as important; ancient tablets and inscriptions may contain proof that the Bible is of ancient origin; but such facts are in themselves insignificant when compared with the evidences discovered by the Founder of Koreshanity thirty years ago—the overwhelming testimony of the physical cosmos, in its form and functions, and in its laws. The principles of Koreshan Alchemy demonstrate the truth of the teachings of the Bible concerning the laws of life; and the Cosmogony of Koreshanity proves beyond a doubt that both the astronomy and theology of the Bible were not only essentially true in ancient times, but are absolutely true today—in the boasted scientific age of the world!

Under the heading of "The World's Greatest Revolution," the editor of the Cosmopolitan looks forward to a radical change in the conduct of human affairs, as a result of the sweeping power of the trusts. He observes that the three great houses of Rothschild, Rockefeller, and Morgan, representing an aggregate capital of over $3,000,000,000, constitute a world-power which exceeds even that of Russia. The trusts have assumed control of the world's labor and its products; they have captured the very foundations of wealth; and there is little power in the nations that is not derived directly or indirectly from the kings of the financial world. The trusts have reduced the management of industry and commerce to a system. "They have solved the problem of production," says the Cosmopolitan. "Will they now apply themselves to the greater and vastly more complex problem of distribution?" It is with the hope that they will, that the editor announces a bloodless revolution; that the great powers of industrial and commercial despotism will become great philanthropic factors of world-transformation. We do not believe that this will be the outcome of the present tendency to concentration, for the simple reason that the oppressors of humanity cannot suddenly become the world's saviours. The world's greatest revolution must be the ultimate of all other revolutions of the progressive order—a revolution of conflict, the great battle of Gog and Magog. The problem of distribution must be solved scientifically; equitable distribution of wealth must be natural, in accordance with the principles and laws of universal economy. These principles and laws will be successfully applied by the Discoverer of the science of the economics of the physical cosmos.

Mental scientists have a great deal to say about concentration, the fixing of the mind upon what one has to do, for the purpose of insuring success; and mental scientists even go so far as to treat patients afflicted with lack of ability to keep the mind continuously upon given subjects and things. The intercommunication of minds makes it possible to absorb from the mental world, substances essential to power and success. Where individualism prevails, competition in its worst forms results from concentration, because competition is the outgrowth of the concentration of selfishness. Koreshanity advocates mental concentration, but it elevates the mind, purifies the motive, and advocates a wider field of application. If it is possible for one possible that thousands of minds may so unite, through the application of the law of polarization, as to accomplish wonders. This indeed, is the secret of power—it is in the unity of purpose and harmony of action. The people of one nation may declare war against another, and the desire of the people may so unite in the general of an army as to lead their forces to victory; a mental battery is established, the power of which may be seen in the military and naval operations and successes. Concentration is essential to success of any organization. Religion is the strongest bond of unity. The greatest power the world will ever know is the power generated through the most intense mental activity and desire, in a biological battery, the supreme motive and impulse of which is the true religion, with its concentration of the forces of life, and its communism of the goods of life.

The Apostle Paul was emphatic in his declaration that if the Christ did not revive from death at the hands of his persecutors and murderers, our hope of life is in vain. Why did the Apostle make the destiny of men depend upon such an event? Because he knew that if Jesus remained in death, the substance of his body could not have been imparted to the church. With equal authority and truth, we affirm that if Jesus went away into the physical heavens, hope of redemption is in vain, because in such case the Seed of the Almighty would have remained out of the soil, and no harvest could possibly come. The great fact that Jesus has exerted a world-wide influence, is proof that he not only lived as a man, but that he did not leave the sphere of humanity; he has been in it through all the history of the Christian dispensation—in the church in all its states and conditions, from its primitive purity to its utter apostasy. No man has ever exerted an influence which extended through the centuries, who did not continue to exist in the sphere of his influence, passing down through the generations in specific lines of progress. Progression and retrogression are made possible by virtue of the fact that the life that was in embodiment in the past exists now, and will exist in the future. The popular theory of one lifetime for each man accounts for nothing but the ignorance of its advocates.

Positivism is being promulgated by a number of thinking minds, as a system of philosophy, polity, and religion. One of the greatest claims put forth for it by its advocates, is that it "blends into coherent unity, the three great forces of human life." It is rather a school of thought, not an organization; it is a theory, not a power. The very basis on which Positivism stands, precludes the possibility of its ultimate success in solving the problems of the world. It claims to be a logical system, while holding that all inquiry into causes, ancient or final, is useless and unprofitable; hence, its religious conceptions can never, in accordance with its principles, embrace a knowledge of Cause, which is the very essential and absolute source of religious impulse and power. It is a mere conception that man is a logical, practical, and religious being; and that science, economics, and religion should be united in the same field of conception and application. It is but a shadow of the true conception; its science is the perverted system extant today; its religion is without a knowable Deity, and its teachings do not embrace the exact knowledge of a single principle of human life, because principles have specifically to do with the factors and operations of Cause in the production of effects.

Suppose the scientists should be able to produce life artificially—what good would it do, since all life known is produced naturally? It is thought that such an achievement might enable the scientists to discover the secret of life. The secret of life will never be discovered by accident; if the scientist cannot take life as it exists in all its myriads of forms, and discover the principles and laws upon which life depends, he could not discover the secret of life in a chemical formula in the production of protoplasm. The composition of an egg is known to the chemist—that is, the material composition; he may take the same proportions of so called elements and unite them; there will be the same colors, the same consistency, and the same taste—but there is no life, nor possibility of reproduction. Matter is but one side of the sphere of existence; life is the result of the relations and activities of spirit and matter; it is produced through form and function—there is no other way. A test tube is neither father nor mother.

A St. Louis surgeon recently opened a human skull, excavated several inches in the brain, removed diseased tissue, and relieved the patient of intense pain caused by pressure. With reference to this operation, the editor of a daily remarks that "Physicians, in time, will learn to manage the arrangements of their fellow creatures as easily as the plumber manages the pipes, boilers, and so on, in our houses." This is the popular view of the body of man; it is looked upon as a mere machine, wholly material, to be operated upon as such. Physicians see only half of the man, while christian scientists deny the existence of that which the physicians do see; so in the modern mind the question as to what man really is, is not settled! Man is comprised of both spirit and matter, and his life is the result of interdependence between the two. The physician has not reached the cause of disease when he observes pathological conditions, nor has he cured disease when he has removed the physiological symptoms.

A scientific writer remarks: "Perhaps the new century may hold in reserve this greatest marvel [the production of life by artificial means], which will enable the physiological chemist to assume the role of a creator." Alchemy is the light of transmutation; chemistry is the perversion of alchemy, and is obviously without the light, since it discards the prefix, which means light. However, it is significant that at the time when the great Alchemist is laying hold of the most refined substances of the universe for the purpose of creating the new order of human life, the new race of men, the chemist should struggle to produce life by artificial means—life of the lowest order of the animal kingdom! But herein we find the great contrast between Koreshan Alchemy and its antithet—modern chemistry.

The trust is a bold stroke of constructive genius; but it is inspired by a false love, and disaster impends. The trust is devoid of the principles of equity; it is a one-sided system of co-operation, in which millions contribute labor and wealth without an equitable share in the products. The coming trust of righteousness will be a system of organic unity, the principles of which will cover the broad field of distribution as well as the production of wealth.

Religion is the deepest and most powerful sentiment expressed in art. The most famous productions on the modern canvas portray the life and character of the Christ; the highest form of architecture is displayed in religious temples and cathedrals; and two of the greatest musical productions of modern times are Mendelssohn's "Elijah," and Handel's "Messiah."

Nineteen hundred years ago, Jesus the Messiah sent a legion of human spirits into the swine; but in modern times, legions of spirits of swine are manifest in humanity. The human hog is visible everywhere; he has no appreciation of the pearls of truth.

Lawyers are experts in technicalities; their work is to destroy the effect of truthful testimony and pervert the spirit of the law. The extent to which they do this depends upon which side of a case they are on.

The modern trust lacks pure motives, a humane love, and a conception of the principles of communism.

The desire to grab territory has become a weakness of the powers.

The love of self is the baleful cause of baneful effects.

The mind eludes the scrutinizing materialist.

The Semi-Annual Festival of the Koreshan Unity.

Celebrated by Chicago Koreshans, April 10, 1901, in Honor of the Fifty-seventh Anniversary of the Birth of Victoria Gratia, Pre-Eminent.

APRIL 10, 1901, marks the beginning of a new period in the progress and history of Koreshanity; and this is not due merely to the fact that such an event as the Semi-Annual Festival gives impetus to the social life of the System, but that this day was characterized by special steps taken in the inauguration of a more perfect unity in the Koreshan body. New orders are established; and from henceforth there will be more rapid development of order from the chaotic conditions which are inevitable in periods of transition from the old to the new. The great purpose which Koreshanity has in view for its people, through the institution of new orders, is clearly defined in the IMPERIAL EDICT OF THE PRE-EMINENT, which appears in the first department of this issue of THE FLAMING SWORD.

Our people were pleasantly surprised at the elaborate preparations which were made for this great event. We are moving into more commodious quarters; having obtained possession of the large four-story building known as Lanyon's Opera House, in Englewood, Chicago, where a large hall has been newly fitted and furnished for lectures and services. About 150 Chicago Koreshans were greeted with these evidences of progress in our work. The new steps taken in the direction of a greater and stronger unity of Koreshans, were appropriately symbolized by the preparation of a commodious and attractive Assembly Room.

The services of the Semi-Annual Festival occupied both afternoon and evening. The most marked feature of the afternoon service was the reading of the IMPERIAL EDICT by VICTORIA GRATIA, PRE-EMINENT, in whose honor we met to celebrate the fifty-seventh anniversary of her birth. This ceremony was very impressive, and will be long remembered by all Koreshans present. It was the Pre-Eminent's message to her people—a message of exalted, maternal love; there were manifest in her voice and countenance, majestic and maternal tenderness and solicitude for our welfare and desire for our progress.

Following the IMPERIAL EDICT was the afternoon address of KORESH, the FOUNDER OF KORESHANITY. His subject was the imperialism of Koreshanity, which involves the essence of all true liberty. The universe itself is imperialistic; there are universal harmony and equilibrium, because there is order in its functions and government. There is the star in its orbit, the planet in its path, and the sun in its course; and all the activities of the cosmos depend upon a central star. The vibration at the center is the cause of all the motions of the physical world; and there can be no true liberty in society until it is organized on the basis of universal laws of order and equilibrium.

The processes of progress from chaos to cosmos were described. When food is appropriated it is first reduced to chaos through mastication; and then, through digestion, the substances enter into the organic relations of the human system. So, from the chaotic world come the elements which are to make up the great organic structure of the new religio-social order of the future. The first state of the Koreshan Society is necessarily chaotic, but from its chaos develops an orderly unity which will ultimately prevail throughout the world. The imperialism of Koreshanity is a great stumbling block to the people of the world generally. They are afraid of imperialism; the people of the West cling to the idea of democracy—and yet they have no freedom but to serve those who stand at the head of the perverted imperialism of the money power! The importance of Koreshanity, of its revelation of the absolute truth, and of the progress of Koreshan work until it leads millions to freedom, was dwelt upon in forceful words of scientific encouragement.

The evening address of KORESH was more particularly concerning the great purpose of Koreshanity in the application of law to life, in contrast with the popular idea of salvation through faith alone. The words of Solomon were taken as a text: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." Prophetic times and dates were analyzed, showing the culmination of the period of 2,300 days (years), in two personalities who have specifically to do with human destiny. The cleansing of the sanctuary was explained, and the meaning of the appearance of the tabernacle in human form in 1839 was pointed out—the purification of doctrine, followed by the purification of life through application of truth to life. This last involves the necessity of the recognition of a Pre-Eminent Head of the organic body, and implicit obedience to the authoritative disciplinarian. The coming conflagration of hundreds of thousands of personalities demands a center of influx of the energies of dematerialization; this center is necessarily feminine, because the function of the female is constructive; the Sons of God must come into manifestation through the world's greatest materializing medium—a medium of the divine order. Koreshanity deals with realities. The manifest constructive Center is here; and to guard that center is to guard the Mother of the very life for which we hope and work.

The time between the afternoon and evening services was devoted to social intercourse. As we looked over the group of Koreshans, we could see faces made happy in the bonds of social unity. The social life of Koreshanity is of a very high order; it obtains from an entirely new standpoint; it must be lived to be felt and realized. Here is a body of people with the brightest hopes the world knows, at the very door of realization; and it is not a wonder that the spirit of true friendship and brotherly love prevailed. In the social events of our people, as well as in the conduct of all our affairs, there is necessarily a spirit of unselfish communism cultivated; there is every incentive and encouragement to the development of pure love of the neighbor, for the happiness of the entire body depends upon the unselfish spirit of the individual.

The Semi-Annual Festival was a day of great profit; it was an honor to be a learner of its lessons. As the years go by, Koreshans feel more and more the paternal love and care and solicitude of the Messenger of the Covenant, and the maternal tenderness of the Pre-Eminent. Without these two personalities Koreshanity would be nothing; with them, it will become to its people and to the world, the fulfilment of all human hopes of life, love, and universal peace!

Koreshan Estimate of Religion.

Rev. E. M. Castle Replies to a Critic, and Discusses the Purpose of the Christian Dispensation.

EDITOR News:—The communication of A. J. Leonard in your issue of the 28th ult., has been brought to my attention, and I request the privilege of replying in your columns, even at this rather late date, having been absent from the city for a few weeks. Evidently the writer has misunderstood the position of Koreshanity regarding the character of genuine religion, and its differentiation of this from the ordinary conception of what constitutes religion; and has failed to perceive its opposition to all that today is called Christianity, which is an utter perversion of the primitive Christianity.

We protest against being rebuked for an opinion that we do not entertain, and suspect that the writer read no more of the report than he criticises, than the first three sentences, which he quotes; and failed to note the distinction even there indicated between religion and what men have falsely termed religion.

If it is a fact, as Mr. Leonard states, that "Christians have been working and looking for peace, brotherhood, harmony, mutual help, and all the common good, for the last 19 centuries," certainly their methods have been, to say the least, peculiar. To an impartial student of the history of the Christian era, it would seem that they had been working to produce results the very opposite to these, and, judging by present conditions, that their efforts have been crowned with signal success. According to the record, the founder of the Christian system said that he came not to bring peace but a sword, and contemplating the culmination of Christian genius in the production of tremendous implements of destruction, we conclude that through the impulse he gave the world, this phase of his word has been fulfilled.

Koreshan science understands this, however, to be but the result in one direction, and to constitute but one factor in the operation of laws, human and divine, through which mankind shall ultimately be brought into harmony. Human genius in the direction of the invention of labor-saving machinery will finally serve the purpose of removing the ancient curse of labor from the race. But, it is hardly necessary to state, this has not yet been accomplished.

We heartily agree with Mr. Leonard that "The stress of economic forces, the pressure of competition, the growth of joint stock enterprise, and the very greed and ambition of mercantile men," are instrumental in producing God's opportunity. For he will ride even upon the storm of human passion that shall rage when the angry, dispossessed poor, and their greedy, but not more culpable, exploiters, meet for the final reckoning between "capital and labor."

The spirit of love to the neighbor practically operative, constitutes genuine religion, the bond of integral unity. To pretend to love God is one thing; to truly know and love Him, and to manifest this in the only way it can manifest, in love and service to His creatures, is another. To raise a prayer to God from the lips, while the hand is in the neighbor's pocket, is no evidence of religion. In fact, while men need pockets or purses there is no true bond of unity among them.

The genius of combination, of organization, is wonderfully developing to become at last the power of binding the race into one great social and industrial harmony. But the spirit of selfishness at present dominating the great combinations, must be cast out, and the spirit of love substituted. The world is not growing better, but a growing sentiment in favor of better conditions is manifesting, also a growing recognition of the necessity of infusing a new spirit into the truly wonderful organizations of the day, that they may serve the welfare of the many, instead of the self-aggrandizement of the few.

When men are quite willing to do right, they will be willing to forego any opportunity to do otherwise; and will agree in the establishment of a social order, the liberties, restraints, and adjustments of which will be so clearly defined, and the laws of which so justly enforced, as to preclude the possibility of encroachment by any person, or body, upon the rights of others. And nothing less than a new revelation of God to the race, with the impulse of true religion such a revelation must give, can put such a willingness into the hearts of humanity.

Mr. Leonard says that in view of the very perplexing and difficult times in which we live, it is "not a serious reproach to any person that he, or she, cannot readily take in all the aspects of problems which are at present puzzling and vexing society." Be this as it may, the fact remains that to miss the supreme aspect, which is the religious one, constitutes a serious disability on the part of any who would deal with the subject. And whoever seriously considers the teachings of the Koreshan System, must recognize that its apostles, far from being "off their base," are not only squarely upon it, but actually have a base upon which to be; this latter fact supremely distinguishing them from the apostles of any other system, whether it be science, sociology, or religion. Respectfully,—
ELEANORE M. CASTLE, Springfield, March 26, 1901.

The Truth of the Bible.

The Authenticity of the Scriptures Discussed by Rev. E. M. Castle, at Springfield, Mass.

At the Koreshan service in Memorial hall last evening, Rev. E. M. Castle spoke on the subject, "Is the Bible True or False? and by What Means Can We Determine This?" She said in part:

"In these sceptical days, when the assaults of infidelity, atheism, agnosticism, and the more subtle, disguised opposition of the 'higher criticism,' are undermining and weakening belief in the Bible as of divine authenticity, the critical observer cannot fail to note, even on the part of many who would champion the Bible, or at least some portion of it, the haziness of mind that exists regarding the originals of our present Scriptures, and the way in which these Scriptures have come down to us; and above all, regarding what is of even more importance,—that is, the essential qualities that must characterize a trustworthy basis from which men may determine this important question one way or the other, to their final satisfaction.

"A brief review of the question in its historical aspect may serve to remove something of this haziness. In the most favorable attitude towards the Bible, it can be regarded as the record of inspiration only in so far as it faithfully represents what prophets and apostles and evangelists wrote thousands of years ago in other languages than ours and under other circumstances. Can we reasonably conclude that the Bible of our day is substantially identical with the Scriptures of the first centuries of the Christian era, and what are the sources from which to draw such conclusion?

"If the original writings had remained, the conclusion would be simple and direct. But, it is hardly necessary to state, the original writings have long since disappeared. It may be, that being written on the common writing material of that time, papyrus paper, they were soon worn out from use, for Jerome mentions such a library in Caesarea, partly destroyed within a century after its creation, and tells of the efforts to rescue the manuscripts from oblivion by copying them on parchment; or it may be that they perished in the persecutions which were directed not only against the persons of the early Christians, but with special vigor against their writings. In the absence of the original manuscripts what sources of information are open?

"Briefly, there are three such sources. The first is composed of what are known as Biblical "manuscripts," which term has by common consent been reserved by scholars to designate manuscript copies of the Scriptures in Hebrew and Greek. The second is composed of ancient versions, also manuscript copies, but of translations of the Bible into several languages of early Christendom, Syriac, Ethiopic, Armenian, Gothic, Egyptian, Latin, and the Septuagint version of the Old Testament; some of these translations representing the Scriptures of about 50 years after the apostles, in the lifetime of men whose fathers

Lecture by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanity will deliver a Lecture on Koreshan Universology, Sunday, 3:30 p. m., April 21, 1901, at Koreshan Hall, 4th floor, 315-19 Englewood ave., Chicago.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in advanced thought.

and grandfathers were easily contemporaries of St. Paul and St. John.

"The third source consists of the writings of the early Christian fathers from the first to the fifth century, who were so copious in their quotations of Scripture as to give rise to the saying that if all other sources of the Bible were lost, the greater part of it could be recovered from their writings; and as the most important of these writings date from the second, third, and fourth centuries, they furnish valuable evidence that the Scriptures existed at that time, substantially the same as they are today. [Here follows a review of the history of numerous manuscripts of the early writers, showing a connected chain of transmission from the early centuries until the appearance of printed editions in the 16th century.—EDITOR SWORD.]

"But though the historical view may convince us of the unbroken line of connection between the Bible of today and that of the first century, this does not answer the question in discussion today between its devotees and its opponents. This question is whether the Bible is from God through man, and therefore true, or from man without God, in which case the probability is that it may be false. We have no reason to believe the Bible if it be not in agreement with the book of Nature, which, beyond dispute, is the true expression of cause. If disagreement be found to exist between the Bible and the book of Nature, one is false; and as Nature is certainly true to the creator that produced it, in such case the Bible could not be true.

"But before we can know whether such disagreement exists, we must know that Nature has been correctly read. Genuine science can be nothing less than positive knowledge of the universal cosmos as a whole, without which no accurate knowledge of any of its parts, even the least, is possible. Men must demonstrate the correctness of their rendering of the book of Nature in the terms of science, before they have any proper basis from which to question the Bible. Opposition to the Bible, or to any portion of it, from the basis of the unproven assumptions that constitute so called science, is unworthy of serious consideration.

"Until the scientist demonstrates the verity of his premise, his system is one of faith, not of science. Men will disbelieve the Bible if they believe the theories of modern science; but no one claims to know that these theories are true. Therefore, conflict between those who believe in the Bible and those who believe in modern science, for no one can believe in both at the same time, is merely a more recent development of the war of creeds that has so long been waged; and which nothing less than positive knowledge can bring to a termination.

"Koreshan Science claims the possession of such positive knowledge; and that its argument from demonstrated premises is the only genuine scientific method of reaching positive conclusions regarding the forms and laws of Nature. In its scientific demonstration of the Cellular Cosmogony, it possesses an absolutely certain corroboration of the truth of the Bible. It finds its conclusions, reached by the only true scientific method, in exact agreement with the declarations of Scripture. The Bible deals philosophically and declaratively with the things of cause and effect, of origin and destiny; and Koreshan Science finds within the Bible an emphatic corroboration of everything that it has positively discovered to be true. At last the truth is established in the mouth of two witnesses, and not all the world of fallacy can avail against it.—Springfield Daily News, Apr. 1, 1901.

Logic Proves Re-embodiment.

The Logical Sequences of the Known Present are Past and Future; Conclusions Illustrated by Diagram.

Let us take, as a premise, this life we are living at the present. We all have the idea, which is really more than an idea, for it is a certainty to those who reason, (infinity on one side and a clear and sharp beginning on the other, do not go together, for evolution requires not only a chance for further progress, but a time as well, for past development), of a future. Now we have a sequence of a Future, and Present; and to be logical, and complete in our sequence, we must have a past. Now we have a future certainty, a known present, and a logical past. Let us study the following diagram:

Series A — 1 2 3
Series B — — 1 2 3
Series C — — — 1 2 3
Series D — — — — 1 2 3

Let 1 represent the past; 2 represent the present; and 3 represent the future, in each series. A, B, C, and D are a series of lives, in sequence, but taken at random. Beginning with the Series B, we have 1, the past; 2, the present; and 3, the future.

Now 2, or the present series of B, becomes the past, or 1 of series C; and 3, the future series of B, becomes the present, or 2, of series C. To complete our sequence, we must have a future, in series C, or 3. Thus we have in series C, 1, the past; 2, the present; and 3, the future.

Now take series C. The 2, or the present, of this series, becomes the 1, or the past, of series D; and 3, the future of series C, becomes the 2, or the present, of series D; and to complete our sequence, in series D, we must have a 3, or a future. And so on indefinitely.

Reasoning backwards, beginning with the series B, we have the 2, or the present of series B, becoming the future, or 3, of series A; and the 1, or the past of series B, becomes the 2, or the present of series A. And to complete our sequence in series A, we must have a past, or 1. And so on indefinitely.—A. N. KING, in Notes and Queries.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

The Open Court.—Eduard Biedermann's picture of Christ adorns, as a frontispiece, the April number. This is followed by "The Crown of Thorns; a Story of the Time of Christ," by Dr. Paul Carus. While the story is entertaining, it is not true to the spirit of the work of the Messiah; its purpose is to show that Christianity was an afterthought, originating with the Apostle Paul. International Citizenship, by Hon. C. C. Bonney, is good, as well as a number of other contributions and comments. The Open Court Publishing Company, Chicago.

Leslie's Weekly.—A double page in the current issue is devoted to Funston and some of his exploits; and a full length picture of Funston appears on the title-page. Other features are: Pictures of famous yachts of the United States; military horsemen; bird's-eye view of New York; Easter pilgrimage to Jerusalem, etc.—the whole making a very attractive number.

Suggestion.—This is a creditable contribution to the cause of suggestive therapeutics, edited by H. A. Parkyn, M. D.; published monthly. One good feature about it, is that it opposes the numerous mental science fads and "I am" delusions. $1.00 per year. 4020 Drexel Boulevard, Chicago.

Carter's Monthly.—A Chicago monthly, devoted to club life mainly, but deals with subjects of general interest, such as history, literature, art, etc. "The Presidents" is an article, accompanied by pictures of President and Mrs. McKinley, in March number. 60 Dearborn street, Chicago.

Teacher's World.—Devoted to interests of the teacher; contains valuable suggestions, aids, and devices for imparting instruction; illustrated. $1.00 yearly. 13 Astor Place, New York City.

Twentieth Century Wraps.

These novel Wraps are becoming very popular, and the demand for them still continues. They are made of Shetland flax, hand-crocheted by our own people, and are light, airy, and beautiful.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

New Departments

Bureau of Equitable Commerce, of the Koreshan Unity.

Under the Koreshan System of Co-operation, the cost of production is reduced to the minimum; and we offer to our friends more goods and more work for a given sum of money than can be obtained in the competitive world. We have established four new departments to our work. Orders promptly filled by mail or express. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

Our High-Grade, Hand-Finished Razor Strops.

A good strop is indispensable to one that uses a razor. A good razor is of little use unless it has a fine edge, and that cannot be obtained in any other way than with a good strop and a knowledge of how to use the same and keep it in condition. A strop in poor shape means a razor in poor condition. Full directions with every strop.

We manufacture our celebrated High-grade Razor Strops, the best strops manufactured. If you shave, you need one; you would be delighted with one of these. The prices are low considering the superior quality of the goods and workmanship.

Single, horse-hide, 50c. Double swing shell and canvas, several grades, from 75c to $1.25. Extra fine material and finish, $1.50. Packed in neat box. Also strops at 10c., 25c., and 40c.—send 8c. for postage on orders less than 50c. Mail orders a specialty.

Jewelry Department.

Superintended by a practical jeweler and watchmaker. Clocks, watches, and jewelry at wholesale prices. Example: Serviceable American watch, good timekeeper, $3.50. Improved alarm clock, rotary hammer, $1.00; postpaid. Watch repairing a specialty. Watches repaired and returned in good condition, by mail, for $1.00. Extra charge only in case of serious breakage. All work guaranteed.

Medical batteries repaired; magnets and armatures rewound. All work guaranteed. Prices retail and wholesale, given on application. Watch for "our prices" in comparison with the regular prices on articles.

A good family Medical Battery is very useful. We will send you a first-class Battery, consisting of 1 dry battery; 1 sponge; 1 foot-plate; and electrodes, for only $7.50. Price, by others, $10.00.

Musical Department.

Mail orders a specialty.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY

Founded by Koresh (Dr. Cyrus R. Teed),
A. D. 1870.

THE EARTH is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Sun, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth constituting the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell: we INhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, and the pattern of the new order of Human Society.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univesal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism—the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Centralization of the Money Power.

The Trusts of Capital and Labor and Their Relation to Public Welfare; the World Moves Toward the Vortex of Revolution.

WE HAVE JUST looked over an editorial in the Chicago American—we forgot to say "Hearst's," in which there is a lot of rubbish regarding the trusts. The date is April 17, 1901. "The trusts are going to do a great deal of good to the masses of the people in time. They will end by forcing universal government ownership of monopolies upon the people. Of course this last step is a long way ahead, and there will be considerable stiff fighting before it is taken." We cannot, for the life of us, determine how much of the article is irony. If it is intended to be sarcasm, we can account for some of the statements; otherwise, it is peculiarly enigmatical.

There is undoubtedly a sense in which the trusts are to benefit humanity, but it will be somewhat on the lines that Napoleon benefited Europe and the world generally. There are two great trust tendencies, both the outgrowth of the competitive, or mercantile and commercial, purposes and activity. One is the trust of the millionaire, the other is the trust of the labor-unions. They are reciprocally dependent. Each is the inspiration of the other, and both are the offspring of the devil. The billionaire trust will be beneficial to the world by spurring the other trust to organize, develop, and oppose the money power, on the same principle by which the billionaire trust is actuated.

The government of the United States has unreservedly and unequivocally committed itself to the commercial power of the Rothschilds, J. Pierpont Morgan, etc., and will not recede from its purpose to uphold the money power, in its effort to become so absolutely centralized as to make it the power which is destined to move the world toward and into the great vortex of consummation which the prophets have long foretold, and for which the expectations of the world have waited.

We have reiterated the prediction that the centralized money power, the military, and the government would be found on the one side, while the laboring masses will be arrayed on the other. We have had no reason as yet, to change our opinion founded upon the inevitable determinations of the tendencies of competition. The world is not growing better. It is only recently that we have had the opportunity of gauging the character of the righteousness which actuates the modern financial and commercial world; and our experience is akin to the experience of thousands of others who are unfortunate enough to fall into the hands of the Shylocks, whose name is legion. The "best men" in Chicago and other cities will rob men of hundreds or thousands of dollars, in order to save one dollar in a transaction in which they have fortunately, or unfortunately, gained an advantage. This is common to every-day business life in Chicago and other cities. The money god is absolutely merciless, and this tendency is not diminishing; no, not by any means.

The business world is cloaked in hypocrisy and hellish greed. The world generally is moving toward its fruitage. The consummation of the age will result in its fruit of perfection, but the great mass of mankind is departing from righteousness more and more, as the age progresses toward its culmination. The world (the age) will end in catastrophe. Later, we will be glad to compare and contrast the pages of THE SWORD with the pseudo-prophets of the times, as indicated in the periodical publications of the day.

There are two infernal phases of the money power, both impulsed by the common and inordinate greed for money. Both are equally terrible, and in direct violation of the laws and principles of justice, and the liberty which the Constitution of the United States pretends to guarantee. They are both allowed to augment through political cowardice, and will bring the crisis which we have so often declared inevitable.

THE FLAMING SWORD is the only publication in the world today that is proclaiming the truth, the prophetic truth of things as they will transpire in the near future, and which will constitute the closing drama of the Christian dispensation.

In the Great Struggle for Existence.

Social and Industrial Conditions Which Enslave and Degrade the Masses; Deliverance Possible only Through the Almighty Power of Deity in Humanity.

IN THE GREAT STRUGGLE for bread, a contest in which the systematic and licensed millionaire robber is pitted against his slave brother, there is no more abject degradation than that in which the tenant is related to the landlords of our great cities. So long as the competitive system obtains, and the unscrupulous man of commercial rapacity, wisdom, and ability is permitted to wage a contest for the last dollar for which the poor man struggles, there is no hope for the latter. The grim monster of drudgery and starvation—spectre-like, but none the less real—stalks as the associate of poverty; and the Christian brother (in the same church with the poverty-stricken), with his carpeted and cushioned pew, cloaked in hypocrisy the better to ply his avocation of filching his brother's gain, revels in luxury.

Is the Christian system a farce? or will there come a day when the prayer indited by the Lord, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven," will meet an answer, and the kingdom be established? Will the day come to the world when some great power of justice and judgment—moving the mass as the power of God actuated the single personality of Christ when he entered the temple on the memorable day of the discomfiture of the brokers—shall rid it of the great pagan and antichristian system of competition which curses humanity? Will it come to hurl the thunderbolts of Jove and annihilate the oppressor of the poor, and to confirm the oft-repeated promises and threats of dire vengeance upon those "who oppress the hireling in his wages"? Will the Lord come again to complete the work of restoration, and apply the plumb-line of integrity and the level of equation, and by these, square the relation of man to man?

God has promised; and as prophetic prescience has been enabled to predict the end from the beginning, and as there can be no escape from the dictum of Jehovah's word, and as there is no remission of sin without the shedding of blood, "the third woe" will culminate at the time allotted, and a more disastrous "black Friday" than that in which Wall Street was ever consternated, will devastate the millions "heaped up against the day of wrath." Could prayer avert the dire calamity impending over the rich who exercise an oppression greater than was practiced upon the Israelite in his Egyptian bondage, the time would have come for the righteous man to pray; but the prayer offered in the order of divine law is the prayer for relief from the oppression of competition, and its answer must bring despoliation to the oppressor.

The ire of God is kindled; and the inspiration of the righteous man is consonant with the declared purpose of Jehovah to institute equation when, upon the opening of the third seal, there shall go forth the black horse whose rider carries the balances, emblem of justice, and cries with a loud voice: "A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny." There will be no corners in the market then, and the bulls and the bears will constitute a lively menagerie for the amusement of those in whose interests the revolution is adjusted. "Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread," of which we are being robbed by the millionaire speculators who grind us to earth, and thy name shall be glorified by those whom thou dost deliver. Fulfil thy promises, and give us who groan under the oppressor's hand, speedy deliverance!

Industry does not imply drudgery, but it does mean organic equilibrium, and therefore the reduction of labor by its equitable adjustment to its minimum for every man, woman, and child in the commonwealth.

Religious Influence in Commerce.

GENUINE RELIGION should enter into and constitute the foundation of business transactions; but moral and social equity have been tabooed from the domain of commercial activity, and the cupidity and avarice of the money seeker have stunted every right moral and social sense. Financial acquirements are devoted largely to the support of conventionalism and the creation of class discriminations and distinctions; hence any appeal to the race for the improvement of its conditions must be directed to such cupidity and avarice.

Notwithstanding the fact that human greed actuates the rich and poor alike, there remains the principle of commercial equity; and independently of moral and social obligation, it may force an entrance into the concerns of business, and be made the bulwark and fortification of enterprise. Commercial integrity does not imply honesty of heart. The principle of arbitration, applied to the settlement of the questions that vex the mind, engender strife, breed tumult, and lead to war, does not imply improvement in social, moral, or religious life. It is the applied law of business economy. Men may settle legal questions by arbitration, because to take their settlement into court means to pamper the rapacity of the great legal maw at the expense of uncertainty, with the possible loss of the possession for which they contend. Courts of so called justice and the augmenting army of legal parasites and leeches threaten the stability of economic prudence; commercial discretion dictates the wise course, not because of moral force or impulse, but rather because rapacity is accompanied by the serpent of financial skill.

The Art of Conversation.

Exaltation of Conversation to the Rank of a Fine Art Through Love of the Neighbor; the Communism of all True Art; Lost Arts and Lost Ideas

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

SCIENCE is that which is known, or the exposition of the laws of wisdom. Art is practice or construction under the direction of those laws. Without a knowledge of law, art is impossible. It is faulty so long as the truth which inheres in the divine mind is unknown. Art in the outer sphere is constructive and feminine, acting under the impulse of law, which is masculine.

The science of esthetics recognizes five arts—poetry, music, painting, sculpture, and architecture. There is no reason why conversation should not be dignified by the same title. It is exalted to the rank of a fine art when it is governed by the principle of love to the neighbor. An understanding of this principle includes a knowledge of psychology. The thought world is the spirit world, or the subjective state into which all men pass upon leaving the natural world and the physical body. Koreshan writers are constantly obliged to emphasize this statement because it is new and strange at the present time.

Conversation which is an exchange of ideas, represents, in terms of science, a transference of spiritual entities from one mind or dwelling-place to another. The will is the guard, and it rests with those who converse to choose the quality of the entities which they prefer to send out, to bless or to curse other thought spheres.

Another principle of psychology to be considered in relation to the exaltation of conversation, is that of reflex action. The angle of reflection is equal to the angle of incidence. Every law of physics has its mental correspondent. Vicious personalities of speech, petty malice, and half-veiled allusions come back by unerring law to visit their destructive force upon the sender. Those who voluntarily weaken the absent by detractions, weaken themselves.

Art in all its phases is opposed to individual accumulation. There is no beauty in art-forms which embody the impulses of a competitive age. The monopolist is a bore wherever you may find him, on the stock exchange, in the salon, or at the dinner table. If it is to be artistic, conversation must be free to all. Each one of the company contributes of his best, whether in the form of wit, epigram, pleasing anecdote, or it may be only a well-directed question or a simple attempt to break an awkward pause. Love to the neighbor demands that every speaker should be met by courteous attention and appreciation. Remarks which seem somewhat pointless to one may be full of significance to another. Very unpretentious speech may be prompted by a sincere desire to aid or to suggest. Self pride is swift to seize upon the neighbor's mistakes or to dispute his statements, but loving consideration overlooks the trifling inadvertence.

Conversation as a means to an end may be directed with dynamic force. All degrees ultimate in the natural, and the power of the spoken word is beyond the ordinary psychologist's conception. Thought, the spiritual, finds expression in speech, and by conversation, which is turning with or together, the ideas of many minds are recombined. Discussion terminates in decision; the fiat goes forth to result in action. Fresh concepts are also sent out to receptive brains, whence by the conversion of spirit to matter they find embodiment along the natural lines of reproduction; hence conversation ultimates in creation or begetting. Its art-forms in one phase are human beings whose expressions show their origin. The degeneracy of art is stamped upon men's faces. When conversation is the expression of pure truth, nobility will mark the race.

The French Revolution was one of the most important crises in modern history, yet it is not too much to say that its events were determined by the salons of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, where conversation flourished under the direction of talented women. Every subject connected with national and human affairs was discussed where philosophers and literati assembled to bring forth the children of their brain; but it was the brilliant mind of some woman who led and controlled them all. The war engines of the conflict were thus put in action hundreds of years before the crisis came. It goes without saying, that these discussions tended to break up existing order; they were not reconstructive, for the truth had not descended into the natural sphere.

Use and beauty are commensurate. The highest art must subserve the noblest purpose. Conversation considered as a means for the advancement of the kingdom of God, reaches its ultimate development as a fine art. When governed by love to the neighbor it becomes the source of the keenest delight. "The performance of every use to the neighbor prompted by love is the handmaid of happiness."

Wendell Phillips' famous address upon the Lost Arts is significant of the status of the age. Mankind has reached the point of terminal transformation to opposites, hence the moral quality that predominates represents the complete vitiation of truth and good. The various forms of art are the materialized expressions of thought, therefore lost arts imply lost ideas. Koreshan Science is the agent of recovery.

Conversation as a means of enjoyment must be under restraint in language, in motive, in theme, and in length. Such restraint is for a definite purpose,—the attainment of artistic perfection. Language waxes vulgar when not restrained by chastity and confined within the limits of grammatical forms. License in any direction is opposed to art, and excellence is the result of discipline.

Rights and Powers of Womankind.

The Present Abridgment of Woman's Sphere of Usefulness; the Bondage of the Mothers of Nations; the Status of Woman in Koreshanity; a Prophetic Coincidence.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

WOMEN MOLD by thought and act, the teeming sea of embryonic humanity. When this mass is ushered into life, its most impressionable years, the years in which it is acceded that the most lasting mental imprints are made, and relatively speaking, the greatest growth of intellect is consummated and the most extended variety and measure of knowledge accumulated, these most precious of all years are given unchallenged to woman's love, care, and guidance. That nothing in dissent is uttered against her most natural prerogative, and that her manner of ministration wins for her the appellations of the dearest, sweetest earthly influence, is her righteous encomium.

Fit to stand as mothers of the existing nations are these women who, by the irrevocable law of natural association, send from the firesides they foster, their lives to the world, or, in the arena of a wider activity, wield the royal scepter of many a recorded epoch, as acceptably as do their brothers. As a rule, however, it is thus far and no farther shalt thou come. The home circle is considered her legitimate limit. Her son attains his majority. The mother, though perhaps possessing morality and brain power of an order not reflected in her child, is deprived of a voice in the laws that must establish and sustain his relationship to his fellow men, the while he is left free to throw so much influence as his attainments will permit, into such legal manacles as he may deem apt for her. She who has fulfilled the immeasurably greater is denied the smaller function!

Of a woman, nineteen hundred years ago, God was born into the visible from the invisible world. Isaiah declared that unto us a Son is born; that he is the Everlasting Father; that upon his shoulder shall be the government. The end is not yet. Among those who most thoroughly believed on Him, who most tenderly ministered unto him, the last at the cross and the first at the sepulcher, was woman. When that end of which Christ was the beginning has come, there will stand forth One of whom it is written, "She shall be called the Lord our Righteousness;" and in her holy person—God's house not made with hands, the Christ shall reign, the center of that kingdom in the earth for which he taught his disciples to pray. God's Messenger is among us to fulfil these things. A straw shows the current's drift, and heaven be praised for this straw:

The New York State Prohibition Convention convened in Syracuse, N. Y., in 1886. In that convention was formulated the first woman suffrage plank ever inserted in the platform of any convention, state or national. But if the man whose moral power wrought this righteous innovation were to claim this offspring of his brain, reasonably there would spring up one crying "hold! Be pleased, good Sir, to remember that I had the honor of introducing the resolution," etc. This claim would stand valid among men, but behind this claim is a fact that will be history when this claimant has ceased to desire to appropriate the honor.

The fact is this: A man in the N. Y. State Prohibition Convention put his endeavor into the determination that in that body this recognition of woman should obtain. He wrought toward that issue with his whole soul. The issue which his voice could not have accomplished directly, was indirectly achieved through his influence upon the speech of others, and the initial Woman Suffrage plank became an actuality. The man whose devotion to the amelioration of human woe compassed in that assembly the recognition of the larger half of our race, which recognition is to amplify until woman is recognized as the equal of man, is the Founder of the divine Religio-Scientific System—a system of Universology—known as Koreshanity.

There are women who dream of the far past as a glorious past; who dream of a future as glorious as the past; of unfetteredness; of a beauty in humanity that springs from the throne and altar of God. Their awakening souls dumbly yearn for one to point the way; to lead the way; and they long for the time. Is the time at hand? In the crypt of the Escorial, where repose the Spanish purple from Charles the Great to Alphonso the twelfth, there is room for but one more royal tomb. In the mausoleum of the Vatican, where rests the long line of papal maladministrators, there remains space for but one more sarcophagus. Does this coincidental prophecy of the fading of two lines of misapplied power, point to a new era in state and church?—a new era in the affairs of God and man?

Catholic Methods of Remitting Sin.

"Whereas, To all the faithful of both sexes in all parts of the world, including even those who have come to Rome in the past year, and there or elsewhere gained the jubilee under any conditions, we grant and accord mercifully in the Lord, for once, the fullest indulgence, remission, and pardon for their sins, the annual pascal confession and commission being, however, not valid as conditions for gaining the jubilee, provided that within six months from the date of publication in each diocese of this letter, they visit the cathedral in the episcopal city or the principal church in the other parts of the different diocese, together with three other churches in the same place as appointed by the ordinary, at least once a day for fifteen either continuous or interrupted days, natural or ecclesiastical (the ecclesiastical day being that which commences with the first vespers of one day and ends with the dusk of the following), and pray devoutly to God for the exaltation of the church, the extirpation of heresy, the concord of Catholic rulers, and the salvation of the Christian people. In places where there are not four churches, power is granted to the ordinaries to fix a smaller number of churches—or even one church, where there is only one—in which the faithful may make full number of visits, separate and distinct, on the same natural or ecclesiastical day, in such a way that the sixty visits be distributed throughout fifteen days, either continuous or otherwise."—Extract from Papal Proclamation.

THE EPISCOPAL CIRCULAR from which the above Christmas Jubilee proclamation of Pope Leo XIII is taken, calls the offer made that of "plenary indulgence or forgiveness of sins." The pope himself calls it the fullest indulgence, remission, and pardon of their sins. For sixty visits to churches within the space of fifteen days, "and prayer for the exaltation of the church, the extirpation of heresy, the concord of Catholic rulers, and the salvation of the Christian people," the modern man who sits upon the Tiber promises to all Catholics the fullest pardon of all their sins and the fullest indulgence, whatever that means.

Judging from the bloody record of the past, and from the fact that the offer comes from him in whose private apartments hangs suspended the picture of the bloody and dreadful massacre of St. Bartholomew, and who wants his church to pray for "the extirpation of heresy," we can well imagine what it would be if he had the power to work his own will—the loss of which he constantly laments.

The pope claims to be the vicegerent of Jesus Christ on earth. A vicegerent is one filling the lot, or acting in the place of another. His acts are not those prompted by his own volition, but by that of him for, or in the place of, whom he acts. Imagine Jesus the Christ issuing such a proclamation! Such a jubilee bears the stamp, not of the kingdom of heaven, but of the opposite kingdom.

UNDER THE TITLE of "Loan Sharks," the Youth's Companion tells the story of a salesman in a store who, in a pinch, borrowed $50, agreeing to pay 10 per cent usury per month. For two years and a half he put his hard earnings into this conscienceless usurer's coffers at that rate, but was unable to cancel the debt; after paying $150, he still owed the whole amount. In despair of ever gaining his freedom from the robber who was sucking his life-blood, he called in the aid of a lawyer who notified the usurer that he would either have to give a receipt in full for the debt, or fight the matter in court. The receipt was promptly forthcoming. This great educator of the young, although admitting that similar cases are common, had no remedy to propose. It did say that in Chicago, a few employers of labor had provided a fund from which, in case of need, their employes might borrow at a moderate rate of interest.

In the aggregate, far more distress and ruin are caused by low usury, or interest, than by high. Hume, the English historian, says that the term interest was invented to take the curse from the word usury. All increase paid for the use of money or other valuables—in the language of the Bible—is usury, and is strictly and severely forbidden. The law—as laid down by Jesus—is, "love your enemies and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again."

The money-changers whom Jesus drove out of the temple of God are now the power behind the throne, which rules the whole world. All governments are but the minions that humbly do his bidding, and wait for his law. What Jesus then did was but a type of what he will accomplish for the whole world, when he comes again according to his promise; and we are on the eve of that time, when every bondman shall be loosed, and the slaves of debt shall go free, and all men shall obey the injunction: "Owe no man anything but to love one another."

In the Editorial Perspective.

THE EDITOR.

WORLD-MOVING IMPULSES do not come by chance; they belong to the great human world of development and progress. The forces of doom and of destiny produce results which are inevitable—forces which disintegrate the old and reconstruct the new. Ignorance has led the masses to look upon human affairs as subject to mere chance, and to conclude that the great purpose of life must forever be veiled in mystery; but the great law of the conservation of energy, and the law of relation of mind and matter, not only make it possible to know what destiny is, but by force of aspiration, to make destiny for one's self and for the world. There is nothing that merely drifts; all existence is for a purpose, relative or specific; the universe knows no hap-hazard methods, no chance, no accidents. We note the growth of a plant; the activities there are toward a common end—the production of the seed, the perpetuity of life. Great movements in humanity are as much in accordance with immutable law as are the activities in any other domain of existence. Christianity has been a great world-moving power; it involved in its Head all the mighty power of Christendom. It began not only with an idea, but with a Man; no mere conception was back of that great impulse which has swept civilization—there were substance and force that went out from the personality of the Messiah. If we were to measure that great volume of energy which has stirred the world of progress for nineteen centuries, and reduce it to terms of mechanical force, we would write billions of horse-power! What a great fire was that which consumed the Messiah, who disseminated himself, his substance, into the minds of millions! The enemies of the Messiah could not foresee the results of his work; who among them expected, when the Man was executed as a criminal, that His name would become the most familiar on human tongue? But Jesus knew what the result would be, and he inspired his disciples with his hope. The dispensation of the life of Jesus in humanity has reached its end; the time has come for another world-moving impulse. Now, as nineteen hundred years ago, the enemies of truth can see nothing powerful in the organization which promulgates the new Gospel: but there is a potent force in religion, and it has surprised the people of past ages. That great volume of force which has moved the world during the Christian dispensation, is not lost—the law of the conservation of energy forbids that it should be. The energies of a plant are not lost when the stalk dies, but are saved in the living seed. At the close of every dispensation there is a seeding-up, a souling-up, of the forces of world-moving impulses. Koreshanity is the fruit of the dispensation, and involves all that power which was expressed in Christendom, with added volume and voltage due to activities in the great battery of the cross, the poles of which are connected by unbroken lines of transmission through the centuries. Koreshanity is the great religious, moral, and social factor of destiny. Divine Genius has stamped its character upon the face of the Napoleon of Reform, in whose career there will be no Waterloo, but ultimate success in the establishment of the great Universal Empire, which the forces of destiny make inevitable!

We have noted with interest the prolonged discussion of Koreshanity in the Baltimore American, first, because the representative of Koreshanity in its columns has so ably acquitted himself, and second, because the weakness of the Copernican side of the question was so apparent. We congratulate the editor of the Baltimore American upon the impartial manner in which he treated the discussion, and his manifest fairness to the Koreshan System. Thousands of people in Baltimore and vicinity have been entertained for several weeks past on the subjects of astronomy and theology; and doubtless many of them have been interested in the presentation of the Cellular Cosmogony and Koreshan Theology. The representative of the other side is a member of a scientific society of Baltimore; he perhaps did his best to defend the popular system; and the utter failure on his part to present any proof of the earth's convexity, or to overthrow a single Koreshan argument, is bound to have its influence. In a recent issue of THE FLAMING SWORD, we replied to his attack on our conclusions from the basis of actual experiments; the admission was made that we appeared to have a good foundation. In the last effusion, it was remarked that "the stress they put on the experiment of projecting an 'air line' by means of this apparatus, led me to believe that there might be some reasonable ground for their broad assertions." In other words, in face of the facts which demonstrate the Koreshan Cosmogony, he felt that his own foundation was very insecure, and feared the results! His last article is accompanied by a diagram purporting to show "the absurdity of the Cellular Cosmogony," by endeavoring to make the Copernican idea of straight visual lines fit the Koreshan Cosmogony; thus the difficulty was to get the sun to rise and set on the horizon. The astronomer's trick is to ignore visual curvilineation and perspective foreshortening, and employ the additional assumption that light is propagated in straight lines in the atmosphere!

It is frequently asked how we know that a sea of hydrogen is situated above our atmosphere. We know it, first, from the basis of analogy—the three atmospheric heavens of the physical world correspond to the three mental heavens in humanity. The fact that water exists beneath our sea of air, is proof that a sea of hydrogen exists above us. There is no free hydrogen in the common atmosphere of oxygen and nitrogen; hydrogen is considered as an element, and not a product of any substances which exist in the air—therefore, the great sea of hydrogen, the water-producer, is beyond the atmosphere. Rain descends from above; it is formed in the atmosphere at the point of union between the ascending energies of combustion at the junction of water and air, and the descending energies of combustion which takes place at the junction of the seas of air and hydrogen. Without the sea of hydrogen above us there could be no rain, snow, nor hail, nor any water upon the earth. It is a well-known fact in the scientific world, that in nearly all meteoric fragments, occluded hydrogen—that is, hydrogen shut up or sealed in the fragments—is found. What is the source of this hydrogen? The latest conclusion of the scientists is, that the upper strata of our atmosphere may consist largely of hydrogen; but it is rather difficult to conceive of how hydrogen enters into union with oxygen, however attenuated, and yet retains its own specific gravity. In order to account for the simplest phenomena of Nature, the scientists must ultimately accept the Koreshan Cosmogony as superior to their own; in the conclusion that there is hydrogen at the upper surface of our air, the scientists are coming nearer the Koreshan conclusion reached thirty years ago. The scientific conclusion is the Koreshan one—a conclusion which explains more, accounts for more phenomena, and one which is susceptible of direct demonstration.

Considerable excitement has been aroused in the discussion at the New York Methodist conference, concerning christian science. One of the Methodist ministers has accepted the doctrines of Mrs. Eddy, and this fact stirred up the hostile spirit of Dr. Buckley, who holds that christian science "is to be opposed because it denies and ridicules all other doctrines, even that of morals, for which the Methodist church stands. It denies the personality of God; it denies the Deity of Jesus Christ, his vicarious atonement, and the power of prayer as appealing to a personal God." The Methodist clergymen should have no quarrel with the christian scientists on theology; both creeds hold to the existence of a great universal spirit, a finely diffused essence which fills all space. On the ground of absurdity, Methodism is no better than Eddyism; the Methodist discipline emphatically declares that God has no body and no parts. This would preclude any logical conception of personality, because personality must have body and parts. The word person is from the Latin persona, which means mask or covering. If God has no mask nor covering, he has no personality; but if he has personality, then he is not a great spirit which occupies all space. The doctrines of the Methodists concerning God preclude the possibility of their believing in the Godhood and Godhead of Jesus the Christ, because if God has neither body nor parts, Jesus, who was a personality, would be unlike God in nature and form, and therefore could not be divine. God Almighty in his perfection is the Man; the Gospels declare it, and the records of the life and character of Jesus stand as opposed to every modern conception of Deity but the Koreshan theology, which is the revelation of Deity in humanity.

The Koreshan idea of the soul cannot be grasped apart from the principles of Koreshan Alchemy. The common conception that matter is wholly inert, leads to the conception that the body of man is a mere machine in which the soul operates; hence the many erroneous conclusions concerning the possibility of the soul existing independently of matter. Matter is of so much consequence in the economy of human life, that the kind and quality of matter in human flesh are exact correlates of the degree and state of the inherent mentality. The mind is inseparably connected with the body; consciousness is the result of the interdependent relations which exist between human spirit and matter. There are two extreme views taught concerning the nature of man, one of which we have mentioned; the other is the materialistic view, which makes matter the all in all. The truth lies between the two extremes. Substance in two general states makes up the man. Mentality is not lost when the personality enters corruptible dissolution; it passes over into other minds as spiritual entities. The mind of man is not a homogeneous something; it is comprised of definite thoughts or entities,—for every thought is a spiritual being. There is no mind which does not contain entities that have existed in other personalities, living and dead. Mind is transmitted, and life is propagated from generation to generation. This makes re-embodiment inevitable, the ultimate of which is the final perfection of the most progressive elements of the human universe—and that perfection is the resurrection from the mortal planes, or the attainment of immortality in the flesh, in the natural world.

W. T. Stead, the editor of the English Review of Reviews, is an advocate of peace, and has a plan which he hopes to have put into execution; his effort supplements the chimerical scheme of the Czar, which signally failed. But for the success of his plan, Stead fears universal war; he sees complications in the Orient which may lead to the disaster of nations. We maintain that the coming crisis, the impending revolution, is inevitable; this has been specifically an age of war, and revolution must end the dispensation. No peace plan will be successful until the conflicting elements which do not now unite through affinity, shall be prepared for unity through the fires of revolution. The Koreshan Prophet has for thirty years been warning the world of the terrible consequences of the present perverted order of things, pointing out the great fact that if the doctrines of Jesus and his Apostles are accepted as true, their prophecies concerning the greatest crisis and revolution of all history must be fulfilled. The signs of the times indicate that the end of the age is at hand; and the course of events is in the direction of world-wide conflict—the present tendency to concentration in the field of human activity is but the formation of the great and irresistible vortex which will raze the institutions of an age of corruption, and make room for the structures of the New Age.

THE FLAMING SWORD is making a collection of illustrations and cartoons, representing the hollow globe and the fact that we live on the inside. For several years past we have noticed the tendency of advertisers to picture their wares inside of a globe, as a fitting illustration of their claim to having "the best in the world." One advertiser places a picture of his new light in the center of a globe, representing the earth; a number of typewriter concerns place their machines within the picture of the shell. The phrase "in the world" is in conflict with the usual conception, and it is a striking fact that advertisers can find nothing so appropriate in the popular system. No doubt it would be interesting to our readers to preserve all that they see in this line; the pictures are found mostly in advertisements in the magazines, and occasionally in cartoons. It would contribute to the purpose we have in view, if our readers would kindly mail such illustrations to us for display and possible publication.

The Chinese situation continues to be a problem for the powers; there is much quibbling and quarreling over the question of indemnity, and the basis of future relations of China and the nations. The unsettled state of affairs gives the powers excuse for taking steps toward ultimate division of the celestial empire. The old dragon is in the throes, harassed by the greatest nations of civilization. Russia has taken the lead in seizing Chinese territory; and the Czar retains possession despite the protests of Japan. The attitude of Japan toward Russia is defiant; and from the basis of newspaper reports, it appears that war, beginning with Japan and Russia, may spread to all the powers interested in the Oriental situation. The peace advocates observe the lowering barometer with alarm; a storm is approaching, and many national ships of state are unseaworthy.

An astrologer writing in the Sphinx, concerning the heritage of Abraham and the destiny of Israel, declares that "The Shiloh of Jacob and the sphinx of the heavens are the key to the secret of Israel, and the Shiloh is now at the autumnal equinox. The Scriptures say that Abraham shall have his heritage restored to him, and Israel shall come from the east and from the west." The conclusion that Shiloh is at the autumnal equinox is founded upon an interpretation of the sphinx of Egypt. In view of this, is it nothing that the Founder of Koreshanity, the Shiloh of prophecy, was born under the sign Libra, which is the autumnal equinoctial sign?

The fact that the entities of the human soul continue their consciousness after the dissolution of the body, is no proof of their immortality; and the endeavor of Prof. Hyslop and others to prove the immortality of the soul of the mortal man will prove futile. Neither is embodiment of the soul from generation to generation, any evidence of its immortality. Mortality is that state of human life in which there are breaks in the continuity of consciousness, and loss of memory of past embodiments. There is no immortality in the present dual state of man; immortality is the biune state—male and female in one form, with correlate mental faculties and functions.

The wealthy classes have the legal right to dispose of their wealth in any way they choose; but there is something morally wrong about the manner in which modern wealth is wasted. Money is made to gratify the slightest caprice or whim, while the needs of the needy remain unsupplied. A New York woman set aside the sum of $10,000 under her will, for the support of a small dog and a canary bird. The dog has lived for years in luxury, his blood enriched by the choicest chops and steaks cooked to order, and his life made sweet with chocolate creams and macaroons; and now that his mistress has departed, he falls heir to a fortune.

"Law is not eternal. Law exists only so long as man manipulates it," concludes an agnostic editor. Wherever there is activity there is law, for law is but the mode or rule of action. The foundation of all law—the origin of all motion and the source of all impulse—is the perfect man; but it so happens that law is as eternal as the universe, for the universe itself is governed according to law. No man ever made a law; he may discover a law and obey it, but he cannot change it nor manipulate it. Law inheres in being; there never was a time in all the cycles of progress when law did not prevail throughout all the domains of existence.

There is no bondage in the true religious bond of unity—there is the utmost freedom in the tie that binds heart to heart and soul to soul. The members of the physical organism have their natural liberty, though they are bound to the body by strong ligatures; detached, the limbs would have no freedom at all—they would be dead and useless. Cut the body into pieces, and one views the ghastly picture of individualism; look at the man with radiant face and vigorous life, and a lesson on the order and harmony of the perfect society and government may be learned.

Copernicus invented the first flying-machine; in his imagination, the earth was a huge air-ship, and the idea that all human beings take annual excursions around the sun by way of exploring celestial space, has fascinated the masses for the past three centuries. The up-to-date idea in the scientific world, is that the earth is an automobile; but the source of its energy of locomotion is a mystery to the astronomer!

Communism involves the central spirit of socialism; the true form of socialism must develop from a communistic center. All development is from a nucleus, a central germ or cell. Growth is from within; the coming social order must have its germ of evolution. The democratic idea of socialism is superficial and circumferential; it does not touch the basic principles of the religious soul and life of man.

Modern healers who endeavor to imitate the works of Jesus the Messiah, pervert both method and motive. Jesus never taught a fallacy, neither did he charge his patients money for actual cures; he told the truth, and became the free servant of humanity.

A daily suggests that city money and church schools should be kept apart. Is it because of the corrupting influence of money, or is it dangerous to leave money in the reach of ecclesiastical educators?

Tunnels and the Earth's Shape.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Enclosed please find sheet from the Baltimore American of the 7th inst. I will greatly appreciate it if you will kindly answer the queries which I have therein asked you. I can only say that whilst detecting errors in your statements, I am very desirous of doing all in my power to have the experiment tried—that of extending a straight line from a plumb-line, and comparing it with the surface of a body of water. If you will kindly elucidate the points made and answer requests for information, possibly it may be in my power to aid in having the experiment tried in irrefutable form.—E. S., Philadelphia, Pa.

The communication referred to belongs properly to the discussion which has been conducted in the Baltimore American; and this discussion has, by action of the editor of that daily, been closed; and space in THE FLAMING SWORD is too limited to print the communication and reply in details we cannot continue a newspaper discussion. In the communication, it is said that we erred regarding grade tunnels; we are asked to describe the exact work of driving a tunnel 8 or 9 miles in length through solid rock; and to decide whether a tunnel could be used for testing the shape of the earth.

The main point of our former reply to our inquirer is admitted—that tunnels are in reality arcs of great circles, conforming to the curvature of the earth, whether convex or concave; but for the purpose of showing that we know or do not know anything about tunnels, we are expected for the benefit of one inquirer and critic, to convert THE FLAMING SWORD into a journal of engineering. The thought we had in mind when we said that there are few grade tunnels, was that there are few tunnels existing which would nearly approach a straight line, and thus constitute grades by reason of being out of level or conformity to the earth's curvature; it was this kind we had in mind, rather than tunnels which are graded for purposes of convenience in connecting road-beds upon open surface. No matter how many or how few grade tunnels there may be, the fact remains that the methods of survey would make the long tunnels conform to the earth's arc, the grade making the curvature of the tunnel-bed more or less than the actual curvature of the earth.

Coming directly to the point on which information is desired, let us imagine that we are at the mouth of a long tunnel, with instruments ready for observation, by way of proposed test of the earth's curvature. The first thing to be done would be to test the actual curvature of the tunnel; this would be absolutely essential before we could definitely and correctly relate its curvature to the curvature of the earth. By what means could this be determined? The tunnel has been surveyed by optical and leveling processes, and if optical tests be employed, the experimenters might know as little when they completed the test as when they began, so far as the actual direction of the curvature of the tunnel is concerned, unless they could come to a definite understanding of the true principles of optics.

Hence, at the outset, the survey of a straight line would be necessary to test the tunnel; and we contend that the surest means of testing the earth's surface is not by the indirect tunnel route, but by the direct route of the air line related, not to the artificial surface of the tunnel-bed, but to the natural surface of water, which must conform to the curvature and contour of the earth itself. The tunnel experiment would necessarily be complicated, and would require a complete going-over of the specifications of the original survey and work of excavation. The surface of water is the simplest basis of reference; and the irrefutable test of that surface is the air line, by whatever processes it is possible to survey it. We have surveyed such a line, and know what the result of every other experiment will be, conducted in accordance with the same general principles.

The idea of looking through a tunnel to determine whether it curves convexly or concavely is on a par with the many experiments suggested to us, such as stakes, lights, signals, etc., viewed over long distances. If there were no refraction nor perspective, perhaps such tests might prove satisfactory. On the basis of appearances the Copernican system was established. Optical illusions can never constitute a scientific test of the earth's shape, without a comprehension of the laws of vision.

Seven Planets and Twelve Signs.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I am a reader of THE FLAMING SWORD, and am very much interested in Koreshanity. I have found but one question thus far that has not been fully and completely answered: There have been seven Messiahs, beginning with Adam, and ending with the Messiah of this age. I have understood that a Messenger comes into the world about every 2,000 years, which would make twelve in a cycle of 24,000 years, instead of seven. Please explain.—H. C. C., Springfield, Mass.

The great cycle of 24,000 years is divided into twelve parts, each part being about 2,000 years in length. These divisions correspond to the twelve signs in the earth, and the twelve constellations in the physical heavens. A month of the great Mazzarothic year is thus found to be 2,000 common years; each month is a dispensation of time; and at the end of every such month, there matures in humanity a specific kind of fruit or product of mental and physical development and progress. This fruit is the fruit of the Tree of Life, which bears twelve kinds of fruit during the cycle—a different kind of fruit each month.

It is also true that during the Zodiacal year there are seven Messiahs, corresponding to the seven planets. From these Messiahs or human planets, proceed the "seven Spirits of God" as a result of the seven successive translations or theocrasies. Each of the seven Messiahs performs a special function through the baptism of seven churches. The Messiahs belong to the order of masculine manifestations of Deity in humanity; some of them are central manifestations, and some are circumferential; but not all of them stand at the head of new dispensations as fruit of the old. Abraham was the beginning of the Jewish dispensation; while he was a manifestation of Deity, he was not a Messiah or a baptizer of a following. Moses was a Messiah, but he did not end an old dispensation nor begin a new one; and the same may be said of Elijah—the two Messiahs appearing in the same dispensation, of which Jesus was the fruit. Adam, Enoch, Noah, and Jesus stood at the beginning of dispensations.

So, at least four dispensations began with Messianic manifestations, leaving eight dispensations yet to be accounted for. The fact is, that while there is a representative character at the close of every dispensation, who ushers in a new dispensation, such a character, representing the fruit of a dispensation of progress, is not necessarily Messianic. During the Golden Age, the specific representative manifestations will be feminine, and they will belong to the order of the divine Maternity; while different orders of the Sons of God will constitute the fruit of successive dispensations. Thus it may be seen that the "twelve manner of fruit" are comprised of Messiahs who stand at the head of dispensations; manifestations of the divine Motherhood, and orders of the Sons of God.

The Reign of Subjugation.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Kindly inform me who is meant by "he" in the first instance in I Cor. xv: 25; also "he" in the second place. The verse is as follows: "For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." Some persons with whom I have conversed on the subject, contend that the correct interpretation is, "For he [satan] must reign till he [Jesus Christ] hath put all enemies under his feet." From the context, it appears to me that it refers to the Christ in both instances. The people who interpret it as above are known as Christian Israelites.—S. E. M., Bethlehem, Pa.

When Jesus, to whom all power in heaven and in earth was given, entered his church, he began his descent into the hells, to institute a reign of subjugation. He declared martial law in hades, and the church of this age has been the church militant in both the natural and spiritual worlds. The work and war of subjugation were to continue until he who had the authority and power should put all enemies under his control and destroy death; then would come the Christ's amplification into the Fatherhood, and the Father, under his new name, would inherit the throne and begin the reign of righteousness, which is made possible through the reign of Jesus in the hells. Consequently, "he," in both instances, refers to Jesus. The interpretation referred to is wholly inadmissible from a grammatical as well as a logical standpoint; the word satan, the supposed antecedent, does not occur in the Apostle's consideration of the subject in I Cor. xv. Jesus came to establish a spiritual kingdom which would, through its aggression against the powers of evil, ultimate in the manifestation of that kingdom in external form in the external affairs of man. Jesus was that kingdom in its least form; wherever he went, there the kingdom was; and it is conspicuous even in the Apostle's Creed, that Jesus "descended into hell."

In every member of the body of the early church there began to be formed a new Christ, through processes of regeneration. The beginning of the actual cross of the Christ with mortal human stock, was the beginning of the warfare of spiritual powers in the domain of mortality. "He who knew no sin," he who was perfect in his own divine nature, "was made to be sin for us;" he entered the conditions of mortal corruption through his descent into the race during the Christian dispensation, that he might "bring captivity captive and give good gifts to men," when he had completed his work of subjugation—even of death itself, the last enemy.

Flat-Globe Map of the World.

▲ Geographical Novelty Especially Useful to Students of Koreshan University.

One of the most convenient things we have seen in the geographical line, has just been published by the International Globe Company, Continental National Bank Building, 218 LaSalle street, Chicago. It is a new idea, and one destined to become popular. We have one of them in our office, and are much pleased with it.

It is something new in the geographical line. It is called the "Flat-Globe," because on each side of a circular disc is printed the map of a hemisphere of the earth—the picture of a half sphere. The disc is 28 inches in diameter; so that there is represented on the surfaces all that can be shown on a globe 28 inches in diameter; and a globe this size is not only considered valuable, but comes at a very high price—not less than $100.

The difference between $100.00 and $2.00, the price of the Flat-Globe and Manual, is decidedly in favor of the Flat-Globe.

There are some advantages in the Flat-Globe, chief among which is that one sees a whole hemisphere at a glance, while a globe must be turned from side to side. One gets a better idea of the relation of continents, islands, seas, etc., from the Flat-Globe surface than from the rotund surface of a globe, where the arc curves away from the eye. The hemispherical projection is decidedly the best in the world for geography, because on such a projection there is less distortion and exaggeration. The main objection to Mercator's projection,—while it is popular and convenient for representing the entire surface of the earth in one view,—is the extreme exaggeration of the degrees of longitude north and south of the equator, making the upper portions of North America and Asia very much out of shape and enlarged beyond all reason, and nearly beyond recognition! The nearest approach to the Flat-Globe map is Christopher's circular projection; in it the exaggeration is not so noticeable, for it is entirely in the south, where the continents run to points. On the Flat-Globe basis there is no exaggeration, for the projection is very true to Nature.

One great objection to the convex globe map, is that one can see in correct shape only so much of the surface at one glance as lies nearly at right angles to the visual rays. This objection is pointed out by the publishers of the Flat-Globe map. We are inclined to believe that they would think favorably of the Hollow-Globe map for this reason—that with a large Hollow-Globe map, with the eye near the center, there would be absolutely no exaggeration of any part; for as the eye turns to view the different portions, they would all be at right angles to the visual rays. The Hollow-Globe map is absolutely true to nature, and with it come many conveniences for geographical purposes.

However, in the line of printed sheet maps, the Flat-Globe map of the world is the very next thing to the actual Hollow-Globe map. The way in which the meridians are drawn makes the Flat-Globe map appear concave; and it is better suited for use by Koreshans in the study of Universology, than to those who see in their mind's eye, the convex earth. The Flat-Globe is printed in 7 colors; a hemisphere on each side of the disc 28 inches in diameter, arranged so that it can be suspended from the ceiling, the chandelier, or hung on the wall; and in any case, it can be easily turned over for views of the sides.

That which appears on the surface is not simply the map of countries, with names of political divisions, rivers, etc., but contains additional features of great value. It shows the ocean currents, steamship routes, the world's comparative time, the zones, etc. The Manual accompanying the Flat-Globe explains the globe, tells how to compute longitude and time, gives various useful tables, and a number of lessons on geographical principles; it describes each country shown on the map, gives statistics, population, chief characteristics, commercial advantages, etc., of each nation.

We commend this new Flat-Globe map to our readers; and we have described it thus at length, because it is unique and useful. By use of it the face of the earth becomes familiar, and one better understands the news of the world and the commercial and other relations of races and people, by knowing where they are. It should be in the home, in the office, in the school, and in the place of business. A circular describes the Flat-Globe map and Manual; and as many of our readers as are interested in this geographical novelty, should request circular from the publishers, mentioning THE FLAMING SWORD as the magazine in which they saw this editorial review.

Lecture by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanity will deliver a Lecture on Koreshan Universology, Sunday, 3:30 p. m., April 28, 1901, at Koreshan Hall, 4th floor, 315-19 Englewood ave., Chicago.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in advanced thought.

The Destiny of America.

The Coming Freedom of the West from the Abnormal Conditions of Society; Personal Advent of the Deliverer.

Intemperance, we shall all agree, is a complex and many-sided question, upon which good men differ regarding the proper limits of prohibitory laws, and the personal rights and liberty of the citizen. From my point of view, the following facts and propositions give a fair summary of the situation.

1. Our whole social environment, with its economic and commercial system, is abnormal; and its working details are not only hostile to moral motives, but are a direct encouragement to fraud, injustice, hypocrisy, and intensely provocative of public disorder. Our modern competitive life, with its accompanying love of money and enforced poverty of the masses, induces such a general and widespread mental strain, nervous exhaustion, depression, worry, and anxiety, even to the verge of mental and physical collapse, that an insatiable craving for stimulants is the inevitable outcome.

All crave and nearly all people use stimulants in some form. Those who escape the destructive effects of alcohol and morphine use tobacco, tea, or coffee, or at least a still less stimulating meat diet; and this craving for stimulants will persist as long as our present form of social life endures. Moreover, all our commercial interests trend in this direction of vice, and the "love of money" is the tap-root of this upas tree, which, like weeds, flourish green and perennial without cultivation. It is common knowledge that every public man is tempted to compound with sin to the extent he mixes with public affairs. The "Golden Calf" is set up in the temple where the people worship.

Mrs. Nation may smash decanters, but she must go to jail when she shatters the plate glass window where rum is sold, for that is the sacred property of our modern business man.

2. Thus a thousand forces and agencies, which form the warp and woof of our modern competitive life, are so many links in an infernal chain which gall and fret and divide society into mutually hostile clans and warring factions, from which one feels to totally isolate oneself, if he would escape from the prevailing strife which already reaches every hamlet and neighborhood, and inverts society and social life from the divine purpose for which they were instituted.

Now, the attempt to strike out one of the links in this "devil's chain," while all the others are at full tension, only has the effect to transfer the force of that link to all the others; and while the vicious force is in no wise diminished, it assumes illusive shapes and crops up in more subtle and destructive forms. The causes lie deep and embrace the whole superstructure of modern society. The tares are in the wheat, and will remain there until the Master comes to "reap the field." I am free to confess that I have no faith in current methods of reform, which fall far behind the fearful pace with which vice and fraud are hastening to a world-crisis!

3. I therefore interpret the situation and general outlook in a unique fashion. I confess I have not the faith of former days in the collective sovereignty of a partially degenerate commonwealth, and have reached the firm conviction that modern society is powerless of itself to transform its environment and effect its own liberation. Yet, I am no pessimist, but take a very hopeful view of the future—of the near future. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." When our beloved America shall reach the vortex toward which it is surely drifting, and when the crisis at last reaches us (there will be a few preliminary instalments), then that infernal chain above described will be broken and its unholy links will be utterly scattered and dissipated—not through ordinary evolutionary reform and growth, but by the interposition of a factor which is now hidden and unseen, namely, the personal advent of the great Law-Giver, who will overturn the old Order and institute a New Order, and a New Social environment, in which the ordinary motives of life will tend as inevitably toward justice, temperance, cleanliness, chastity, and righteous living, as they now tend to fraud, oppression, greed, dissipation, and to all the degrading forms of the self-life, which arrays every man against his neighbor. That impending crisis is the gulf in which our present inverted form of social life, with its brood of vices, will be swallowed up! And when the great travail is over, I fully expect the Law-Giver will seize the American Commonwealth, and reconstruct it on the model of the "Stone" which was rejected by the builders, and constitute it the first in the series of reconstructed nations.—PROF. E. WHIPPLE, in San Diegan Sun, March 22, 1901.

Failure of the Church.

The London "Christian World" Points out Some Blunders and Failures of Christendom.

LONDON, April 6.—Staid church of England men and women are upset in the midst of Eastertide rejoicings over the demand of the Christian World for "dramatic religion." That long-established organ of conservative churchmen devotes its Easter greeting to an earnest plea for a religion "which shall appeal to the eye, ear, and imagination of the people." It asserts that Christianity enters the twentieth century degenerated into a mere faith for the elite, and that it needs a coat of picturesqueness to bring it in touch with the masses. It calls for the rejection of puritanism and the substitution of some of the spectacular features so common in the Salvation Army. The Christian World goes on to say:

"We are face to face with the query whether the current Protestant conception of religion fully represents human need, especially the need of our day. Puritanism, with its stern simplicity, its inwardness, its lofty spirituality, is not the religion of the people. We have refined our idea of worship, but in so doing we have put it ever further and more remote from average human nature.

"Religion is a drama. The apocalypse is essentially dramatic. Had John Bunyan preached the doctrine of 'The Pilgrim's Progress' as a sermon, we should hardly have heard of it. He dramatized it, and the story became a world possession. The Salvation Army, the history of which is the most courageous attempt of our time to reach the unchurched masses, has in its methods frankly allied itself to the dramatic instinct.

"The simple truth is that under modern methods people have lost religion. Whereas of old everybody was religious, we have now a lofty faith for the intellectual and aristocratic, while the vast outside world goes its way untouched. We have rarefied the religious atmosphere until a plain man cannot breathe in it, but must hasten away to a stratum better adapted to his lungs.

"We have defrauded the masses by offering to their infant souls a pabulum only suited to grown-up men. We have made a prodigious blunder in declaring that the mental and moral faculties are the only roads into the kingdom of God, ignoring the highways of men's active and dramatic faculties, along which for ages countless hosts of simpler souls have traveled toward Christ. It must be our task to bridge the gulf which yawns between religion and common life. That task is to find the true nexus between the higher faith and the people's heart, and to lift our civilization with all its wealth of new acquisition once more into the light of God."

Easter finds London depopulated of every resident able to enjoy a holiday. The country retreats, the seaside, and the continent have taken numberless thousands of fashionable people out of town, with the result that in the battle between the churches and the transportation lines, the victory rests with those who cater to the physical rather than to the spiritual invigoration of the crowd. Many metropolitan pulpits will ring tomorrow with denunciation of this desertion of worship for pleasure.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Dummy Watch.

Prof. Totten Writes of its Marvels and Secrets in an Interesting Number of News-Leaflet.

There has been considerable discussion lately regarding the "dummy-watch," or why the watchmakers' sign has the hands indicating 18½ minutes past 8; and the controversy has induced Prof. Totten to look into the matter. He considers it a marvel in its way, as he claims that it unfolds many secrets; it explains the Zodiac, gives the date of the Nativity, and trisects the circle according to geometric principles.

In the April number of the News-Leaflet he discusses these problems in an interesting manner, and even claims that it locates the Garden of Eden, and that it is possible to tell the time of day to the minute by use of the dummy-watch; incredible as it may seem, perhaps it is possible, on much the same principle that the points of the compass may be located by a common watch. We have been interested in Prof. Totten's treatment of these problems, and we have no doubt our readers would be entertained by the April number of News-Leaflet, which is illustrated by a number of diagrams, the first being that of the signs and constellations, the progress of the signs through the constellations, and their relation to history. The price of this number of News-Leaflet is 20 cents; and accompanying it is a small pocket device, a disc, with revolving dial, indicating the time of day for any part of the earth at any given time; the price of this disc is 10 cents extra.

There is nothing in Prof. Totten's writings that is particularly antagonistic to Koreshanity. He is a mathematician, and deals mostly with chronological subjects, which is his specialty. He is opposed to modern higher criticism; and we like the spirit in which he sets himself to defend the Bible. There is an astrological phase of his conceptions, and his practical astronomy, as related to chronology, is good and valuable to students of Koreshanity.

We have always endeavored to treat him and his works fairly; he has not yet come to see much truth in Koreshanity, though if he could see any of it he could see much, because of his faculty of grasping the peculiar relation of things and principles. We have never hesitated to commend his works to our readers; they interest us, and we can see that he accomplishes good in a general way. Address, Our Race Publishing Co., New Haven, Conn.

Prof. Hyslop on Spirits.

Communications through Mediums Trivial in Nature and Confused in Expression.

The March number of Harper's Magazine contains an article by Professor James H. Hyslop, in which he discusses the nature of life after death. He continues to believe that the so called spirit communications received through the mediumship of Mrs. Piper are genuine, but his attempts to prove the existence of disembodied spirits from such data are, as usual, unsatisfactory. In this case he confines himself largely to an attempt to explain why the supposed spirits never send any messages worth hearing. He admits that all these alleged communications are trivial in nature and confused in expression, yet he still thinks they come from spirits.

Why should the communications of an intelligent and educated man become inane and disjointed after he has shuffled off the mortal coil? Professor Hyslop admits the force of the world's skeptical ridicule on this point, so he has set about formulating a theory that will save the reputations of the platitudinous spirits, and fortify his position as a believer in spirit communications. He says the ghosts have a harder task than we realize. In their new state they live amid conditions so utterly different from those of earthly life that it is impossible for us to understand anything they may say about those conditions. We get all our ideas through our senses, and can never hope to understand a world in which the physical senses play no part. If the spirit life could be described in our language, it would not be another and transcendental life. If described in some language of its own, we cannot hear or understand the ideas sought to be conveyed.

But there remains the question why the supposed spirits cannot intelligently talk about their own experiences on the earth. Professor Hyslop admits that the alleged communications of this kind are hazy, trivial, and unreliable. He quotes messages received through Mrs. Piper, claiming to be from his father, his uncle, and other persons he had known in life. They all show confusion of mind. To meet this troublesome phenomena, he puts forth a theory that spirits cannot communicate with us unless they are in an abnormal spirit state, equivalent to hypnotism or somnambulism in the earthly life. He cites the fact that a similar confusion of ideas attends ordinary hypnosis. The gist of this theory is, that spirits must be in a state of partial unconsciousness in order to communicate; but the vagaries of secondary consciousness during hypnosis will probably account for all sincere utterances of so called mediums.—Chicago Tribune.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY

Founded by Koresh (Dr. Cyrus R. Teed),
A. D. 1870.

THE EARTH is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Sun, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth constituting the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY conforms with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, and the pattern of the new order of Human Society.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of univocal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communitic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

Wage Slavery and Industrial Liberty.

Two Antithetical Conditions Which have to do with Human Discipline and Progress; the Curse of Competism and Impending Woe; Organic Socialism.

WAGE SLAVERY is the direct and legitimate product of the competitive system of world-wide practice. The fact that it exists, and has existed for ages, is sufficient proof that it has obtained from a necessity residing in eternal and inevitable law. It is necessarily one of the factors of that discipline which every man attaining to divine Sonship must have experienced. It does not follow, because it is essential as a factor in the processes of development into life, that the men who are wage slaves today must remain wage slaves tomorrow and forever. Wage slavery is the curse which was pronounced in the beginning of the declension (fall) of man. This curse will culminate with a woe equally pronounced and emphatic. The curse has been defined by the writer of Genesis; the woe was predicted by John the inspired Revelator.

Nothing can exist throughout the universe, which does not have its antithetical correspondent; and wage slavery is the correspondential antithet or opposite of industrial liberty. As long as the warfare wages between the employer and his hireling, so long will there be wage slavery, and so long will the wage slave be robbed of the products of his industry. The contention for higher wages is a confession on the part of the wage slave, of the rights of his oppressor to the lion's share of his productions. The demand should not be, "give us higher wages and shorter hours," but, "we demand our share of the results of our coöperation in the productions of industry, and we demand that the hours of industry be so reduced that our efforts to enrich the world shall be to us one of the sources of our recreation."

Centralization of Conflicting Powers.

The great combinations of wealth made to control the commercial and industrial systems of the world, have in view the purpose of the few to dominate the many; and there can be no question as to the mental attitude of the men skilled in the control of the great affairs of the human race. They say: "We are the natural and legitimate custodians of all human interests, for we have demonstrated our ability to manage extensive enterprises, to accumulate the proceeds of aggregate labor, and to skilfully manipulate its control." The centralization of the money power is one of the inevitable consequences of the competitive system. The centralization of the power of the wage slave is another equally pronounced and fatal determination. It seems to be quite natural for men to take one or the other side of this contention, the breach of which broadens as time elapses; but both sides are wrong; both are the result of a false conception of rights and methods of correction. There is much talk of needed reform but the world requires no reformation; a radical revolution and a new world are the demand of the hour.

The responsibility of wage slavery resides as much with the masses who accept the situation and divide the spoils with the thief, as with the employer and robber trust which are often charged with the entire guilt of the curse of competition. The masses who wear the chains they themselves forge, are as much wedded to the competitive abomination as the men who profit by the curse. The cause of the wage slavery curse has its source deep in the very constitution and condition of the human soul; it resides in selfishness, greed, destitution of the love of God, and therefore of the love of men.

Are we in sympathy with the oppressed or with the oppressor? Do we espouse the cause of the robber trust, or shall we enter the ranks of the labor unions? One course or the other seems to suggest itself to the superficial thinker as the only alternative; but the righteous course is wide of either of these factions to the great controversy now pending, and to finally result in the catastrophe of Gog and Magog. The labor union is one of the most dangerous and stupendous menaces to constitutional government and individual liberty which the twentieth century has to confront. It is founded upon, because it believes in the competitive curse; and it is as criminal to support its claims as to encourage the billionaire trust. On the one side, we find the operation of an authorized but false centralization of organic order and power; on the other, all the elements of chaos.

End of the Competitive System.

We would destroy the competitive system by the institution of an industrial order, the very basis of which is a revolution in the souls of men. The employer and employe would cease to exist; there would be no contention for an increase or a reduction of wages; an equitable distribution of all the products of Nature and art would forever settle the controversy. This change from the competitive to the communistic and coöperative order will not come to the world through a gradual evolution, but through a new baptism, the forces of which are conserving and energizing.

The method advocated by the socialists is to agitate the questions of socialism until the masses are in favor of a new social construction; but the diversity of opinion as to the details of operation is so great as to preclude the possibility of any organic arrangement or power. Anarchism is a modification of socialism. "The judgment of all is greater than the judgment of one." "Do away with government; do away with law and order!" Suppose we examine this point from our knowledge of the operations of great enterprises like the conduct of a railroad system. In a railroad combination there may be employed 20,000 men. The judgment of 20,000 men is greater than the judgment of one man, but these 20,000 men must be individualized; each must think for himself, on his own lines, and independently from all the others.

These 20,000—under the impulse of anarchism—will say: "Now, we have attained to that condition in which every man is a law unto himself; let us construct a great railroad with thousands of ramifications, and conduct the system according to the principles laid down by anarchy"—and the 20,000 coöperators start out to construct and manage the road. What would be the result? It does not require two minutes' thought from any person capable of any reasoning power whatsoever, to decide the question; and it would be decided against all the contentions of the anarchist. Anarchism is not to be considered in view of the development of cosmos from the conditions of chaos.

Organic Socialism Must be Imperial.

Socialism, to be organic in the full sense of the word, must be imperial. It does not follow because the imperialisms of the day are of the satanic order, or, more strictly speaking, of the satanic disorder, that there can be no imperialism of a divine order. The form and function of the physical universe are imperial. This is the true pattern of social government for the genuine social order. Organic socialism will not only be imperial, but it will begin with a thoroughly organized, and workable, and working order. It will begin its work in the rough. It will be decidedly pioneer work; and those who are made worthy through generations of experience on the lines of metempsychosis, to submit to the privations and hardships of the nucleus of instalment, will provide for themselves the right to Court positions; for the genuine socialism is the establishment, primarily, of an order of kings and priests unto God.

The divine social order has already begun in earth; its foundations are laid, and its system is in working order. If at any time there has been a stage of experiment, that stage has given way to the one of organic power. Koreshanity as it exists today, is the beginning of the divine Kingdom in earth. It is as absolutely the product of the Christian dispensation, as the Christian age was the product of Judaism. It not only incorporates the fundamental principles of Judaism and Christianity, but whatsoever elements and principles of development the nearly two thousand years of progress and experience the Christian age has added to Judaism and Christianity.

We have reached the time in the history and progress of the world's career, for the establishment of the divine cosmos, but not for the permanency of anarchistic chaos nor democratic socialism. God's Imperialism will take the place of that republico-democratic phase of chaos called government, which provides for the formation of the two great antithetical and conflicting trusts—the billionaire robber and the labor-union murderer. These are the legitimate offspring of the great competitive system of commerce and industry; and through the final onslaught of these two great contending factions and powers of evil will come the catastrophe of Gog and Magog.

Coming of the Immortal Genus.

A New Race of Men to Constitute the Fruit of the Age; Fundamental Truths of Life which Koreshanity Reveals through its Prophet.

WE HAVE CONSTANTLY urged upon our readers the great fundamental truths of Koreshanity, among which is the pronounced fact of the fruition of the age in the new genus or race of men. To that portion of mankind even professing the Christian faith, but who are so rankly material as to ignore the positive teachings of the Lord and his Apostles, this prophetic statement will appear ridiculous. However, we cannot resist—though bringing ourselves into disrepute, ridicule, and persecution—the authoritative mandates of the power by which we are overruled, and which compels us to proclaim the facts of the age.

There is to appear upon the field of human development another race of men. This race is not coming into the world through any slow process of evolution. The changes upon which the new development depends are to be pronounced and sudden. The material for the creation of this new genus is the mortal humanity already in existence. Involved and operative in this change are the laws of metempsychosis, reincarnation, and the dematerialization of the present humanity. We have reiterated our absolute knowledge of the laws and principles of the biologic conflagration, by which is to be brought about this greatest of all transformations through which the world of humanity has passed in twenty-four thousand years. This race of the Sons of God will constitute the reincarnation of those who, 1900 years ago, were impregnated with the Holy Spirit.

We have reached the completion of the cycle; the Christian dispensation is ended, and the fruit of the age will be as we have so often declared—the product of the planting of the Son of God, and therefore his multiplication in men. “To all that believe in his name, gives he power to become the Sons of God.” This prediction is to be literally fulfilled in this world, in this generation; and we are here, appointed of the Almighty, to tell the fact and processes to the world, and to discharge our obligations in the matter without fear or favor. We are commissioned of the Almighty to make this enunciation.

The moral and spiritual degradation of Christendom, the materialism into which universal Christianity has declined, and the tendency of modern culturists to dispute the supernatural powers and processes by which the great Jehovah, through all the ages, has revealed himself to the world, preclude the possibility of a reasonable consideration of the dictates of the modern prophet. The term supernaturalism is taken to be synonymous with the term no law, as it is supposed by many that nothing is supernatural. There is a physical and a metaphysical domain. There is a realm where natural law operates, and there is a sphere of existence where supernatural law pervades and is active. Super means above, hence supernatural would signify above the natural. The forces of the supernatural domain may so operate through electro-magnetic and biological alchemy as to resolve in alchemic fires the humanity which generations of progressive development have prepared for the conflagration.

We know whereof we speak. We know the great conflagration is about to be precipitated, and that no power in heaven, earth, or hell can save the world from its present corruption but the power of the Almighty God, to be wrought through his prodigious miracle of the ages. It is to this end that Koreshanity is serving the world, for it is in the province of the Koreshan order to organize the biologic battery and to institute the processes that will insure the conflagration.

Immortality and the Flaming Sword.

A CERTAIN PERSON in Washington, D.C., claims to have promulgated the doctrines of immortal life in the body, six years before the Founder of Koreshanity enunciated his doctrines and claims. When we first met this person, she claimed to have already reached immortal life in the flesh. We attempted to convince her that she was still as mortal as ever, and that immortality in the flesh had to be attained through the application of certain laws and principles, one of which was that of mental and physical celibacy. Whether she ever attained the conviction that she had not reached the immortal state, we have yet to learn. We have met other people who claimed to have attained the immortal state; others who claimed that there is no mortality, that all is immortal. Of this latter class there are tens of thousands. The fact remains, however, that no person in earth has reached the immortal state. None will ever attain to immortality except through obedience to the Decalogue, scientifically expounded. We were the first to set forth the principles and laws of immortality in the flesh; and furthermore, THE FLAMING SWORD is the only publication in the world which is promulgating the science of immortal life.

THE FLAMING SWORD is the divinely authorized representative of the Flaming Sword which God placed at the East of the Garden of Eden, and which turns every way to keep the way of the Tree of Life. The Flaming Sword of which the publication, THE FLAMING SWORD, is the representative, is the conflagration now about to dissolve the humanity which is rising into the new Eden state. We can afford to bide our time. God waits, we can wait also; but the world will confess that the Prophet has been among its people. Immortality in the body is an assured fact. It will be attained through the observance of the law of God, the law delivered to Moses on the Mountain.

The Flaming Sword.

THE GUIDING STAR Publishing House must have two thousand dollars from outside sources within thirty days. We are giving all our time to the work of revolutionizing the world, to the work of making a new cosmos. We spare no pains to give to the world more than it has heretofore returned. We contend that it is no more than right that our work be sustained by those who profess an interest in it; and we believe also, that we offer in this call for contributions an occasion to manifest a devotion on the part of many who will gladly avail themselves of this opportunity to aid in the promotion of our Cause. This may come in the form of advance subscriptions to THE SWORD, advance payments on literature, on new edition of the Cellular Cosmogony about to be issued, and on the Dictionary of our own scientific vocabulary, with helps to understand the Koreshan System, or as donations.

The Wonders of the Divine Motherhood.

The Glory of Deity to be Revealed in the Unveiling of the Divine Isis; Deity's Rest in the Flesh of His Femininity.

BERTHALDINE, MATRONA.

EVERY FORCE in the universe has a material basis, a footstool upon which to rest, or in which to act. God Almighty, the ultimate union of universal forces, the supreme central mentality, does not rest from his labors in earth, the basis of all his activities, till at-onement is effected with the most involved and complex form of earth, through which he evolves his most elaborate and complex thought as the great material universe. This final resting-place of Deity is the form of the divine Motherhood, the material form of woman.

When the Ark of the Covenant rests in this most holy place, the world that is weary may find the long-sought rest in the Lord our Righteousness. God's rest, this coming Woman, is the divine origin and destiny of all matter, or motherhood, composing the material universe—the pediment or basis of all energies ascending to the Father. Without her the Father could do nothing, for she is Haveh, the mother of all living, in whom alone God can live and move and have his being. God is not, save as all creation serves to perpetuate the fulness of the Godhead bodily, as the seed of the woman. The center is as dependent upon the circumference, as is the circumference upon the center. In the interdependence of Fatherhood and Motherhood in final conjunctive unity, resides the biunity of Deific life.

The Fatherhood of God remained occult till the Man of God arose from the dead to reveal it as his ruling attribute. The Motherhood of God must remain occult, the veiled Isis, till she descends from God out of heaven, a glory to be revealed. Her unveiling, or the revelation of the attribute of Deific Motherhood, will result in the giving of the crown of life to the seed of Abraham, one holy Seed, and the Birth of divine Manhood to all the Gods,—the order of Melchizedek,—of which Eloah Jehovah is High Priest. "Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us, * * * and all the ends of the earth shall fear him." "The tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land." Saith the Lord God: "The flock of my pasture are men, and I am your God."

The revelation of the Motherhood of Deity is the promised revelation of Jehovah's "more excellent glory" to his waiting people, the flock of his pasture—the fruit of the Tree of Life. She, the Lord our Righteousness, will bring forth as her fruit the kingdom of the Gods in earth. The earth is the womb of all Nature, for the reproduction of her arch-natural and supernal glory, in which the Gods have age-lasting, universal dominion.

There are people to whom the science of the divine Motherhood is so occult, that they are as impoverished half orphans, and even worse than fatherless, in that they call Father a bodiless, unknown quantity credited with a decree making adoption "their forlorn hope." Koreshans are not of these lean cattle. The God of Koreshanity is Jehovah—the ultimatum of universal life, who is Father-Mother Deity, holy Seed, in whom all fulness dwells—the living Word which, spoken, is the language of all creation.

Creation silent before Him, betokens the secret presence of her Lord. "Be still and know that I am God," saith the voice of one crying in the wilderness. There came a mighty wind, "but the Lord was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake; but the Lord was not in the earthquake: and after the earthquake a fire; but the Lord was not in the fire;" he was in the "still small voice" of the crying Messenger—the voice of Truth. The Man of God commanded the earth to keep silent before her, that the footsteps of her Creator might be heard; the increase of her Motherhood be brought forth with rejoicing

The science of Koreshanity teaches the Motherhood of Deity; and that Motherhood—the Church Triumphant in the heavens—descends to bring forth from the earth his crown of life, and to restore to his rightful dominion the divine language derived from his spoken Word. Confessing the Motherhood of Deity gives renewed spirit and life to all matter, bringing it into such conjunctive unity with her holy spirit, the science of truth, that spirit and matter are known as one substance in two transmutable conditions—the supreme application of this truth being apprehended by the science of the law of the true cross of Christ.

We know that the flesh of Christ becomes the Spirit of God in humanity, and that the Spirit of God in humanity becomes the flesh of Christ through the mediumship of divinely anointed Womanhood, the Motherhood of God. In the eternal unity of interdependence the Fatherhood and Motherhood of Deity exist, expressing the grace of reciprocity. “Freely ye have received, freely give.”

All is not spirit; all is not matter—all is both. He that confesseth not the coming of Christ in the flesh is antichrist. He that rejects the holy spirit of truth, is but matter dead in trespasses and sins. God materializes as the flesh of Christ, and the flesh of Christ dematerializes to the Spirit of God. No flesh of Christ is now manifest; but its holy Spirit may be spiritually discerned by the rational mind, in the science of truth, whose body of doctrine is that holy city which John saw descending from God out of heaven, adorned as a bride for her husband. No flesh of Christ—the immortal flesh—can be manifest save as a result of the applied science of this doctrine to life.

We must know and apply the science of truth concerning the laws of its reproduction from the soil in which the holy Seed was planted. This soil was the church militant, which received the sword of truth to perish by it. “I came not to send peace, but a sword,” said Jehovah. “All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.” When the church militant is slain,—dead to all but her Lord,—the life of the Church Triumphant hidden in him shall descend to make her alive as his flesh and blood, the meat and drink of the world to come—Mother of all living.

Materialists and spiritualists, or atheists and antichristian scientists, are the outermost precipitations of the divine biunity of spirit and matter. They are extremes—opposite poles. So far are they from truth—the almighty unifier of their divine origin, that only the everlasting arms of divine love and the X rays of celestial wisdom can ever restore them to the holy communion, the divine fellowship which the church of the living God has with the Father.

The folly and sin of ignorance (ignoring the science of truth) will be made manifest when—in the fulness of time—Haveh, the Tree of Life, stands forth victorious with the 144,000 Sons of God, each bearing in his forehead the name of the Father; each confessing his material origin, saying “a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.”

Divine Mater, God’s Motherhood, is the door of entrance to all arch-natural and super arch-natural life. She is the continent of all; within her shall be found the God of all. There is coming a new thing in earth: “A woman shall compass a man,” and “She shall be called, the Lord our Righteousness.” She is the righteousness of saints, which is to say, His flesh.

As one whom his mother comforteth, so will the Lord comfort all them that fear him. She will gather the flock of God as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings. The groaning creation will be by her delivered of the many Sons of God. “Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth.” Honor thy Father and thy Mother Deity; exalt to the throne of their glory all the life potencies of being; let them no longer bow down to graven images, the precipitations of mortal lust—gods of the ignorant. Exalted to Deity, the aspirations of mortal mind will find in the divine Motherhood the power of transmutation and elaboration which shall clothe them in the divine image and likeness, and lead them forth, more than conquerors through Him that loved them.

The confession of his Name by whom they were begotten and quickened to newness of life, and obedience to the laws of his being, constitute the keys which admit the penitent to the sphere of redemption—“the Golden Bowl of the sacred candlestick, which breaks into the redeemed Israel, the zone of God’s glory, sounding forth the Deific song of joy, and radiating the energies that renew the universe. Only the Motherhood of God can bring forth the divine brotherhood of man, and give supreme honor and glory to the Fatherhood of God.

If the voice of one crying in the wilderness is not heard, and the way of the Lord is not walked in by the people who have called themselves by his name, their house will be left unto them desolate. Swift destruction will come upon them, and they shall be scattered as wanderers without God and without hope in a condemned world, till the wrath of outraged love be overpassed.

The denial of the Lord Jesus as the Savior of the world, of the Bible as an inspired book, and of God as a personal being, is a characteristic determination of modern spiritualism.

All spiritual things are grounded in natural things; and where the groundwork is, there must be also the root of spiritual things, and here at this root must the axe be laid.

The Character of the Messiah not Manifest in the Affairs of the World ; False Claims Made by Leaders of Church and State ; Greatness of the Ancients.

PROF. O. F. L'AMOREAUX, A. M., PH. D.

TO FORM an adequate conception of the importance of the immortality of the soul, it must be viewed from every possible standpoint. Nothing—with one single exception—would lead us to believe that there is anything immortal (undying) in man. If there is any such thing, and we have no doubt there is, that one exception must have possessed the secret of it, and be able to tell it. He said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life," eternal life—immortality. "God only hath immortality."

"To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Seed is not seed except it be sown, when in the harvest it will produce the seed multiplied. Jesus himself declared that the Sower, which was himself, the Son of man, sowed the seed; that the earth which received the seed was the human earth, and that the harvest was the end of the world. The word which in the original is rendered world, every scholar knows, means only age or dispensation. Of the two words used, one signifies the time of an age, the other, its human institutions. When that time comes (and the real Scientist knows we are on the eve of such coming) there will be men, immortal, like the Seed—Christ Jesus, and the kingdom of heaven will be established in earth, according to the prayer he taught his disciples to pray.

Is Jesus the foundation of our civilization? Let us dig down and see. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." A foundation is not a whole building; and a building to endure, along with the foundation, must have the same lasting quality. Jesus came to fulfil God's law; he was the embodiment of that law whose commandment was: "Thou shalt not kill;" and when his disciples wanted him to destroy those who did not follow him, he rebuked them, saying that he came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them. The principal employment to which all others at present must give way, is to learn how to kill, and then actually to kill not only the heathen, but our professed fellow Christians.

The law of God declared, "Ye shall not sell the land forever, for the land is mine;" and provided that every man should have his portion, which no usurer or tax-gatherer could take from him, and which he himself could not alienate from himself beyond the jubilee; whereas our boasted civilization is rapidly gathering all the land into few hands, and turning the great masses into hopeless, disinherited wage slaves, and forcing thousands into becoming tramps and vagrants, and frequently punishing them for being such.

The law of God strictly forbade usury, which meant any pay for the use of money, or anything that was let on usury, and yet commanded the citizen to lend to his poor neighbor, taking no usury; and if he could not pay at the seventh-year jubilee, to forgive the debt. Our civilization is built upon usury, which historians tell us has destroyed every nation that has fallen. The precept of Jesus is: "Love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest; for he is kind to the unthankful and to the evil."

With regard to right and wrong, gaining eternal life or losing it, every man stood on his own foundation; as regarded subsistence, the Lord Jesus gave his disciples a common purse, and he knew the man he chose to carry it was a thief;—and it looks as though the character had cleaved to the occupation ever since. He drove the money changers out of God's typical temple, calling their business theft. He said: "Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself." But our so called Christian civilization clutches after the things of a thousand tomorrows that can never come, turning millions into tramps and beggars, and then is never satisfied.

Jesus said: "Take not the uppermost seats;" but the spirit of our time says, strike for all the high places, neglecting no means to get there and to sustain yourself; for all things are fair in politics and war. Jesus said: "I have compassion on the multitude; give ye them to eat." We say, prisons and the rock-pile are good enough for vagrants and tramps. They would have plenty but for laziness, improvidence, and liquor; yet, throw them a few crumbs for sweet charity's sake.

Peace on earth, good will to men, was the proclamation which announced the birth of the Lord; but today, as never before, the whole fair earth is full of warring camps. Every industry is an army with banners, and the frequent encounters are little less deadly—though more bloodless—than those of actual war. At this time, Cedar Rapids has an object lesson of this kind. All that is produced is the product of labor, and the men who actually perform the labor are on a strike to get something more than a slave's wages out of what they produce. The opposite camp is bent on getting more money with which to pay dividends on watered stock, held by men who perform no productive labor.

To any one really in earnest to find the causes of human inequality, they are not far to seek. But men would not labor except for the incentive to accumulation. Selfish men would not, but are all men selfish? And besides, if present evil conditions—which compel men to overreach for fear of future poverty—were changed, would there be no incentive to labor for the common good? But great knowledge, as well as great wealth is necessary to make men worthy of eternal life. The poor, and shiftless, and ignorant who leave no great monuments of their learning and skill behind them, are not worthy of eternal life. From the world's standpoint, poor chance then for Jesus and his followers—or at least for his followers!

We are often told that anybody who is industrious and saving can get rich. The industry of the world produces only a given amount of wealth annually. If the few, by means of law or otherwise, are able to appropriate what should be the shares of a hundred or a thousand men each,—and that without labor,—it must be evident that the masses whose labor produces all, must put up with so much less, even though it be slave's wages or none at all. It must stretch our credulity to believe that the old deacon's smart boys, when shut in of a rainy afternoon, can make five dollars apiece trading coats.

If J. Pierpont Morgan, the Vanderbilts, and their ilk, had immortality,—and the thinking man must see that all the immortality there will ever be will be right here in earth,—under present civilization, they would soon own all the wealth in the world, and all men could live only by their sufferance.

Let us examine the claims of the present to superior knowledge. A guess is only a guess; and if we argue logically with a guess as our premise, our conclusion will be nothing but a guess. It will add nothing to learnedly call it an hypothesis. The learned (?) scientist is obliged to admit that very much of what he calls science is only guesswork; but then, he sagely informs you that there are mysteries which nobody will ever fathom. The schoolboy knows that we live on the outside of a sphere; somebody told him so. Every great government has a geodetic staff whose business is to solve that problem which, confessedly, is still a mystery—one of thousands.

It will be said that heathen nations have left no traces to show that they were as wise as we are, hence fit for immortality. Let us take an inventory and see. Where do our historians go for their models and inspiration, but to Thucydides and Xenophon of that poor little heathen country called Greece? To whom do our poets turn but to blind Homer and Hesiod? or our sculptors, but to that old Athenian, Phidias? or our architects, except to these same Greeks? If the labors of the painter had been as imperishable as the above, the oldest of the old masters, at whose feet our neophytes would delight to sit, would be another of those old know-nothing Greeks—Apelles. From what fountain does our learned, incipient judge and statesman draw the fundamental maxims of his calling, more than from that which watered the eternal seven hills of heathen Rome? And in our chief employment, war, where do our greatest generals get their instructions and enthusiasm, but from Alexander, Cæsar, Scipio, and that greatest of them all, the dusky Carthaginian, the African Hannibal? From whence does our patriotic love of liberty find its fires kindled more than from the example of Leonidas, Miltiades, Horatius Cocles, and the heroes of Thermopyla, and Plataea, and Salamis; or that stalwart Roman who, single handed, or at most with two assistants, defended the bridge against most valiant and powerful hosts until the farther end of it was broken down, and then, plunging into the rolling tide, swam safely to his own side, thus by the prowess of one man, saving his country's liberty?

If in the feeble efforts of our parvenue learned (?) scientist he finds a new thought for which his learned language has no word, where does he turn to supply the lack? He pores over the rubbish heap of those old heathen, generally Greeks or Romans, but mayhap, Egyptians, Persians, Hindoos, or others, even to the heathen Chinese, or the American Indian, when, marvel of marvels, he finds the word that exactly describes the thought he has but just discovered.

If we want to know what monuments will be left of our wonderful civilization, we will have to wait a few thousand years. It is tolerably certain that the stone eyes of the Sphinx will then look upon no monument of the past more lofty than the pyramids—the despair of our boasted knowledge and skill. How is it possible that our transcendent civilization can be based upon Him whom, if he were living now, it would consign to prison at hard labor as a vagrant or a tramp?

In the Editorial Perspective.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

THE UNIVERSAL CLAIM at the present time is love for humanity. This is the virtue par excellence which all men concur to praise, while each is secretly rejoicing in the delightful conviction that his own heart is overflowing with beneficence. The test of human conduct was given nineteen hundred years ago, by one who knew what was in man. From that time down to the present, no one has lived who could fathom the human heart. No man has obeyed the injunction of Socrates: Know thyself. Self love is the bosom serpent whose black coils lie in every heart, but no one calls it by such a title. It is caressed and dignified by the name of love for humanity. Jesus gave the test which must be applied to this universal claim: By their fruits ye shall know them. Scientists claim that their work has been the outcome of unselfish impulse, hence it has contributed to wisdom and progress. They say that the nineteenth century has been the golden era of science—that there will never again be so many important discoveries. Genuine knowledge means genuine advancement. If modern science has brought truth then it has brought help, and the world must be better and happier than it was a century ago. What is the condition of the world by its own confession at a time when it claims to be permeated by fraternal love?

Matthew Arnold said that England presented the spectacle of an upper class materialized, a middle class vulgarized, and a lower class brutalized. Herbert Spencer says that self-regard in the United States has led to local civil wars, lynchings at the rate of three per day, a rise in the number of homicides from twelve to thirty per day in five years—with universal bribery and corruption in political affairs. Professor Alfred Russell Wallace says that the past century has been characterized by unprecedented progress in the interpretation of Nature, but in spite of our boundless command over these forces, there is today a greater amount of misery and starvation, of stunted lives in crowded cities, of mental and moral degradation, than in the preceding century. The claims of science are not justified unless its love of humanity has helped humanity. A great part of what it presents as knowledge is error; it has not solved the greatest problems relating to man and the cosmos; members of the wealthy class which has monopolized the benefits accruing from inventions and discoveries which increase luxury and ease, are acute sufferers from nervous diseases caused by inertia and self indulgence. The case of science offers but one example of a general claim. All the doctors will aver that they are actuated by love for humanity, but they go on taking fees while diseases multiply. Everybody knows that lawyers are purely humanitarian in spirit; while millionaires profess to hold their money in trust for those who lack the genius of accumulation. The phoenix is not rarer than the man who does not claim to be inspired with this exalted sentiment, yet the content of human misery is not lessened. The sin of the age is against the third commandment. When men claim a genuine love for their fellows, they take the name of the Lord their God in vain, for He alone is capable of love for man. When the world begins to improve, amelioration will be the fruit of God's love for the race. In the meantime, why justify false claims by a false name?

"Where in this beautiful country can you find a new thought? The Adept wants one; we are willing to pay a big price for it, but it must be a new one, (not a combination of old ones). Any one who will send us a new thought by mail, express, or freight, will confer an everlasting favor, and we will pay all the bills; (must not be sent C. O. D. unless we are allowed to examine them)." The Adept is franker than most of our contemporaries. It does not hesitate to confess its intellectual needs and advertise for what it lacks. This confession is accompanied on the same page by the following queries regarding the Cellular Cosmogony: "DR. TEED, 'KORESH,' of Chicago, affirms that the earth is a concave sphere, with a shell about 100 miles in thickness, and that outside of this shell there is nothing, not even space; if one were to jump off the outside he would not jump at all, or might fall onto himself; but we don't understand just what would happen. If we are not out of order, we would like to have DR. TEED explain what would happen if one (or several) were to dig a tunnel to the outer crust of the earth, and arrive at a place designated by the uninitiated as the jumping-off place, and were to discharge an eight inch rifle, loaded with solid shot, and pointed at the so called outside; would the gun refuse to be discharged; would the shot remain in the gun; would it go into the place called nothing, or would the shot stand still and the gun go backward to the great consternation of the gunners? We do not doubt that the Doctor can and will explain this fully, as the Doctor is well posted on Cellular Cosmogony." Koreshan Science has posited and proved the only original system in the world today. The Cellular Cosmogony comes fresh and delightful, a new revelation of the handiwork of God. The source of all originality is in the divine mind whence all concepts of beauty emanate. Now as of old, the world lacks discernment to recognize and accept the new thought it professes to seek. The ingenious suppositions of the Adept relate to impossibilities. There is a story of a boy who lay awake a whole night trying to think what it would be like if there were no world—if there were nothing at all. He wrestled with his cosmic imaginations hour after hour, getting rid of himself, reducing the world to vapor, to a point—and at last, as the story goes, he succeeded in making the point vanish; then he gave a blood-curdling scream which brought his mother—and the world was restored. But it took the boy a long time to rally from this experiment. The youthful thinker was merely following in reverse order the originators of the nebular hypothesis, and it unsettled his mind. Koreshan Science avers that the universe, together with God, has always existed in its present dimensions. It did not originate in vapor, in a point—it is not reducible to a point. Koreshan Science does confine the universe within reasonable bounds—the one cosmic cell with nothing outside, because all that has form has limitation.

"In contemplating the globe, as the result of definite causes, we have first, the time when the material was collected to form the sun; second, when a portion of it was hurled into space; and, third, the remainder, after the moon as a tidal wave, had been shot into space, leaving the earth, a plastic mass, steaming, eruptive, to shrink and cool." This extract is quoted from an article on world building published in the Chicago Tribune of February 10, 1901. The writer evidently intends to outline what he accepts as a definite statement of science, using the term science in the sense of knowledge gained or facts collated. He does not refer to such a system of cosmogony as theoretical, neither does he appear to write in jest nor irony. No doubt his words would be accepted in support of the achievements of science by a throng of optimists who are rejoicing over the world, because they say: "It begins the twentieth century in the light that religion freed from superstition and a knowledge of the physical universe have bestowed." Is it not pertinent to inquire who collected the material to form the sun? As the globe is said to be the result of definite causes, chance cannot figure among them. If the idea of God as a personal Creator enters into the cosmic scheme, where was he at the time he was engaged in building the world? When the sun was formed, what gave the impulse of rotation which sent it gyrating through space at such a rate that red hot fragments flew off like particles from a whirling grindstone? Scientists have rejected the idea of spontaneous generation. Whence, then, did life on the young earth appear, first as "low amœboid forms—mere bits of jelly, resembling the white of an egg." The three stages of cosmogonical progress thus outlined are all beset with difficulties and embarrassments; yet the advocates of such a system greet the clear, logical, and forceful demonstrations of Koreshan Cosmogony with derision.

Two consecutive articles from the Baptist Flag are reprinted in another column. The first admits the uncertainty of science and deplores the destruction of astronomical theories which have long been accepted as facts. "We thought our theories about astronomy were more firmly fixed," writes the editor. The second article assails Koreshanity on the ground of its assumptions, closing with the charge that it is doing nothing. We beg leave to call attention to the fact, proved by volumes of published literature, that Koreshanity has maintained for thirty years the very ideas which the Flag has so recently adopted in regard to the contradictions of modern science. Koreshanity has shown itself wiser and more far-seeing than its contemporaries, in predicting just the revelation of ignorance by which modern astronomy is destroying itself. More than this, it has formulated and taught the only scientific system which puts the teachings of the Bible in perfect accord with those of Nature. It is generally admitted that the conflict between science and religion is the greatest cause of atheism. Is it nothing to found a system that effects a perfect reconciliation between them,—founded moreover upon a mechanically demonstrated premise? Is it nothing to oppose the competitive world for over thirty years, with a feasible plan of equitable commerce? Is it nothing to present a definitely structured outline of an ideal form of government patterned after the human brain and its analogue—the physical cosmos? Is it nothing to hold these ideas in the face of derisive laughter until fair and open discussion of the Cellular Cosmogony has been forced in many quarters, not only in America but in Europe? Koreshanity has toiled while others talked, and it has already accomplished a gigantic work. The quality and extent of its influence are every day more widely known.

The mind that has begun to receive enlightenment from the Sun of Truth, regards the world with the most intense interest. The ordinary spectator is listless and puzzled; he looks to the wise and distinguished of this generation for helpful suggestions and luminous conceptions, but he looks in vain, for they share in his perplexity. The daily newspaper with its budget of events, leaves him in a state of hopeless confusion. But the advent of fresh truth into the brain produces a startling change in the jaded intellect. Now it is alert and hopeful, ready to interpret the signs of the times. Each new combination on the international chess board stimulates the Koreshan's interest in the game. Through his acceptance of the doctrine of the humanity of Deity and his love for the Messianic law and manifestation, he has placed himself in direct communication with energizing currents from the intellectual throne. His view-point is that of knowledge.

Prince Kropotkin, the anarchistic Russian exile, has come to form conjunction with the same sphere of thought in Chicago. It is proposed to found a school of anarchy in this city, as a memorial of his visit. What a contradiction of terms is offered by the phrase "school of anarchy"! A school implies organization, a board of instruction with a recognized head and a carefully prepared curriculum. Anarchy, on the contrary, is averse to all organization; the very term means without a head. The anarchistic movement is the center of disorder and misrule; it has no definite program and no reasonable plan, whereas a school implies order and discipline. Anarchy would abolish all restraints.

The present time is fruitful in portents all looking toward the establishment of a new heaven and a new earth. This means that a new church and a new state which embody God's ideal will reign in earth. Some modern lexicographers erroneously define ideal as "a conception beyond realization." The ideal is the perfect idea whose source is in the divine mind. God deals with facts. He does not originate impossible theories. All his ideas are perfect; all of them will be embodied in practical form; all his ideals will become realities.

Those who are interested in the Eastern question, will find an omen of deep significance in the earthquake which recently shook the Sultan's throne in the midst of the royal ceremonial, while certain dignitaries were passing in front of the monarch, who was startled from his seat. No alliance with the Kaiser can long sustain the Mohammedan power. Emperor William may play the role of court physician, but he cannot restore "the sick man" of Europe to a state of health.

To the uninitiated, the past and present are both veiled in mystery. History is a labyrinth without a clue, where the wanderer grows more perplexed at every turn. The philosophy of history remains to be written by those who understand the origin and destiny of man. This is the clue which Koreshan Science puts into the hands of those who are willing to accept a guiding thread.

The pattern of all things was shown the prophet in the holy Mount. The perfect ideal of government to be wrought out upon this earth must be delivered to the people from on high. The desire of all nations, Utopia, Altruria, the lost Atlantis, will be realized in Theocracy.

Prince Kropotkin says that the introduction of Christianity would ruin Chinese morals. It ought to be a case of similia similibus curantur—a celestial religion and a celestial code of morality. Evidently the Prince does not believe in Homœopathy.

The great delight of discovery and the sovereign royalty of knowledge lie in the joy of immediate impartation, that others in their turn may become distributors of the doctrine or the bread of life, that supreme nutriment of which all lower food is symbolical.

Every man is a composite of spiritual entities. Every thought is an entity from the past. To cast out the folly accumulated during a lifetime of false thinking involves man in a civil war.

Christian science corresponds to the attenuated ether of science—very thin air when called by its plain Saxon name, and in terms of logic a reductio ad absurdum.

The co-ordination of spirit and matter, together with the law of transmutation, logically explains all phenomena from God to the atom.

The visible world is a system of types wherein every moral law is exemplified, the least part sometimes setting forth the highest truth.

There is no liberty where plutocracy reigns, no equality in Nature, and no fraternity without the love of God in the human soul.

The only virtue in the human will is pure aspiration toward God.

The reign of science has produced a flood of fallacy.

Editorial Discussions and Miscellany.

Jesus' Fast of Forty Days.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Permit me to ask the following questions: (1) Why did Jesus fast for forty days and forty nights, and what benefit did he derive from it? Matt. 4: 2, 3. (2) How are tides caused, and how is the moon connected with them?—W. B., Minneapolis, Minn.

(1) The fasting of the Lord Jesus enabled him to come into complete rapport with his own interior life. His fasting was accompanied with a knowledge of the source of influx with which he wished to become en rapport, hence he was opened into the interiors of his divine relationship. His fasting thus enabled him to draw from the inner resources of his being the pabulum of his own life, which was the inner or hidden manna, the product of the restraints upon his own sex nature. His fasting was according to the laws of divine order, and the results were the product of his conformity to these laws.

Other men might fast with the idea of attaining to the power He possessed and manifested, but not only would they fail of their purposes, but they would bring upon themselves disastrous consequences, for the simple reason that they fasted blindly. Enforced fasting while the person retains the desire for food, is not fasting according to the divine order.

(2) "The waters breathe; everything in the universe respire. The zone of respiration follows the lunar diaphragm, which divides the earth into hemispheres of respiration, corresponding to the two lungs of the human system. The zone of respiration follows the lunar pole in its diurnal revolution, because of the co-ordinated revolution of the spheres of energy which cause the tides and the lunar motion." [See FLAMING SWORD, Vol. xii: No. 47, "Planets and Tides," by the EDITOR.]

The lunar disc is the dispenser of the menstrual energy of the universe. This energy passes from the disc, not only into the waters along the track of the disc, but into the metallic and mineral strata, which also contract and expand by virtue of the moon's action along the zone of respiration. The tides are the result of the respiration of the world.—KORESH.

Tree of Knowledge and Tree of Life.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Will you define the principles of the Tree of Knowledge, and also of the Tree of Life? Please give Scriptural references to one and the other, distinctively. Have both principles come down side by side from the beginning to the present time, and will they operate together in the new era?—A READER, Denver, Colo.

"And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil." Gen. ii: 9.

The dominating determination of each cell of the human body is to reach the perfected or productive stage. In the vidual or segregated man, the effort is disintegrative, culminating in myriad sperms. The vidual woman aggregates her efforts in one cell, the ovum, and in this respect her effort is integrative. These distinctive efforts comprise, in the line of the male activity, the tree of knowledge of good and evil, and in the female activity, the river of death. While this physical state exists, the inresident spiritual sphere—the attendant mind, exercises discrimination between good and evil, choosing the former and rejecting the latter. When the masculoid and feminoid, or what is popularly termed the male and female, principles become united, when the twain become one flesh,—male and female,—thus establishing a continuous circuit, the male principle has become the River of Life, while the female principle is the Tree of Life, whose fruitage is the Sons of God. In this supreme degree, the tree of knowledge of good and evil is transformed to the Tree of Life, whose Seed, the beginning of creation, was planted 1900 years ago.

Since but a fraction of the sensual humanity is to be elevated to the fruitage of the Tree of Life—the perfected Manhood in whom resides the perfected Womanhood, the residue will continue the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Of course, an understanding of the subject embraces the truth that the vidual man possesses the dominant masculoid and the subdominant feminoid principle, while in the vidual woman the order is reversed.—AMANDA T. POTTER.

Parable of the Sheep and Goats.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—In Matt. XXV: 31, 32, we read that when the Son of man shall come in his glory, he shall separate the sheep from the goats, and all the nations gathered before him. Who are the sheep? Who are the goats? Who are the nations, and how do they differ from one another?—Yours truly, P. P., Bennett, Colo.

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: And before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats."

In the above case, the sheep refer to the progressive principle in man, while the goat is referable to the retrogressive principle, or the love of the old and sensual life. "I am the door of the sheep. * * * By me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." The sheep are promised to sit on the right hand—the hand of power, while the goats, through inclinations which chain them to hell, are consigned to the left hand.

All nations are represented in the persons of those who will become the lambs of God—the 144,000. They are of all nations; and in the same person is found the lamb and the goat principle, or the wheat and the tares. One degree of the glory of the Lord's coming will be his theocrasis, that will kindle the fire which will separate the wheat from the tares. This is the substance of the promise of that day which shall burn as an oven, when the wicked shall become ashes under the saints' feet. All are wicked, hence all who are to be purified will be burned, and thus separated from their iniquities.—AMANDA T. POTTER.

New Edition of Cosmogony.

The last of a series of several editions of the CELLULAR COSMOGONY was exhausted a few weeks ago, and many orders received since have been recorded but not yet filled.

We are publishing a new edition of this work, and will be prepared to fill all orders in a few weeks. We regret the delay in filling many orders now in hand, but it has been unavoidable, owing to the removal of our printing plant, and other causes.

It would be well if our friends who desire to dispose of copies in their respective vicinities, would get their orders in at once, that the wheels of propaganda may start anew as soon as possible after the edition is off the press.

Corrupt College Endowments.

Christian Institutions Gratefully Accept Ill-gotten Gains, and Praise the Donors.

Considerable interest was aroused in the press a few months ago, by circumstances connected with Mr. John D. Rockefeller's donation of $100,000 to Wellesley College. At the time this gift was offered, a memorial signed by Miss Vida D. Scudder, professor of English literature at Wellesley, and by seventeen other members of the faculty, was addressed to the trustees of the college, requesting that inquiry be made into the business methods of the Standard Oil Company, in order that assurance might be obtained of the propriety of accepting such a gift. The trustees accepted the donation, and there is no evidence that their decision was influenced by the memorial. Miss Scudder offered to resign her professorship if the acceptance of the gift should in any way hamper her freedom of expression, but she was assured by the president of the college that she should have perfect liberty in that respect.

A conference which was held in an obscure parish house in Boston, while the matter was still pending, but which had no direct connection with the Wellesley incident, was attended by President Eliot, Prof. John Graham Brooks, and other representatives of several New England colleges. Bishop Potter presided, and the question of the acceptance of "tainted wealth" by colleges was discussed, but no resolutions were adopted. These facts cast some light upon an article in the current issue of The Atlantic Monthly, written by Miss Scudder, regarding the problems involved in this experience at Wellesley. She says:

"No one questions that the mammoth fortunes which are coming to be a distinctive feature of American life are sometimes made by methods which are cruel if not technically dishonest, methods pushed perilously near the limits of what even the crude conscience expressed in common law considers legitimate—pushed some way, though the fact can rarely be proved, beyond those limits. Wealth exists which has been piled together by means unscrupulous and unchristian. It stands in the public mind as a symbol of unrestrained self-seeking and greed; it has to the knowledge of many left behind its shining heaps a ravaged desert track of despair. There is a growing tendency on the part of owners of money of this kind to spend lavishly on works of public utility, on the endowment of churches, charities, and universities. It is a paradoxical situation. With the one hand the owner of such wealth thrusts his competitors into the abyss of commercial ruin, or grinds the faces of the poor; with the other, he hands the resultant gain to the Christian institutions of the land, which gratefully accept it, and rise to chant the paean of democracy triumphant."

The view is sometimes taken that ethical scrutiny of the sources of wealth is wholly uncalled for, on the ground that the use sanctifies the gift, and that the endowment of churches and colleges is so important that money should be accepted without question from any source. On the other hand, some contend that even an inconsiderable degree of popular odium attached to money should make a Christian institution shrink from accepting it. Miss Scudder attempts to find middle ground between these two extreme conclusions. She declares:

"There are two broad, positive reasons why churches and colleges should at least exercise far more caution than they have been doing of late in the acceptance of proffered gifts. First, to ignore a scruple is to help suppress it. Every institution which accepts without explanation money under suspicion or indictment, weakens the awakening demand for ethical scrutiny of the sources of wealth. * * The church and the university, standing as they do for the subjugation of the gross automatic instincts of the race by conscience and reason, are our most safe and natural guides; and ill betides the country where they hold the rear rather than the van. The attitude of self-justification in which certain institutions find themselves today, is in itself a grave public misfortune; for a college or church which accepts questionable money as a matter of course injures far more than itself. It stifles the breath of new life in our civilization, and the higher its standing and the stronger its influence, the more fatally does it effect this end.

"Another reason, equally practical, equally cogent, should impose caution in the acceptance of money, the danger lest our colleges forfeit the respect of the people. * * No one can move among working people in an informal and intimate fashion, without realizing how entirely they lack confidence in the integrity of our academic life, how honest and sincere is the scorn with which they view it. It is said by the head worker of one of the largest settlements in New York, that economic argument with the clever young Socialists of the East Side is rendered useless by their contempt for the traditions she represents and the authorities she cites. 'Of course, Professor This and Professor That hold such views; they have salaries to draw,' is the constant rejoinder. * * If the great throng of the unprivileged come to distrust the centers whence these unifying forces should proceed, and to view them as class institutions, where is our hope for the future? Better than this, let poverty be the portion of our colleges, as it has been the portion of some of the strongest centers of intellectual life that the world has known."

Miss Scudder ventures the hope that the college which sets the example of rigid honesty may benefit thereby even pecuniarily. "It is conceivable," she says, "that the first institution to refuse an offer of ill-gotten money might draw to itself students from the length and breadth of the land. Countless eager contributions from the modest means of many might flow in upon it, and bring within its reach those riches which it had shown itself strong to do without." She concludes:

"There is no duty before the academic and religious world in America more pressing than the duty of strengthening the demand that methods of acquiring wealth come wholly under the dominion of the moral sense. There is no opportunity more significant, more in danger of closing forever, than the opportunity of convincing the public at large, by definite sacrifice of worldly advantage, if need be, that the intellectual life of the country, as represented by its organized centers, is disinterested, honest, and free."

It is interesting to recall in this connection the report that Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, declined a gift to that institution not long ago from Mr. John D. Rockefeller, but requested that the donation be made to some hospital or other public institution, whose function was other than that of imparting education and molding public opinion.—Social Democratic Herald.

Lecture by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanity will deliver a Lecture on Koreshan Universology, Sunday, 3: 30 p. m., May 5, 1901, at Koreshan Hall, 4th floor, 315-19 Englewood ave., Chicago.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in advanced thought.

The Competitive System.

What the World Loses through the Chaotic System of Competitive Production.

At one time our forefathers, ignorant of hygiene, sanitation, and quarantine, were powerless before the plagues which swept across the earth; yet we, their enlightened descendants, find ourselves impotent in the face of the great social cataclysms known as trade and commercial crises. The crises are peculiarly a modern product—made possible by the specialization of industry and the immense strides which have been taken in the invention of labor-saving machinery, but due, and directly so, to the antagonism of the units which compose society.

A competent co-operative management could so operate all the implements and institutions of the present industrial civilization, that there need never be any fear of a trade or commercial crisis. Boards or departments, scientifically conducted, could ascertain, first, the consuming power of the community; second, its producing power; and then, by an orderly arrangement, arrange these two, one to the other. These boards or departments would have to study all the causes which go to make the community's producing power inconstant—such as failure of crops, drouths, etc.—and to so direct the energy of the community that equilibrium between its production and consumption might still be maintained. And to do this, is certainly within the realm of man's achievement.

But instead of this logical arrangement of industry, the community today possesses the chaotic system of competitive production. It is a war of producers, also of distributors. Success depends on individual knowledge of just how much and at what cost all others are producing, and how much and at just what prices they are selling. All the factors which decide the fluctuations of the world's markets or the purchasing power of its peoples must be taken into account. A war cloud in the Balkans, a failure of crops in the Argentine, the thoughtless word of a kaiser, or a strike of organized labor, and the success or failure depends on how closely the results of this event have been foreseen. And even then, because of a thousand and one fortuitous happenings, chance plays an important part. Even the footing of the wisest and the surest is precarious.

Risk is the secret of gain. Lessen the risk, the gain is lessened; abolish it, and there can be no gain. Individual strives against individual, buying for himself and keeping his transactions secret. Everybody is in the dark. Each is planning, guessing, chancing; and because of this, the competitive system of industry, as a whole, may be justly characterized as planless. The effort lost is tremendous, the waste prodigal. A favorable season arrives. Increased orders accelerate production. Times are prosperous. All industries are stimulated. Little heed is taken of the overstocking of the markets, till at last they are flooded with commodities. This is the danger point.

The collapse of a land boom in Oregon, the failure of a building association in Austria—anything may start the chain of destruction. Speculations begin to burst, credits to be called in, there is a rush to realize on commodities produced, prices fall, wages come down, factories close up, and consumption is correspondingly reduced. The interdependence of all forms of industry asserts itself. One branch of trade stops, and those branches dependent upon it, or allied with it, cannot continue. This spreads. Depression grows, failures increase, industry is paralyzed. The crisis has come! And then may be observed the paradoxical spectacle of glutted warehouses and starving multitudes. Then comes the slow and painful recovery of years, then an acceleration of planless production, and then another crisis. This is friction, the inevitable correlative of a disorderly system of production and distribution. And the losses incurred by such friction are incalculable.—JACK LONDON, in Cosmopolitan.

Science and the Church.

A Baptist Publication Gets an Item or two from The Flaming Sword.

In some quarters, and on some lips, there has been a great commotion as to how science contradicts the Bible. But it is coming to be a notorious fact that one of the most uncertain things in the world is this so-called science. We thought our theories about astronomy were more firmly fixed, and more accurately demonstrated than any other science we have. But Prof. Young, of Princeton University, says we are mistaken in saying the moon revolves around our earth, for the moon simply attends the earth in its motion through space. We have decided to wait until the philosophers can establish some truth before we give up our Bible and accept science as a guide.

THE FLAMING SWORD is the spokesman of the late dreamer, KORESH, who modestly prates about being the Messiah that was to come. Koreshanity is the non-descript science that has been evolved out of the nonsense of his assumptions, and whose inane statements serve to make his theories as clear as mud. * * The coolness of its assumptions, and the presumption of its pretensions would make even a skeptic blush. Koreshanity proposes to tell us all secrets, reveal all knowledge, solve all mysteries, cure all ills, correct all errors in politics and religion, set aside all accepted ideas, and introduce the millennium. That is much like a patent medicine which proposes to cure all the ills of life. It is better to undertake to do little and do that little well. Koreshanity proposes to do too much. It is doing nothing.—American Baptist Flag.

The Flaming Sword's Exchanges.

The Saturday Evening Post.—Sir Thomas Lipton, K. C. V. O., has written especially for The Saturday Evening Post, of May 11, an article on The Sports that Make the Man. He places yachting high on the list, and gives some interesting anecdotes of his own career as an amateur yachtsman. Sir Thomas is hopeful, if not confident, of "lifting" the America's Cup next autumn. He says, however, that if it were a certainty he would not cross the water; for there is no sporting interest in "sure things." This article will appear exclusively in The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia.

The Arena.—The publishers of the Arena promise that the May number is exceptionally fine. The frontispiece is a portrait of Prof. Herron, and the first article, by the Rev. Wm. T. Brown, is an interview with Dr. Herron on The New Social Apostolate. Will the Philippines Pay? is a question asked by Hon. Frank Doste, Chief Justice of Kansas; it is answered by Editor Flower, Prof. Frank Parsons, and a number of others. The Parting of the Ways, by Editor Patterson, offers some excellent advice to the modern orthodox church. The Tax Reform Movement, The Criminal Negro, and Russia's Hoarded Gold, are other excellent features. The editorial and review departments are ably conducted.

Twentieth Century Wraps.

These novel Wraps are becoming very popular, and the demand for them still continues. They are made of Shetland floss, hand-crocheted by our own people, and are light, airy, and beautiful.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY

Founded by Koresh (Dr. Cyrus R. Teed),
A. D. 1870.

THE EARTH is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Sun, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth constituting the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell: we INhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, and the pattern of the new order of Human Society.

A GLANCE AT KORESHANITY.

KORESHAN UNIVERSOLOGY is a complete system of the Science of the great Universe of life; and it involves the knowledge of the Creator and his creation. The name by which it is designated, in contradistinction to perverted Christianity, is KORESHANITY; and the new Religion must supplant Christianity, as Christianity supplanted Judaism. Koreshanity has come to fulfil the hope of the world in the liberation of humanity from the curse, in the establishment of the Kingdom of God in earth, the introduction of the New Era of Light and Life, of universal harmony and happiness.

What does Koreshanity teach? We present a brief summary of the System—a few cardinal points, which will serve to suggest the great scope of the System in its completeness. It is the antithesis of all modern theories, of all schools of thought. It is the climax of all mental progress, the ultimate and absolute truth of Being and Existence; it is the revelation of all mystery, the uncovering of the occult; the true explanation of all phenomena, the scientific interpretation of Nature and the Bible.

COSMOGONY.—The universe is a cell, a hollow globe, the physical body of which is the earth; the sun is at the center. We live on the inside of the cell; and the sun, moon, planets, and stars are all within the globe. The universe is eternal, a great battery, and perpetually renews itself through inherent functions, by virtue of which it involves and evolves itself.

ALCHEMY.—The Science of Alchemy is the Philosopher's Stone, the Key to the mystery of life. Chemistry is false; Alchemy is true! Matter and energy are interconvertible and interdependent; they are correlates; matter is destructible; the result of its transmutation is energy. Alchemy is the key to the analysis of the universe.

THEOLOGY.—God is personal and biune, with a trinity of specific attributes. God

in his perfection and power is the God-man or the man-God, the Seed of universal perpetuity. Jesus the Christ was God Almighty; the Holy Spirit was the product of his transmutation, or the burning of his body.

MESSIANIC LAW.—The coming of the Messiah is as inevitable as the reproduction of the seed. The divine Seed was sown nineteen hundred years ago; the firstfruit is another Messianic personality. The Messiah is now in the world, declaring the scientific Gospel.

REINCARNATION is the central law of life—the law of the resurrection; reincarnation and resurrection are identical. Resurrection is reached through a succession of re-embodiments. One generation passes into another; the millions of humanity march down the stream of time together.

THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.—Heaven and hell are in humanity, and constitute the spiritual world; the spiritual domain is mental, and is in the natural humanity,—not in the sky.

HUMAN DESTINY.—Origin and destiny are one and the same. The origin of man is God, and God is man's destiny. God is the highest product of the universe, the apex of humanity. Absorption into Nirvana is entrance into eternal life—in the interior spheres of humanity, not in the sky or atmosphere.

IMMORTALITY IN THE FLESH.—Koreshanity declares and defines the laws of immortality, and its attainment in the natural world. The first step is recognition of the Messiah and the application of his truth. KORESH was the first in modern times to announce the possibility of overcoming death in the natural world, in the flesh.

CELIBACY.—The saving of human life consists in the conservation and appropriation of life in humanity. To become immortal, one must cease to propagate life on the plane of mortality. The standard of Koreshan purity is the virgin life of Jesus the Messiah. The Central Order of the Koreshan Unity is Celibate and Communistic. Celibacy obtains in the central nucleus, never in the world at large.

PSYCHOLOGY.—Koreshanity points to the basis of all psychic phenomena—the human brain. It explains the phenomena of spiritism, mental healing, etc., and teaches the science of the relation of mind and matter.

THE BIBLE.—The Bible is the best written expression of the divine Mind; it is written in the language of universal symbolism, and must be scientifically interpreted. Koreshanity demonstrates the truth and scientific accuracy of the Scriptures, and proves its astronomy, alchemy, theology, ethnology, etc. There is no conflict between the Bible and genuine Science; the Bible and the natural universe must agree in their expression of the divine Mind.

COMMUNISM.—Koreshanity advocates communism, not only of the goods of life, but of life itself. It has not only the scientific theory of communism, but is practically communistic in the relations and affairs of its own people. In this it corresponds to the primitive Christian church, where all things were held in common. The bond of the true communism is the true religion, and the central personality of the divine communism is the Messiah.

KORESHAN SOCIALISM.—Our Social System is patterned after the form of the natural cosmos; that form is the natural expression of the laws of order. We demonstrate the fallacy of competition; advocate the destruction of the money-power; the control of the products of industry by the government, and the equitable distribution of the goods of life. Koreshanity will abolish wage slavery, and make it impossible for men to accumulate wealth and impoverish the people.

CHURCH AND STATE.—The true form of government is the divine Imperialism, the unity of church and state; such will be the Kingdom of God in earth. The Koreshan Government is the unity of the empire and the republic, involving the principles of all present forms of government, which are but fragments of the perfect system which existed in ancient times—in the Golden Age of the past. The government of the universe is imperialistic; and humanity will constitute a unit only when every class is emplaced at rest and liberty as are the strata, stars, and spheres of the physical cosmos.

The Conquering Hero of the Age.

Book of Revelation, Part XIII.

The Promise to the Overcomer is a Promise to One Man, Who is Destined to Conquer Death; His Prophetic Name and Mission in the World of Humanity.

BUT THIS THOU HAST, THAT THOU HATEST THE DEEDS OF THE NICOLAITANES, WHICH I ALSO HATE. Rev. ii: 6. (From the original Greek.)

GOOD WORKS, founded upon love to the Lord, which are wrought out in the uses of life to the neighbor, must inevitably constitute the basis of a living faith. A faith in God which is not predicated upon obedience to the law of God, is not a living faith. Works performed, not grounded in the love of uses, but wrought merely for reward, are not meritorious. It will be noticed in the fifth verse of Revelation ii, that the injunction is to "repent, and do the first works." The term "works" is the key to verses 5 and 6 in Revelation ii. The deeds or works of the Nicolaitanes were distasteful to the Lord, because they were done not through the love of uses, but from the love of reward. The kingdom of righteousness in the earth will be established upon the foundation of that love in the hearts of men which leads to personal sacrifice, if need be, to the end that the neighbor is provided with the necessities, comforts, and luxuries of life. There can be no correct kingdom of uses, the basis of which is not the performance of use to the neighbor through the love of uses. The first radical change essential to the perfection of the kingdom in the earth, is the revolution in the heart itself.

LET HIM WHO HAS AN EAR, HEAR WHAT THE SPIRIT SAYS TO THE ECCLESIAS. TO THE CONQUEROR WILL I GIVE

TO EAT OF THE WOOD [STRENGTH] OF THE LIFE, WHICH IS IN THE PARADISE OF GOD. Rev. ii: 7. It should be borne in mind constantly, that reference is here made to the person in the singular. It does not say to them, but to him. The reason of this is because in every instance where reference is made to the reward given to the angel of the seven churches, it includes primarily but one personality, who comes as the High Priest of the Levitical order in the antitype. One man will overcome at the end of the age; one man will cleanse the sanctuary; that is, one man will separate truth from fallacy and declare the truth—the only truth, to the world. He will constitute the overcomer, the conqueror. When the process of overcoming is perfect, this man will be the resurrected Lord and the manifest Messiah. It is to this Messiah, and to him alone, that it is said: "To the conqueror will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."

It is a great mistake of the Christian church to claim that this has primary reference to many people. "To the conqueror," does not signify to one who may conquer other people or things, but primarily to the one who overcomes himself. This means merely, that as the Lord Jesus in his descending or animal life took upon himself the sins of the world, and therefore was made to be sin, at the end of the age he will be born into the world (reincarnated) according to the laws of mortal generation. He was born at the time specified, at the end of the 2300 days, which mean two thousand three hundred years from the time the decree went forth to rebuild Jerusalem. From the first decree until 1839 was the appointed lapse of time; the Messenger of the Covenant (conjunction) was born at that time. As he is the sanctuary, the sanctuary from that time was to be cleansed. This is because the Lord took upon himself the sins of the world and was made to be sin, and as he was the sanctuary which had become polluted, it follows that the cleansing of the sanctuary is the cleansing of the man.

The first cleansing is the purification of the truth, or the separation of truth from error. This process is the process of cleansing the sanctuary, or the process of overcoming, or of conquering. When all error is eliminated from all truth, and through truth evil is defined and distinguished from good, the man has become the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil; then when evil is eliminated and the good is lived, the tree (man) has become the Tree of Life. The reason that reference is had to one person, is because when the final truths of life come to the world at the end of the age, they will come through the God-ordained man. He will discover the science of the universe, which is Universology, and it will be through his preparation that the baptism will be effected and thousands brought into life.

The natural conceit of the unregenerate heart is so great, that it is averse to the recognition of any superior authority in matters of divine communion. "Why should the Lord show you any honor above me? What have you done that you should be greater in the eyes of God Almighty than I?" It is the most natural thing in the world for mankind to assume this attitude. At no time in the history of the world has a prophet of the Lord been accepted by the people of his day and age. The Lord came nineteen hundred years ago in the way he was not expected, and he was consequently rejected of men, and the people to whom he was sent of God. He comes again in the unexpected way, and is again rejected and for the same reason; namely, the blindness of the human intellect.

The Paradise of God is wheresoever the people of the resurrection first appear. The Lord's prophet of this age is none other than Elijah the prophet, whom it is declared, God will send before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. Elijah the prophet is God the Lord, for he is just what the name implies; Elijah means God the Lord. The New Jerusalem will be resurrected in him. Where Elijah is there the Messiah is; and where the Messiah is, there will be found the Paradise of God and the Tree of Life. The Garden of Eden 1900 years ago was in Palestine, because there as the church of Christ.

Jesus was the promised Seed, which came into the world to be planted in the church. The Holy Ghost was the seminal essence of Deity proceeding directly from the Lord, in whom was the Father. This Seed was sown in the church, that is, in the Garden of Eden; eastward signifying the rising of the Garden. The Garden of Eden was the church, and that church was in Palestine. Therefore, the Garden of Eden is located and defined so far as nineteen hundred years ago is concerned. The Garden of Eden now is where the prophet appears; that is, in America, in the United States, and this is where the firstfruits of the resurrection will manifest.

To eat of the Tree of Life is to so apply the truth as to overcome death and become the fruit of immortality in the body, and then to appropriate this immortality for eternal life. Immortality obtains in this world; eternal life is the product of immortality, and belongs to the life invisible. Immortality and eternal life are two distinct things. We acquire eternal life through immortality, which we gain here in the material world; but there will be no attainment of immortal life in the body (this is the resurrection of the dead) except through the Messenger of the Covenant (conjunction), who must first overcome as the High Priest of conjunction. It is through his function as the High Priest of conjunction that the unity of God and man is effected.

God and man are to be made one again; God will dwell again in his holy Temple. This Temple is the humanity which is to be made alive in the resurrection, reincarnation, to be effected by the Elijah of this age. This conjunction of God and man is the reconstruction of the Temple to be rebuilt by CYRUS, of whom Isaiah said: "That saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: even saying to Jerusalem, thou shalt be built; and to the temple [the temple of the human body, God's body], thy foundation shall be laid. Thus saith the Lord to his Anointed [Christos, Christ, Messiah], to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut."

It is maintained by the "orthodox" modern Christianity, that the above Scriptural passage refers to Cyrus, the ancient king of Persia. We declare by the authority of the Almighty God that it does not, but that it is a prophecy pointing down to the coming of the Messiah at the end of the Christian dispensation. If Cyrus, king of Persia, was meant by Isaiah the prophet, then all we have to say is, that either the prophet was ignorant in declaring him the Messiah, or the church is ignorant in not knowing that Cyrus, king of Persia, was the Messiah, the Christos, the Anointed, as it is there declared. The one that overcometh or conquereth is Cyrus, the Anointed, the Messenger of the Covenant. He constitutes the tree in the midst of the Paradise of God.

Failure of the "Science" of Medicine.

The Daily Press Sustains Medical Men in their Trust; Instances of Harm Resulting from Expert Practice; Modern Faith Cures; the Divine Processes of Healing.

IN HEARST'S CHICAGO AMERICAN of April 20, is a long article by H. S. Canfield. It is a rabid, cantankerous mess of slush, as full of venom as the teeth of a rabid dog are full of virus. While in many respects Hearst's Chicago American is an excellent publication, it looks as if its publisher made more money advocating the cause of the M. D's, than could be made in dealing fairly with every public character. We have no more use for Dowie and his methods than has Mr. Hearst; but when it comes to the consideration of the question of the choice of evils,—Dowie's faith-healing gang or the class of "scientific" (?) medicators denominated M. D's,—the choice might possibly be in favor of the let-a-alone method adopted by the various classes of hypnotists, as "christian scientists," mental scientists, faith healers, etc.

If Mr. Hearst would employ the said Canfield to follow up the M. D's of Chicago and spend his venom on the cases which their scientific and expert methods failed to benefit, and compare the business of the undertakers who follow in the wake of Dowie and of the expert and scientific medical and surgical gentlemen of the great city, his ardor might cool down a little when he comes to discover that occasionally somebody dies under "Regular" treatment.

Mr. Canfield sets himself up as an expert diagnostician and prognosticator of pathology. He says: "There was nothing incurable the matter with the child." How did Mr. C. happen to know so much? "She was taken sick on Sunday week and died at 3:45 o'clock yesterday morning. She could have been saved within forty-eight hours of her death." Had Mr. C. taken her temperature and examined the many other pathological signs of the child's serious illness? This is what he says: "For five days she had little fever and her initial symptoms, judging from the obtainable accounts of them, were not serious." Of course, the obtainable accounts were unquestionably from the enemies of Dowie and the friends of the medical profession, who are his conscienceless and bitter enemies.

"Kindberg," says Mr. C., "is an intelligent man. He belongs distinctly to the upper class of mechanics. His wife mates him. He is sober, industrious, frugal, loving, and devout. He pays his debts, avoids saloons, and cares for his family." If this be all true, his belief is certainly as commendable as thousands who are not sober, industrious, frugal, loving, and devout, who do not pay their debts, who patronize the saloons—and patronize the medical fraternity.

We have something to say regarding the "science" of medicine and surgery as practiced in Chicago and other places. It fell in our way some time ago, to attend a clinic in one of the great hospitals of Chicago. The professional gentleman who was attendant on the clinic, and who performed an operation for appendicitis, is one of the first and most eminent men in the surgical and medical profession in this great city. He passed upon the case after a thorough examination, and under the unerring accuracy of his opinion. Who could doubt the diagnosis of the great surgeon? There were many learned medical men present, besides hundreds of students who were there to learn the science of diagnosis from a man expert in the differentiation of disease and its symptoms, and as skilful in the art of surgery.

The surgeon expatiated for more than an hour, to his class, while cutting through the abdominal walls in search of that inevitable, insinuating, inscrutable, and useless vermiform structure which the Almighty overlooked when he made man in his own image and likeness—with the exception of the vermiform functional nondescript. He left no pathological symptom out of the question in this particular case of appendicitis. He enlarged upon every pathological detail, for he wished to perfect his class in expert diagnosis, as he himself was expert. He cut and talked, and talked and cut, and finally, to the delight of the class, found the location of the intrusive little organ; but lo and behold! there was no inflammation there, and the pus he expected to find was in the abdominal cavity of some other man not before the class. This they call science, and to this kind of science the medical profession would compel all men to bow.

We have now in our community a case of complicated trouble—involving both ears, the mastoid process, and other organs of the head—resulting from an expert (?) attempt of the scientific specialists of Chicago to experiment with this most delicate organ of the human structure—the ear. The gentleman was partially deaf, now he is absolutely so. His total deafness was occasioned by experts. Will not Mr. Canfield furnish the public some of his mighty thunder, in telling it that if this gentleman had let the expert M. D's alone and had gone to Mr. Dowie, where he would have been let alone, his hearing would be at least as perfect as when the experts induced him to submit to their experimental manipulations?

The Lord Jesus healed the sick, and he gave his followers the same right and power. If the Christianity which is in the world today is the same as that of 1900 years ago, then every Christian can claim the same right and the same power that the Christ and his Apostles exercised. But is this that is called Christianity now, the same as in the primitive days of the church? This is the great question. We say emphatically, no! Christianity has fallen; and that which is a pretense of following in the paths of the Lord and his disciples, is a spurious attempt of antichrist to deceive the world. When God sent Moses to deliver the Israelites from their Egyptian bondage, the devil sent his emissaries, the Egyptian Magicians, to withstand him and to counterfeit the miracles which the Lord through Moses would perform. It is the same today; the Lord's works are brought into disrepute by the attempts of these spurious efforts at wonder-working.

There is no question as to the law of mental power in its relation to mind and matter. The facts of psychology and Mesmerism, or hypnotism, are thoroughly established. These laws may be exercised by good and bad men alike. They may be exercised under the names of mental science, christian science, faith cure, or the power of the Holy Spirit; no matter under what name they are exercised, the processes are the same. It is not the power of God any more than the growth of a tree is the power of God. The power for evil is as great as any apparent power for good, through the exercise of these mental forces.

We do not object to Dowie's appropriation of mental and psychical energy to heal and accumulate his millions,—if the reports be true,—but we do object to its being called by the name of divine healing. We believe Dowie to be a great humbug; but let the daily papers treat him as fairly as they do all the other humbugs, and especially that greatest of humbugs—the “science of medicine.”

The Great Antitypical Exodus.

The Relation of Type and Antitype Considered; Striking Parallels Discovered; Modern Egypt and its Plagues; Leadership of the New Moses.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

IN CONSIDERING the relation of type to antitype, it becomes apparent that the latter is prefigured by the former. A type is a prophetic similitude. The figure of speech called simile pertains especially to poetic form. When used in common utterance, it grafts poetic fancies founded in true resemblances upon plain prose. Simile is the reflection in outer spheres of the imaging faculty of Divinity by which God makes man in his own image and likeness. His image is his exterior, the existere or the perfect man,—the will of God, because all the imaginations of his heart are right. Hence a type is not only a prophetic but a poetic similitude expressed in human action. The Hebrew exodus from Egypt foreshadowed the deliverance of God's chosen people from the darkness of error—thick darkness which can be felt—and the body of death, into the glorious liberty of the children of God. The antitypical exodus comes now, at the end of the age.

Moses found two great obstacles to the accomplishment of his mission. His compatriots refused to accept his leadership, and put no faith in his sincerity. “This fellow who was nurtured by the king's daughter is simply looking out for his own interests,” they said. As the people denied Moses' claims, Pharaoh's heart was correspondingly hardened. Again and again the correspondence appears in the narrative, showing reciprocal action between the king's will and the people's will. The children of Israel served Pharaoh because they wanted to serve him, even when their lips cried out against the burdens he imposed. Their hearts turned toward him rather than toward the Man of God. Men are slaves while they consent to serve a taskmaster—no longer.

The appointed leader of the antitypical exodus finds the chosen people in bonds, and the king whom they serve, albeit with murmurs, is gold. All the incidents of the type repeat themselves. The king refuses to let them go; heavier and heavier are the burdens he imposes, but the servants of desire labor on in anguish; they cannot believe that God has sent a guide; they cannot believe that he is able to lead them into the promised land—eternal life.

There are few passages more puzzling to an orthodox believer than the reiterated statement that the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart. Why should the Lord, as it seems, play at cross purposes? Here he is represented as the author of signs intended to force the king to let Israel go, while at the same time he hardens the monarch's will against the very object in view. How explain such a discrepancy? This question has vexed the children of many Christian households—a question which their elders cannot answer. The truth involved is that of the voluntary and involuntary power of Deity, by virtue of which God is at the same time the author of good and evil, peace and discord. It is the principle of reflex action which explains the mystery of the existence of evil.

The British nation has just negotiated three hundred millions of dollars of bonds. Taxation is heavily increased, especially upon sugar, molasses, and coal, just the articles that are most required. As usual the burden is laid upon the common people. Prince Kropotkin made some appalling statements in his recent lectures in Chicago, in regard to what he saw of the terrible labor—worse than convict labor—performed by women and children, working ten hours a day stripped to the waist, in a superheated atmosphere in English factories.

A correspondent writing to an American journal, mentions the hardships borne by the salesgirls of London where the shops are open until seven o'clock, their temperature in winter being arctic, and the wages given rarely exceed six or seven dollars a week. These workers were ordered to buy mourning for the Queen out of their small earnings.

Ah, yes! The antitypical bondage is hard, and men serve base passions and appetites as well as gold. Even the little children turn to suicide for relief; even they are debased by vice. The evasion of the cigarette ordinance, which robs Chicago of over $600,000 in license fees, since there are over 7,000 dealers and only 250 have paid the legal fee of $100, points to an enormous consumption of these poisonous articles by juvenile smokers. What can be expected when women who are supposed to be exponents of refinement set the example! Here is Mrs. Muir, daughter of a New Jersey Senator, sued by a tobacco firm which claims that she bought over 2,000 cigarettes between July 12 and August 14, 1899. Collectively as well as individually man is in bondage. Wall and Lombard streets are the hard taskmasters of every government in the world.

In their going forth the Hebrew people were guided by a pillar of cloud and fire. In symbolical language, a cloud signifies the descent of the doctrine of immortal life into the outer or natural degree. "Behold he cometh with clouds," refers to the ingathering of the spiritual heavens into the Leader of the antitypical exodus. He brings with him the spirits of the just who kindle the fire of theocrasis.

The signs which are also woes are abundantly fulfilled in the antitype. The locusts which destroyed every green thing in the land, represent the falsification of truths relating to immortal life, so that the church has lost the concept of overcoming death in the body. The hail which fell upon the crops and brought famine is appropriately referred to the various forms of error, especially the doctrine of faith without works. The harvest fails and the church hungers for the bread of life, as the wretched inhabitants of India and Russia suffer for natural means of subsistence. These plagues in Egypt came not upon the children of Israel; so in the antitype, those who have been gathered out of all the churches into the spiritual Jerusalem are removed from present disaster into the heavenly spheres waiting to descend.

Now as of old, the chosen people fall under the dominion of fear when evil pursues them as the Egyptian king essayed to overtake his bondslaves. At such moments of weakness they hear the voice of their Leader bidding them to fear not, to stand still and see the salvation of God. When they falter, his clear tones ring out: "Where God is, there is strength. This corruptible shall put on incorruption and this mortal shall put on immortality. The Lord shall fight for ye and ye shall hold your peace. God will have a foeman worthy of his steel. The great money power must be centralized, then, pitted against the power of Almighty God, it will meet defeat."

Now as of old, the appointed Guide obeys the divine mandate: "Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward." To go forward is to hope, to look toward the appearing of the Sons of God, to wait in great patience, to do His commandments, and to trust His might. Progression means an added sense of the dignity and value of the Koreshan work every day, so that no effort toward its accomplishment seems commonplace or of slight importance. All minor service is grand and poetic when it aids a noble cause. Every Koreshan, whatever his line of action, is serving the entire human race.

The wheat and tares must grow together until the harvest. The escape from sin is not immediate and final, but while the elect still wander in the wilderness, the science of the ten commandments is revealed. The Decalogue was first given in the typical exodus, but its scientific content as pertaining to immortal life is the consummate revelation of the antitypical going forth. Through obedience, the called and chosen may enter the promised land where there shall be no more curse,—no bitter regret: "When I would do good evil is present with me."

The Christian dispensation or age was a typical one of all ages, and Jesus the Lord was the integral and representative organism of that age. He was the embodiment not only of the representative thought of the age, but of the personality also. The thought being representative and integral, was ready to be communicated to the world. For what purpose? That it might pass to dissolution according to the law of development, and multiply and produce in the race more integral men, that at the end of the cycle or age, the time of harvest, there may be not simply a resurrection of the thoughts in many men, but that the many men in whom the thoughts were planted may themselves stand forth on a higher plane at the harvest time, as the resurrected (reincarnated) forms in whom the resurrected words may dwell.

The modern church will not confess to the world that its teachings are false. The fact remains conspicuously apparent, nevertheless, that modern Christianity is a flagrant departure from the doctrine and life of the Lord; and there does not remain a single feature of either life or doctrine, by which the modern church could be identified as the Christian system established by Jesus, and built upon the foundations of the Patriarchs and the Apostles.

No other general form can mature as the divine government in the earth, than that typified by the microcosmic archetype—the male and female structures as unified in the integral being, such as existed in the beginning before the segregation of the Adam and the manifestation of the disintegral forms—the distinctive male and female.

Nations Face a World-Dilemma.

Brigandage Prevails Throughout the World of Commerce; all Lines of Business Overrun by Banditti; the Prophecy of Order in the Thickening Chaos.

AMANDA T. POTTER.

BRIGANDAGE, the one problem remaining in Luzon since the surrender of Aguinaldo, is also the one problem exercising the minds of the thinkers in the ranks of the bread-winning population. These do not pronounce the terms brigand and bandit; with them it is the firm, the company, the corporation, the trust. The big brigands are the J. Pierpont Morgans, with a monotony of gradation down to the pop-corn vender or the shoe-string peddler whose small advance upon cost—a growing imposition upon his customer—furnishes him a retainer upon existence.

Per report, it will require the presence of 25,000 men to hold somewhere within bounds the pillaging and murderous proclivities of the tutored and untutored Filipino. The inclination to this style of outlawry has been fostered, so says the press, by the government of a civilized and Christian nation—the Spanish, which permitted its officials to give these depredators their freedom for a purchase price. Well, are the brief period of terror and the sharp cry which follows the assassin's knife wielded in the darkness, more unfriendly to human weal than some years haunted by the specter of want, followed by the inevitable cut-short which follows continuous deprivation?

A recent case cited is of a Filipino bandit who, from Spanish functionaries, had thrice eluded punishment by appropriating a certain sum to the purchase of his freedom. In fine, he had shared his plunder with those who thus gave him liberty to plunder again. His fourth arrest was by the officials of Uncle Sam. The bandit treated his detention as a good joke, and proceeded to negotiate with his guard for an escape. Repulsed, he advanced upon the captain, multiplying the sum of his former proffer, $1,000, by ten. It ended in his becoming a dangle at the end of a manilla rope.

So have we embarked in the business of adjusting the affairs of the Robin Hoods and Dick Turpins of our far away province, while at home we dwell in a riot of outlawry upon the principles, teachings, and practices of the MAN whom the respectability of the land profess to worship. Dr. G. D. Herron utters the truth when he declares that the so called Christian church has fought its way by brute force and authority; and that that which was atheism to Jesus has been orthodoxy to the church; that Christianity does not even know or believe the gospel of Jesus.

The pulpits of the nations are not awake to the dilemma they face. The religion of a nation is the exponent of its conception of the character of the supreme principles of existence; and the quality of the application of such conception to the daily walk, is the mirror of the impression of its relationship to these supreme principles, and of the relationship of man to man. If the religion of a nation does not furnish just incentive to governmental power and to vivid activity, woe to the pulpit! woe to the nation! for "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." If the pulpit of the nation makes itself into a bulwark of those principles which create unrest, poverty, and crime, it is but woe to the pulpit! woe to the nation! and if the world be component of such nations, then woe to the world! for "Behold, I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW."

Illness appeals from its pain to a healthier brain and steadier nerve; the slave cries out but supports his bonds until a stronger, wiser hand strikes his fetters off. But men may not successfully turn to such as Professor George D. Herron to remove their manacles. Unless he change his views upon "individual freedom," he will prove only an iconoclastic factor, not a builder, in an epoch of dead Christianity wherein rules the atheism of which he truthfully speaks. However, individual freedom fails to convey the Professor's meaning. He fails to appreciate the vitality of the term he employs as much as he fails to perceive the non-vitality of the term which he should employ: We see today but the divided man, the man from whom the woman has been taken—the vidual, a being quite unprepared for individual freedom. The individual is the undivided, the perfect man—the Bridegroom within whom is the Bride even the Father-Mother God.

In the thickening chaos is the prophecy of order, the prophecy of an anthropostic structural government, the opposite of the old heavens and the old earth which shall pass away. And who will the builder be? and by whom appointed? If the world loved the principles of the Eternal Builder, it would have recognized his Messenger upon his declaration. It would not need that recognition be thrust upon it through the distresses which must propel it into acceptance. The God-appointed man, the "angel standing in the sun," or the man in a state of illumination, bends his gaze upon the skies. He sees in the central sun and its emanating moon, planets, and stars, the facsimile of which God (as the anthropological central Sun, surrounded by his emanations or offspring, the Sons of God) is the prototype. In his observation of the central sun and its attendant luminaries, he sees that all lesser lights are directed in their orbits by the great central light, and that to this obedience to central direction is due the harmony of the cosmos. Through such knowledge he is able to declare that when God's kingdom is come in the earth, the divine government will proceed upon the basis of the order and harmony mirrored in the physical heavens.

Upon the basis of this science and certainty he has planted just where the Christ taught his disciples to pray for his kingdom to come—in earth, the beginning of the divine government. The filaments of its roots are in the infancy of expansion; but they will amplify, and extend, and become the mighty sustaining power of the plant which shall include the whole angelic heavens, and the Son of God resurrected in the Sons of his divine begetting—the 144,000 Sons of God.

In the Editorial Perspective.

LUCIE PAGE BORDEN.

A SCRUTINY of current literature including the daily newspaper, the monthly magazine, and the successful novel shows that it is pervaded to a very large extent by a new spirit. There is a growing realization of conditions that must be characterized as wide and startling enough to warrant the conclusion that the world is awakening from the sleep of ages. This realization is not confined to the organs of discontent, such as the socialist and anarchist publications. It has been slow to come, but it is the most hopeful sign of advancement. It is occasionally found among the advocates of orthodox religion, though they are for the most part, wrapped in slumber. A large contingent of society, being now more on the alert, has begun to observe, to compile statistics, to draw deductions, and to present these facts and inferences to others. A humiliating conviction of failure, strong enough to force an open confession of fault from representatives of many classes and orders is encouraging. No man is ready to set his will firmly in the direction of improvement until he has a deep and wholesome sense of his faults. The failure of Christianity, of education, of sociology, of science, and of civilization as a whole, is acknowledged, not merely by a few restless pessimists but by dispassionate observers. The time of a partial awakening has come. What is the cause of this awakening, and what will be its result? In the old fairy tale which has delighted children and poets, the princess fell asleep and all around slept with her. So the world fell into an age-long sleep and lost the sense of its real condition, as it lost truth. But a love strong enough and brave enough to break through thorn hedges of tradition and persecution and superstition has come once more to find it. At the touch and the breath of divine love the world is awakening. For over thirty years society has been under a new influence. It has received an influx from a source which it is not yet ready to acknowledge. It does not realize the mighty power that sustains Koreshanity, but it will recognize the new force. Here is the cause of the change that is beginning. The result of this awakening will be an immediate demand for help and guidance. Where is the Leader with God's truth? There are plenty of claimants urging half way measures. In trying these, some men have already found out the awful facts of present life. Some who entered the service of charity and reform with zeal are convinced that such movements are inadequate in view of the vitiation of the human mass. Practical experience has taught them that the world is blacker than it is painted by fanatics and pessimists. Figures and statistics compel belief. Intense pain must follow a distinct realization of failure. A new order cannot come into being without travail. Strictures upon society and religion fill the pages of what is termed light literature, and the gravity of the situation is strongly felt. This awakening is not unto joy but unto sorrow. Nevertheless, it is true that those who mourn are blessed, for they shall be comforted. Confession of failure, grief for the world, and disappointment in all the measures of reform proposed are going to lead men to accept God's plans. No one is willing to let God take care of the world until he has discovered that God is wiser than himself—wiser than all the reformers in all lines of thought.

The root of a tree is that portion which strikes down into the soil and draws up nutriment for growth. The health of the vegetable organism depends upon the depth and vitality of the root. If the love of money is the root of all evil, and the love of self is the great element of opposition to the first commandment, then self-love or the life of sense enjoyment must derive its food from this root. During the past week the national bank at Vancouver, Wash., has been wrecked. The president and the cashier, overtaken by disgrace, were too cowardly to meet the consequences of their fault. Both resorted to suicide. They were partners in guilt and in death; the same revolver served to end, as they hoped, the keenness of remorse for both, when their frauds were discovered and they were charged with robbing friends and fellow townsmen of eighty-one thousand dollars. For nine years they had concealed their deficiencies by means of false entries and false reports of the bank's condition to the comptroller of the currency—a long course of deceit. When Jesus was here, he went into the temple at Jerusalem and found its outer courts crowded with money-changers. Their business was a legitimate one in the eyes of the people, for it was immediately connected with the temple service. There the animals which the Jewish law appointed for sacrifice were bought and sold. It was a convenience to those who wished to make an offering to God. But the money-changers and the traffickers were all working for gain with no thought of worship, which is love to God. The odor of self-love polluted the whole place; no savor of incense could drown it. Jesus made a whip of small cords and drove them all from the holy precincts. That which was done in the type must be fulfilled in the antitype. The money-changers must be driven out of the temple of God. The will must be purified before any portion of humanity can come into unity with Divinity. The outer courts are the natural mind, which is enmity against God. Nothing but scourging will drive out the natural thoughts and desires which turn toward the world, so the Lord scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. The whip of small cords in the hand of the Lord is remorse. This is the sting of the old serpent,—the love of money. Remorse means to bite again, and its root is cognate with that of death. If the root decays the whole tree must die. If the love of money is the root of evil in the heart, then man is mortal or in a state of corruption until a higher love has replaced it. In the present instance, the desire to escape remorse drove the two culprits to seek refuge from it in the world of spirits. Mistaken hope! An angel with a whip of small cords stands upon the threshold of the subjective sphere. Remorse is there and mortality is there.

The excommunication of Count Leo Tolstoi by the Greek church, the subsequent report that the Czar would intercede for a reversal of the articles, and the later news that the Count has been banished from Russia by the imperial order, make him a prominent figure. The world calls him a great philosopher, a prophet, a philanthropist, and a communist. How does he conform to these titles judged by Koreshan standards? A philosopher is one who is in the love of wisdom,—one who has discernment to accept and teach the highest truth. Tolstoi's interpretation of the Bible and his interpretation of life are both below the standard. He neither loves, accepts, nor teaches the doctrine of the recurrent manifestation of Deity in humanity. He speaks of God as "that All which I just touch and which I experience in the form of love." He cannot be a prophet, else he would be illuminated by the light of truth into the doctrine of immortal life. His own confession and his own words show that he has reached no degree of certainty on this point. In a recent leaflet quoted by Ernest Crosby in the Arena, Tolstoi writes: "As to the question about what awaits us after death, I would answer by the conjecture that the will of Him who called us into this life for our welfare leads us somewhere through death—probably for the same purpose." Does a great prophet deal in conjectures? Are these the words of a clear, bold thinker—one who knows? How can this man who is groping in the dark himself, guide the world with his religion? The title of his book, "My Religion," is a misnomer for he has no conception of the reunion of man and God. Neither is Tolstoi a true philanthropist. He is more occupied with the idea of putting himself upon the level of the peasants and presenting the edifying spectacle of a Russian nobleman cobbling shoes in a blouse, than he is in lifting the peasant to a richer life of culture and beauty. A true love for man would lead him to understand and to advocate such a system of communism as Jesus instituted. Judged by Koreshan standards, Tolstoi does not merit the name of Communist, for he lacks the idea of baptism from the Messianic personality as an essential preparation for any scientific phase of communistic life. Communism depends upon the Messianic function.

It is now many years since the Founder of Koreshan Science predicted that Chicago would become the commercial center of the world. Some were inclined to question his judgment which is now confirmed by an important event of the past week. Chicago has become an ocean-port. The first steamer left her docks en route for Europe, via the great lakes and the St. Lawrence river, which afford an excellent outlet to the sea. With her central position and the advantage of such a waterway to the coast, the commercial possibilities of the city are magnificent. The grain tribute of the middle and northern states already pours into her markets. Why should the wickedest city in the world, as it is called, have one of the grandest destinies? On the principle that the limit being reached, a change of direction ensues.

The work of Kant has been considered the masterpiece of German philosophy. Contemporary thought has passed judgment upon itself and upon him in the following sentence from a German scientist: "Kant has subjected pure reason to a thorough and exhaustive criticism, and the conclusions of his masterly work may be summed up in the sentence, there are no eternal truths." What an exposure of the state of the human mind! What a satire upon what is called knowledge! That a book entitled a "Critique of Pure Reason" should reach such conclusions, and the verdict of posterity should pronounce it a masterly work! No eternal truths? Then the physical universe is but a fortuitous combination of atoms, life is a jest, pain a mockery, and there is no God. There are but two alternatives, law or chaos.

Richard Mansfield and Sir Henry Irving are calling for an endowed theater. All the arts should be under the protection and support of the state. The function of dramatic art is to furnish enjoyment, to correct morality, and to raise the standard of taste. It falls short of accomplishing these ends. Prices of admission are so high that only the wealthy are able to allow themselves the diversion of theater and opera. The state ought to afford such means of culture to the whole people. Competition and centralization in commerce reappear in the star system on the stage. A polished setting brings out the luster of the gem. A great actor gains advantage from a good support. Each member of the company should be perfect in his own part.

Looking backward is a characteristic of the times which the world cannot explain. The drama goes back to Shakespeare and the Greek tragedians. Too much attention to the masters of the past is the cause alleged for "dead weight hung upon the walls in art's name," at the last exhibit of associated artists in Paris. In literature former canons of taste are asserted. The models of the past have had their day; let them go. Koreshans are looking forward to all things new; to achievements of beauty and power that will realize the dreams of all the seers; to a time when "art for art's sake" will be forgotten as a pagan phrase, replaced by "art for man's sake,—for love's sake.

If God is the light of the world, if he is omnipresent in the orthodox sense, if he is all in all, upon what principle are the alternations of day and night with their corresponding dark epochs in human history to be explained? Is it not more reasonable to believe that there are periods when God is not manifest in the outer degree? There are times when the light is not visible, just as the seed is not visible in the cycle of plant life when it is planted in the ground.

Friendship is a lost art because the genuine bond of unity is religious, and in matters of religion now, no two people seem to agree as touching anything.

Appreciation is a preservative element like salt. It keeps men well and happy in the performance of duty.

Truth is eternal in the inner realm whither it recedes from man's consciousness at regular intervals.

When tradition rules, mediocrity prevails.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY KORESH.

Dreams and Astral Projections.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—(1) Will you kindly explain what dreams are; what they signify, and what their importance was in ancient times, spoken of so often in the Bible? (2) I have read somewhere that the Koreshan colors are red, green, and gold. What do they signify, and in what order do they come? (3) The leaders of the sect called Theosophy claim that they can leave the body, and, when in this state, are able to see the unseen world, as they call it. Will you kindly explain this phenomenon? Is it only a fancy of the brain, or is it fallacy?—W. B., Minneapolis, Minn.

(1) Dreams of the higher, and therefore of the important, order are the projections of the past into the mentality of the present. All things in the universe repeat themselves in their proper order; and dreams—like visions—are often the observation of the future by a repetition of the things of the past. They are produced by the activity of spiritual entities in the brain and body. They are not so reliable as determining warnings or directions as they were in the past, because they belong to the inspirational order of mentality, and this is directly opposed to the state of illumination.

The Apostles of the Lord were inspired men. Men today should not be inspired, but illuminated; that is, enlightened. Inspiration now is a dangerous and uncertain guide. This is because inspiration in this age of the world is a counterfeit by the devil, of the inspirations from the Lord in ancient times.

(2) An explanation of the Koreshan colors, red, green, and gold, may be found in THE FLAMING SWORD of April, 1897, a copy of which will be sent to you with this issue. (3) The phenomenon of the projection of the astral body is a vagary of ignorance. The fact concerning the phenomenon of what is called the projection of the astral, is scientifically explained in Koreshanity. If we take a violin string and stretch it tautly across one corner of a room and stretch another across the opposite corner, drawing both to the same tension, and vibrate one string, the other will respond to the vibration. The responding chord does not vibrate because the air in the room is acted upon and moved. The vibration of one string in response to the first vibration, is caused by the energy of sound which is produced by the destruction of the particles of atmosphere which the string strikes in vibration. The agitation of the particles of oxygen and nitrogen composing the atmosphere destroys the atoms and converts them to energy. This energy radiates in all directions, but vibrates a chord in one direction only, because there is but one chord in unison.

In the case of what is denominated astral projection, there is a vibration of one or more brain cells in one person, and where there is another brain or brain center keyed to the same tension, there is a responding vibration, and the two persons see each other, or see the things which belong to the interiors of these two mental spheres.

Cosmic Changes and Cataclysms.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—You state that in the course of a 24,000 year cycle, the relations between the plane of the equator and the plane of the ecliptic change at least three times, being respectively at right angles, forty-five degrees, twenty-three plus degrees, and at last coincident, or in conjunction. Will you kindly answer the following queries?

(1) What is it that shifts when the two planes change their relations,—the plane of the equator, that of the ecliptic, or something else? (2) How does such a change affect the position of Polaris and other fixed stars with respect to a fixed point on earth, say Chicago? (3) How does each of these conditions affect the climate, social conditions, and habitable surface of the earth; that is, when the two planes are at right angles, when they are separated 45°, and when they are coincident? The 23½ degree angle we already understand.—E. W., Lakeside, Calif.

We teach that once in about twelve thousand years, the plane of the ecliptic changes one twelfth of the coluric cycle; that it takes about 144,000 years for the movement of this plane on the colure to complete itself. The cause of this change is the heaping up of electro-magnetic force in the pole of the axis of this plane, north, and in the annulus of this axis, south. It is the force of electro-magnetic attraction and repulsion. The details of the phenomenon are too complex and voluminous for an article here.

(1) It is the angle of the sun's course through the twelve signs on the earth in relation to the equatorial circle which shifts, when the plane of the ecliptic changes its obliquity. (2) Such a change in the ecliptic will change all astronomical relations.

(2) There will be a radical revolution in climatic conditions. The frigid area will be extended in the next change, and the torrid zone will become temperate; for in the next change in the obliquity of the ecliptic, the sun will become a ring or annulus, and there will be no night—thus literally fulfilling the Scriptures. When the plane of the ecliptic was at right angles to the equator, the torrid zone was on the equinoctial colure, through what is now the north and south poles. The movement of the plane of the ecliptic suddenly changed the climate, and the animal and vegetable life of the torrid zone became extinct, the remains of which, at this day, declare and confirm the catastrophe.

Relation of Man and Cosmos.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—I think the Koreshan principle which defines the analogy between the physical world (macrocosm) and the anthropic (man) is very beautiful, and I would ask you to explain, briefly, the correspondence between the two. Please point out specifically how the sun, moon, the shell of the cosmos, the atmospheres, etc., as KORESH defines them, have their corresponding organs in man.—G. C., Denver, Colo.

This question has been answered so often in the literature of the Guiding Star Pub. House, that if not understood, it would almost seem a hopeless task to further elucidate the subject; but among the other virtues which every teacher may possess, patience and perseverance should actuate his motives; hence we will again attempt to add perspicuity to the fund of our effort.

The sun is the light of the physical cosmos; the intellect is the light of the man. Intellectual light is the correspondent of physical light. We often employ the phrase, Mr.— or Mrs.— is a very intellectual person. We mean that the mind is bright, shining, full of lumin (light); that it has wisdom, knowledge, etc. The enlightened mind is full of understanding; such a mind is illuminated. Now, certain portions of the brain are specifically light or intellectual centers, and these collectively comprise the organs which correspond to the sun; certain other brain centers are reflective; these correspond to the moon.

There are two great general principles of mental operation; these are the affectional and the intellectual. When considered in this general relation, the affectional or love principle corresponds to the sun, the intellectual to the moon. This general application, however, is inversely appropriate. There is a specific correspondence between the sun and the human lungs, and between the moon and the human liver. There is in the body the solar plexus, which is the correspondent in function to some of the functions of the sun of the physical cosmos; so also with the semi-lunar plexus and the functions of the moon.

The study of these correspondences requires a thorough knowledge of anatomy and physiology, which is not quite within the sphere of the ordinary mind.

Cause of Ocean Currents.

EDITOR FLAMING SWORD:—Will you kindly explain through your medium, THE FLAMING SWORD, how your theory accounts for the ocean current or the Gulf Stream? Your prompt attention to the above request will be appreciated by yours respectfully, I. C. B., Beaver, Pa.

This question has been repeatedly answered in the Koreshan literature; but briefly, it is caused by electro-magnetic and caloric and crucic energies in co-operation. It is caused by the alternate expansion and contraction of the fluids, solids, and ethers of the cosmos. It is affected by the action of the sun in his motion through his Zodiacal course on the ecliptic.

The Illuminati of the East.

Theosophy's Shadowy Source of Light; the Downward Curve of the Arc of Progress.

EDITOR Morning Star:—I hope you will permit me to say a few words in regard to the conflict of views between the so called "Adepts" of India and myself. In the first place, I deny that there are any spiritual Adepts in the East today. The Adepts, Masters, Gurus, and Mahatmas that are supposed to be swaying the destinies of the world from some inaccessible abode in the Himalayas, or other parts of Asia, are simply creatures of Madame Blavatsky's fertile brain, and have no bodily existence on this earth. Show me one out of all the Swamis who have visited this country, who evinces any spiritual illumination, or knowledge of the stupendous changes through which the race and the world are today passing. Not one.

Mental power—no matter how great it may be—is not spiritual illumination. The teachers from India, who have since the World's Fair been engaged in promulgating their doctrines are, with all their recognized ability, "suckled in a creed outworn"—and their philosophy has little or nothing to do with the progressive thought of the Western world. They are not fronting the future; they stand with their faces to the past. And when their philosophy is susceptible of application to the conditions of mankind today, they are incapable of making the application. It may be said of them as of the Christian ministry, they live in the letter—on the surface of things—and are not able to penetrate beneath, and grasp the deeper spiritual truths that lie concealed beneath the doctrines they are expounding.

The evolutionary wave of life and light that at one time illuminated the minds of the priests of India has long since left the East, and is concentrating its forces in the West. It is here in this "new world that is old," that the Deific forces are at work—pressing in upon the souls of men and women truths necessary to their salvation and that of the race; it is here where the veil of Isis is being lifted, and not in the semi-paralyzed effete East.

I do not deny that there are Adepts on the physical plane in India, who perform wonderful things through a knowledge of certain occult laws; Jacolliot, in his work on "Occult Science in India," clearly demonstrates that, but such powers are at the expense of physical and mental development and the spiritual forces of the soul. Not from the brotherhoods of India or Egypt are we to look for spiritual illumination and guidance. The civilized world is today on the downward curve of the arc of progress, and not on the ascending arc, as taught by the Adepts of certain brotherhoods. We are on the downward move, because we are in the "last days" of "this generation," or dispensation, and this old order must die and is dying, ere the new age of a higher life can be evolved.

In this special movement of evolving life we stand where the race stood at the time of its fall, when the first great cycle of human life was nearing its completion. The arc of the circle has approached the point corresponding to the crucial point of that momentous period in human history. Today, we are witnessing the fall of this great republic, and the civilization which it epitomizes. Day by day the nation is swerving more and more from the path of progress, and deeper is it sinking into moral turpitude, and political corruption of the grossest kind. With every evolving year we are breeding degenerates, men and women in whom the moral sense is dead.

The republic has become an empire; here Roman history is repeating itself; the next and inevitable step is the creation of a standing army of constantly increasing power and numbers, for the carrying out of the imperialistic policy. Autocracy at home, the affairs of the nation administered by a privileged class, through the pliant complicity of a willing instrument in the presidential chair, has its correlative in imperialism and militarism. These are all steps downward in national life—and this retrogressive movement of the nation is the result of the growing demoralization of the people.

Excess of evils will at last produce a violent reaction; then will come the struggle between life and death, between the constructive and destructive forces of Nature, as they are expressed in civilized life; the struggle between a decadent order still in all its material splendor, and an incoming new one that is to shape and direct the progress of mankind. When the storm is over and the new order displaces the old, we will be on the ascending arc of progress, and will stand in the spiral movement of evolutionary life, where the race stood prior to the Fall, in the Paradisiacal state of heaven on earth, in which a fall will no longer be possible. With the new cycle all things will become new.—IMOGENE C. FALES, in Morning Star.

Barbarism of Civilization.

Character of the Powers Revealed through the Atrocities Committed by the Allied forces at Peking.

Seven or eight civilized nations—the most enlightened on the earth—have gathered round the Chinese capital, and during the last nine months of their work in China, they have done much to their

Lecture by Koresh.

The Founder of Koreshanity will deliver a Lecture on Koreshan Universology, Sunday, 3:30 p. m., May 5, 1901, at Koreshan Hall, 4th floor, 315-19 Englewood ave., Chicago.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in advanced thought.

credit for which they have to answer to the spirit of civilization and humanity. Modern histories, written mostly by men who were never under the influence of Mars on the field, and whose historical genius developed under the soft influences of Venus, Mercury, and Jupiter, contained severe strictures on the barbarities and horrors committed by the earlier nations in their various wars, and they made the world believe by their power of composition and logic, that such "horrors, which were the disgrace of humanity," could never be perpetrated in the battles of modern nations. They have been most deplorably disappointed, and their voices have been thoroughly drowned by the horrors of modern war. The London Globe publishes in its issue of the 13th November last, some events of war, supplied to it by a Belgian gentleman. He says:

"The scenes I have witnessed during the three days * * are horrible beyond the powers of description. It is the closing tableau of a fearful human tragedy.

Two thousand were deliberately drowned at Moraxo, 2,000 at Rabe, and 8,000 around Blagovetchensk; a total of 12,000 corpses innumerable the river, among which were thousands of women and children."

The same writer observes later on thus: "Last week a boat had to plow her way through a tangled and mangled mass of corpses lashed together by their long hair. The banks were literally covered with corpses. * * From Blagovetchensk to Algun, 45 kil, numerous villages formerly studded the banks with a thriving industrious population of over 100,000. That of Algun was 20,000. No one will ever know the number of those who perished by shot, sword, and stream. Not a village is left."

"This" says the Progressive Thinker of San Francisco, "is the result of trying to force Christian civilization on an unwilling people. If there is a God of mercy, without regard to name or attributes, should he not stay such slaughter"?

In McClure's Magazine for November, Mrs. Lowry publishes some notes. She is a missionary, and her picture is underdrawn in regard to truth, rather than overdrawn. The Germans on the Chinese walls shot eight or nine Chinese on June 15, by way of comic target practice. Baron Kettler was murdered on June 20, five days later, but the enlightened nations were horrified at the murder. She says that after the German's murder, finding it unsafe, the whole party wanted to pass on to the Legations. "There were 70 foreigners and about five hundred so called Chinese Christian converts. As they passed over the intervening distance between their compound and the Legation quarters, they met with no opposition. Not a shot was fired, nor a stone thrown, although five days before the German soldiers had been shooting Chinese for amusement."

The Bremen Times for November 1, says: "Sixty-eight captives, some of them not yet grown, were tied together by their pigtails and massacred." We have seen the German Emperor swearing to give no quarter to the fallen Chinese. It is simple nonsense to think that modern warfare is conducted on enlightened principles. The enlightenment consists in the perfection of more deadly weapons, and not in the putting down of the worst human passions. The Chinese butcheries seem to have few parallels in ancient or modern history. Burning villages, deporting women and children, massacring inoffensive people, shooting at people for comic target practice, tying them by their long pigtails and shooting them or drowning them in wholesale numbers, talking one thing and doing another, all these and more, if they can be called the products of civilization and enlightenment, the less nations have of it the better we believe it would be for them.—Astrological Magazine, Madras, India.

Approaching End of the Age.

What it Means and What it Brings; the New Order and its Economic Freedom.

There is every evidence apparent now, that we are completing a great cycle period such as comes once about every thousand years. The present condition of the world and the character of the approaching crisis; the recent wars and rumors of wars—the wars of the American Republic with Spain, and the unjust war of England in South Africa; the dying of millions in India in the midst of plenty, and the trouble of the nations in China, are all of a character that point to a general breaking up. * * And to the student of history who sees the proportions of the now rapidly approaching, world-wide conflict between labor and capital, and the still more terrible religious war that will be precipitated in this—to the student of the affairs of men and nations, all this is sufficient evidence of a revolutionary breaking up that in all ages has attended the closing of one and the opening of another great cyclic period of the world's progress.

If we admit the certainty or even probability of a great cataclysm, and a consequent transitional period such as we have alluded to, the inquiring mind is at once eager to know what, concretely, will be the definite and significant lines marking such transitional period. To the student who has gone beneath the surface in the study not only of prophecy, but as well the psychological and sociological influences at work upon human life on this planet, there are at least three tremendous occurrences that will mark this time, and wield their far-reaching influences upon the destiny of man. The first of these is the long-predicted labor war or struggle between the hosts of labor and the power of capital; second, the long predicted and final conflict between the two great divisions of the Christian religious world. As God was not in the earthquake, nor the whirlwind that passed before Elijah, but in the still small voice that followed, so in the last analysis God will not be in either of these destructive expressions, but rather in the constructive work that will follow when the storm has passed. Third, the gathering together of a prepared people somewhere on the globe for the establishment of a New Order of things adequate to the world's needs in the twentieth century.

The gathering of the Pilgrims from England and the Huguenots from France on the shores of the New World preparatory to the birth of this Republic, was such a gathering of a prepared people. There is near at hand another gathering for even a greater task. We may not be able to predict anything like all or even the most significant thing that will be accomplished, as it may appear to succeeding generations, but there are at least two things that we may even now predict with a reasonable certainty will be accomplished in this transition: First, THE EQUALITY OF MAN AND WOMAN IN ALL THE RELATIONSHIPS AND WORK OF LIFE, AND SECOND, ECONOMIC FREEDOM; these henceforth will be recognized facts in all future social organic life.—Forward Movement Herald.

America Needs Cranks.

Poultney Bigelow Advocates an Epidemic of Cranks in the Republic to Save it from Ruin.

Mr. Poultney Bigelow, who has just returned to London after delivering a course of lectures at Harvard and Yale, declares that America is heading toward revolution. He says:

"Commercialism is running riot in the United States. The Yankees are coining their ideas and energies into money, the trust-builders are doing the rest. These money-kings necessarily exercise a blighting influence on the morals of public servants; they create all manner of temptations and breed all manner of jobbery.

"In Washington I found cynical contempt for the Constitution. Corruption stalks through the Government. It disgraces the halls of Congress, which are little more than a brokerage shop for the sale of authority to fleece the people. Legislators, department officials, and petty public servants of all kinds neglect no opportunity to turn their official prerogatives to profit.

"I learned many specific instances of flagrant jobbery, especially in connection with the Philippine war. There are a thousand officials who owe it stealings—ranging from very small to very large amounts. They don't want the struggle to come to an end. They would much prefer to see it indefinitely prolonged.

"Of course, I shouldn't think of reflecting upon men like Messrs. Hay and Taft; but if Mr. Hay were the angel Gabriel, and Mr. Taft St. Peter come to earth, they couldn't stop the complex, far-reaching system of thievery which prevails in the public service.

"President Hadley, I see, denies that he said that a continuance of present tendencies would land an Emperor in Washington in 25 years. I don't see why he should desire to deny such a statement. We would better have an Emperor—some one to take a firm stand against the rising tide of official immortality—than to have rulers who have no interest in the Government beyond the outcome of the next election. I had rather live under Emperor William than under the vicious tyranny of railway, oil, and steel kings.

"America needs a thorough arousing of the public conscience. She needs to deliver her from the slavery of capitalism, such men and women as delivered her from slavery of human beings. In other words, she needs an epidemic of cranks—cranks like Garrison; cranks such as England had in Cobden and Bright."—Baltimore News.

The Stewardship of Wealth.

Great Questions for the Wealthy to Answer, and for the Masses to Study.

People are either amused, instructed, or disgusted as they read the opinions of the rich, expressed in symposiums, or otherwise, relating to the disposition of their wealth. As labor, and only labor, creates wealth, a far more interesting question to the public at large, and particularly to the creators of wealth, would be, how are great fortunes obtained nowadays in the United States?

A symposium along such a line of statement, dealing with the subject truthfully, would be of startling interest to the country, and would be a contribution to the sum total of the world's knowledge of human depravity under the auspices of Christian civilization, which would unravel all the entanglements in which the woeful conditions of humanity are now involved.

Occasionally, attempts are made to elucidate the intricate question, and some headway has been made; but for all practical purposes, it is not known that anything of advantage has been secured to society. On the contrary, the more clearly the facts have been stated, the more defiant, aggressive, and insolent have been the methods adopted for the consolidation of wealth in the hands of the few, and the wider and more distressing has become the domain of poverty, until there is a prevailing opinion in the minds of a large majority of the people, that all great fortunes are chargeable with a predominating element of fraud, advancing from the beginning to downright piracy of enormous atrocity, around which the government has thrown, in various ways, its protection. Under such conditions it is supreme folly to suppose the rich will make statements concerning the origin of their wealth, or their methods for its accumulation; and, moreover, they will brook no investigation concerning such matters.

As a result, those who investigate honestly, find the country full of unrest. The great mass of the people, especially working people, amidst all the uproar about prosperity and improved conditions, realize that they are the victims of numerous schemes concocted and perfected for the purpose of robbing and debasing them, which they are ceaselessly trying to overcome by organization and strikes, totally oblivious of the fact that capitalism, having absolute control of all the means of production—mills, mines, machinery, tools, and money, are as much delighted with their struggles as a spider when it sees a fly struggling to extricate itself from the meshes of the net constructed for its capture. True it is, that the blue-tailed flies might, by a united effort, destroy the net; but instead of this, on election day, the flies, by a large majority, vote the spider ticket, and thus perpetuate the power of their enemies.—Social Democratic Herald.

Man and the Machine.

How the Machine Displaces the Laborer without Saving Labor.

The term, "labor-saving machine," has been from the first a misnomer; "labor-displacing machine" more exactly expresses the mission of machinery. The term "labor" always means human effort in the exercise of muscular strength. There is just so much labor to be performed. If it is done by machinery, labor is not "saved," laborers are simply displaced, and become idle. A certain number of laborers are required to superintend the machines. This done, those who are displaced are necessarily idle, unless they can find employment in lines of work not invaded by the machine. This is often impossible, and enforced idleness is the result.

The machine has come to stay, and will multiply in response to every demand. Laborers are also here to stay, and they multiply regardless of demand. There is not only an immense domestic production of laborers, but they come by the thousands from every quarter of the earth. If we had only our home markets to supply, they would be glutted continually, as is often the case for periods more or less extended, when the ranks of the idle are swelled to dangerous proportions. The industrial activity which is now the boast is in a large measure attributable to the export demand for our wares. But foreign markets are beyond our control, and our export business may collapse at any time, as in the case of Russia, when a decree, soon to take effect, will reduce exports fully $30,000,000 a year, which emphasizes the fact that foreign markets are uncertain. Independent, however, of such contingencies, industrial conditions are full of alarm. The steadily increasing number of the unemployed bodes evil—and that continually.—Social Democratic Herald.

Twentieth Century Wraps.

These novel Wraps are becoming very popular, and the demand for them still continues. They are made of Shetland floss, hand-crocheted by our own people, and are light, airy, and beautiful.

The Wraps are circular in form and are suitable for both shoulder and head-wear. When folded through the center and thrown around the shoulders, the upper half can be turned up over the head and so arranged as to form a most graceful drapery, becoming to any face. Made in all colors. The purling or edge may be made of the same color as the body of Wrap, or any other shade to harmonize, as the taste suggests. The silk-edged ones are very popular.

THE CELLULAR COSMOGONY

Founded by Koresh (Dr. Cyrus R. Teed),
A. D. 1870.

THE EARTH is a stationary Concave Cell, about 8,000 miles in diameter, with people, Sun, Moon, Planets, and Stars on the inside, the whole constituting the only physical Universe in existence. It is an Alchemico-Organic Structure, a Gigantic Electro-Magnetic Battery, the Central Sun being the Positive Pole, and the Earth constituting the Negative Elements of the Cell. The Universe involves the functions of its own perpetuity, and is Eternal. All Life is Cellular—within the cell; we inhabit the Earth. KORESHAN COSMOGONY comports with all facts of Astronomical, Geographical, Geological, and Alchemical research, and International Geodetic Survey, Experimentation and Navigation. It interprets all Ancient Legends, Mythologies, and Bibles, and furnishes the basis of all Reason and Science, the premise of the true Theology, and the pattern of the new order of Human Society.
